LIFE IN KHARTOUM.

For Well-to-Do Folks It Has Numerous Attractions.

Somehow or other, one always associates life in the Soudan with something decidedly unpleasant, but the following little glimpse of a day at Khartoum does not even hint at any disagreeable phases. The day is divided into five stages. First stage starts between 5 and 6 o'clock a. m., and consists of a ride out into the desert. The next stage, beginning after bath and breakfast, is, for the men, work in their offices or barracks, and, for the women, household duties. There is no shopping for them to do. That must be left to the servants (all natives except the personal "maids"). But everything, that native servants do must be overlooked. They are as well paid as servants at home. A good cook will get $5 a month, for example. But they cannot be trusted to keep a house in order as English servants can.

Third stage is the middle-of-the-day rest. Not many officials do much after 2 o'clock. From that hour until 4 English houses are wrapped in slumbersome silence. Those who are not asleep are reading or writing. Then, at about 4, the place suddenly springs to life again. Up to now the hot, wide dusty streets and the shady river front have been left to the natives. From 4 onward there are plenty of white faces and smart frocks and hats to be seen, plenty of men in flannels, with tennis rackets, driving in neat little carts or riding donkeys, or even walking after the sun has gone down and the cool breeze from across the river brings back one's energy with a refreshing rush.

Final and fifth stage is dinner—dinner under the brilliant stars which cover the deep blue southern sky, at a table lit by discreetly-shaded lamps. There is a frank geniality around Khartoum dinner tables which leaves a wonderfully pleasant impression on the mind. Nowhere could strangers experience greater kindness, a more charming readiness to make friends. It may be because they are in a Mohammedan country, where hospitality is a sacred duty enjoined by the Koran. It may be because Khartoum is favored with particularly attractive people as residents. Whatever the reason, they are in a delightful conspiracy to give their visitors a good time.

Strong on Conversation.

The Winnipeg city fathers followed with the closest interest Jim Conmee's legislation at Ottawa and even had representatives at Parliament Hill to see that the city's power privileges on the Winnipeg River were not interfered with. When word came that the bill was killed, one of the City Council framed a telegram to be sent to Hon. Clifford Sifton, congratulating him on his stand. This particular member, while a good councillor, like a good many Western old-timers did not have educational opportunities in his youth. He had the telegram addressed, "Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the conversation committee; Ottawa." A newspaper man, however, pointed out that there was a slight difference between "conversation" and "conservation," and the telegram was changed in time.

1000 ISLANDS— ROCHESTER.

Strs. Caspian and North King leave Belleville at 3.20 a.m. daily for Kingston and 1000 Islands, and at 11.35 p.m., for Rochester.

A Motley Gathering.

The following curious analysis of the names of M.P.'s in the British House of Commons is interesting:

Color is represented by a Black, a Green, a Grey, a Reddy, and six Whites or Whytes.

Culinary matters are well looked after by two Boyles, a Cooke, and a Kettle, While Burns keep them company in this department.

The animal kingdom is extremely numerous, with its Bird, Craik, Dawes, Fox, Haddock, Leach, Martin, Roches, Roe and Wolff, not to speak of a Bull and two Horne (s).

The surface of the earth is well defined by a Beach, Caves, Craig, Fell, Pield, a Heath, Hill or Hills, Moore, Lough, Mount, Parkes, Rockes, Sandys, Weir, and three Wood (s).

Of places there are the Clyde, France, Holland, Holt, Jordan, Lincoln, Lundon, and Snowden.

Agriculture can claim Barnes, Clay, Croft, and two Hodges; horticulture its Primrose and two Thornes; sport a Falconer, a Fisher, Bowles, Hunt, two Hunters, and two Walkers.

Clothing is represented by Brace and Coates; nautical matters by a Helme; ecclesiastical by a Bell, a Peel, Chaplain, Chapple, and a Churchill.

There are two Kings, a Chancellor, a Duke, and a Barran and a Knight, while there is a Long and a Shortt of it, a Thynne, two Youngs, and two Youngers, the humor of the House being looked after by Smiley.

Passed as Inspector.

A clever ex-convict named Thomas Parkes, has been sent back to prison at Gorey for obtaining his livelihood by dishonest means. Throughout County Wexford he had been masquerading as an inspector of cowsheds under the Local Government Board; and so charming was his address that he was feted by the farmers. His examination of the cowsheds was a masterpiece of play acting. In some cases he merely required that the owners should limewash the premises, and in others that they should concrete the floors. Grants from the Estates Commissioners were promised by him and also, as a sop to the laborers, an additional half acre. On such promises he borrowed money galore and lived like a lord.

A Mournful Comedian.

Melancholy Peter Doody, the jockey —in private life Mr. Alfred Lester— who is one of the chief attractions of "The Arcadians" at the Shaftesbury Theatre, in London, Eng., tells an interesting story of the genesis of "The Scene-Shifter," the sketch which may be said to have marked the turning-point in his career. Some years ago he was on tour as stage-manager of a musical comedy, one incident of which was the carrying across of a piece of scenery. This was generally done by one of the stage hands, as not a word was allotted to the part. One night the usual man was missing, and Mr. Lester, to save the situation, promptly performed the duty himself.

Needle's Long Journey.

An interesting story comes from Inglewood, Victoria, Australia, to the effect that some fourteen years ago a girl named Fawcett had the misfortune to break a needle in one of her arms. One day recently the broken piece, one inch and a quarter long, after traveling up on arm and across her body, came out of the other arm, leaving no ill-effects.

Ignored Fisherman's Protests.

AND NOW PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT HAVE AROUSED AMERICAN GOVERNMENT.

Nearly every thing the present Dominion Government attempts they bungle it. A dam has been constructed across the Red River, north of Winnipeg, for the purpose of furnishing water for a short canal to enable boats to reach Lake Winnipeg, but no fishway has been provided. Canadian fishermen have entered complaints that the law has not been complied with. Now the United States Government is about to complain to Ottawa regarding the St. Andrew's lock. The Red River is an international stream and the contention is that the lock prevents fish going from Lake Winnipeg up to the headwaters of the stream in question. Canadian fishermen made similar representations to the Department of Public Works before the lock was constructed, but these were ignored. The obstruction of international streams is contrary to the provisions of the recent Waterways Treaty.

HOME OF "SCOTIA."

Steel Prospects Interest New Glaswegians More Than a Little.

Financiers one and all talk "Scotia Steel" nowadays, writes W. D. Taunton of Halifax, in Toronto Saturday Night. Down here in Nova Scotia we are all inclined to discuss about Scotia and its troubles. For troubles it has—inward troubles—the worst kind.

We are all interested in Scotia because the concern belongs—or did—to us. This big industry was conceived of Nova Scotians. It was brought into being by Nova Scotians, nurtured and trained to its present robust state by Nova Scotians, and not the very least, it is part and parcel of Nova Scotia itself. It is a direct product of Bluenose soil.

We may be called provincial in our ideas, but we do glory in big Nova Scotians and things.

The upper provinces have been and are still after our big men. So with the great West. We have faith in our ability to duplicate the crop, but we cannot bear the parting with our industries.

The raid on Scotia by the upper province financiers has been received with some alarm. The town of New Glasgow, the birthplace of Scotia and the birthplace of Scotia's "daddy," Mr. Graham Fraser, has much to lose by the removal of the steel works. Mr. Forshet protests that his interests do not desire their removal, but the New Glasgow people have been once bitten and bitten badly. In 1882 glass works were established there on an extensive scale. Great things were predicted. Business boomed. The Steel company, growing out of the Forge company, established some years previously by Graham Fraser and P. Forest McKay, were in course of construction. By the time the steel works got in good working order the combine came along and gobbled up the glass works. They began the process of dissolution by working half time, and finally the works closed down, the machinery removed to the upper provinces and the buildings allowed to go to decay.

That is one of the things New Glasgow feared and still fears may happen the steel works—the mainstay of the community. That is one and the main reason why so many members of the local Legislature favored the legislation sought by President Harris and Manager Cantley to keep the controlling power of the company within the province.

With all this there is a keen sense of doing the right thing even though sacrifice is involved, and Nova Scotians are not lacking in that respect. Sympathy was with the legislation asked for. The good name of the province had, however, to be considered. And we all know what followed.

Scotia had its birth in a blacksmith's shop, but its father wanted greater quarters for the child. Its progress has been always upwards, until to-day it is being wooed by financiers all over Canada. Maybe the upper Canadian suitors may be successful in winning its affections.

Graham Fraser is not interested in Scotia, only as an observer. He is out of the enterprise for good. Were he at the head of its affairs, many think the present trouble would have been avoided. Harris' head is not Graham Fraser's, nor is Cantley's by a big margin.

Cantley was taken into the business by Fraser. He started out as the company's traveler and proved a good one. His rise has been rapid.

Graham Fraser is interested in lumber on the Pacific coast. He is Mayor of New Glasgow.

Sugar Production.

Only two provinces took part in the production of beet sugar last year —Ontario and Alberta. There were three factories in operation, the one in Alberta being at Raymond, and those in Ontario, at Wallaceburg and Berlin, respectively. The total production, as the figures show, was almost 20,000,000 pounds, of which Ontario furnished 16,200,000 pounds. The total acreage devoted to the culture of the beet for sugar, was 11,100 acres, of which 2,300 was in Alberta. The farmers supplying the Wallaceburg factory received about $43.50 per acre on the average, Berlin $35, and Raymond $27.

Y. M. C. A Campaign

At the Y. M. C. A. campaign luncheon at noon today no statement was given out as to the amount subscribed since yesterday noon. This was owing to the fact that the campaign closes at 9 o'clock this evening, when it is confidently expected that the $40,000 mark will have been reached. If this amount is reached citizens will know same by the ringing of bells and blowing of whistles.

Well, all the "teams" have struck an easy canter as they enter the home stretch, and when the race is finished at 9 tonight it will be known which of them received the biggest stake. It has been a long hard, trial of speed, and not one of the contestants regret the end being so near at hand. It would have been much easier had it been done in "relays", but no use talking about that now.

Don't believe any city of this size could produce a more energetic and harmonious band of "highwaymen" than have been keeping our citizens in motion the past couple of weeks. They have been possessed of all the necessary qualifications needed in so great an undertaking. They have followed up every clue, stuck to every prospect, and pushed right in wherever angels would not have taken a chance. But what are the results. The clock tonight at 9 will show you the results, and this is but the beginning of the end. When you see a beautiful and thoroughly equipped building on Campbell Street, the property of the Y. M. C. A. of Belleville, you will know what this campaign has accomplished for this City.

H. E. FAIRFIELD

A Clever French Captive.

A person who was supposed to be the French general Mouton, count de Lobau, was once captured by an English vessel, but after a time the captain discovered that his prisoner was the Count de Montrond. "Why did you deceive me?" he demanded angrily of the count. "I did not deceive you," replied Montrond; "not at all. You thought I was General Mouton. You told me so. You have a fifty gun frigate. Was it for me, who have only a pocket pistol, to contradict you?"

The captain did not forgive Montrond and took every opportunity to treat him rudely. One evening at dinner some one proposed the health of the French. As Montrond rose to acknowledge it the captain cried: "They are all cowards! I make no exceptions." When Montrond's turn came he gave this sentiment, "The English—they are all gentlemen, but I make exceptions."

A Judicial Favor.

A verdant local reporter whose propensities incline to daring rather than to judgment and whose ardency in the quest of news is one of his marked characteristics, approached a judge of the United States district court and solicited a little advance information on a case in progress in the judge's court.

"You see, judge," said the youngster to the astonished jurist, "we go to press in a few moments, and we all know your inclination to do a newspaper man a favor."

The venerable man eyed the youth sternly and said slowly and emphatically:

"Yes, young man, I'll do you a favor this time, and you will see that you don't ask me again."

"That's fine, your honor. Thanks, very much. Just a few lines will do."

"I will do you this favor. I shall not send you to jail this time, but if you ever approach me again with such a question your friends will not see you for some time."

The discomfited reporter retired ruminating on the mysteries of the law and the dignities pertaining to the judiciary.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A FIRST PROPOSAL

The Way She Was Comforted After It Was Over.

By KEITH GORDON.

It was the softest of spring days, and Mowbray and Miss Farrar strolled through the greenery of the park with the languid abstraction born of the first warm weather and a friendship of several years standing. Though their eyes drank in the beauty of the scene about them—the great stretches of greensward, the trees and bushes that were bursting into the tender green of the season as into a sort of silent song—neither of them was thinking of it.

Miss Farrar, indeed, was living over other days inevitably brought back by the warm breeze and the smell of growing things—other springtimes when life meant only the beautiful possibility of love. And Mowbray was thinking of her and wondering if by any chance it would be worth while to tell her, for in spite of her unquestionable attractiveness he could not help feeling that he would find it hard to look into those calm, clear eyes and talk of love. Yet he was neither cowardly nor inexperienced. He simply had a natural shrinking from being regarded with suppressed amusement by the woman he loved. And in her apparent immunity from such emotions that was what he feared. She would in all probability only laugh her light, frank laugh and say, "Nonsense, Clark; don't be silly!"

He sent a speculative glance toward her as she walked beside him looking off into the distance with the preoccupied air of a woman whose whole mind was given to some engrossing and persistent thought.

"Let us sit for awhile," she proposed as they reached the top of a knoll where, under a solitary tree, a bench invited relaxation. Suiting the action to the word, she seated herself comfortably with her elbows placed defiantly on the back of the bench, an attitude peculiar to her aggressive moods and one which Mowbray had learned to recognize as premonitory of an intention to talk things out to a finish. He wondered what it would be this time, for he had long since dropped into his role of mentor.

He waited patiently with eyes that roved carelessly over the mansions on the far side of Fifth avenue, which in turn sent back a well bred stare, knowing that her feelings would soon reach the point of overflow. At last she broke the silence.

"Do I look to you like a person selected by fate to be distinguished among women—disagreeably distinguished, I mean?" she demanded, turning toward him with a directness which challenged a truthful answer. He regarded her in a manner intended to convey that he was making an expert examination.

"No," he admitted, "I can't say that you do—that is"— He stopped rather vaguely.

"Oh, now don't try to soften the truth," she interrupted quickly. "I'm after facts, and I am not going to lay anything you may say up against you."

"I haven't the least idea what it is about, but I am glad that there is going to be no animosity," Mowbray observed politely. Then he settled himself to listen. It was one of his virtues that he never missed his cue.

Her next words came out rather abruptly.

"I'm not especially plain, do you think?"

Her tone was deprecating, but she turned her face toward him in a manner as impersonal as if she were calling his attention to the landscape. Then she continued impartially:

"That is, I suppose I would be classed as 'fair to middling.'"

He nodded assent, with a gleam of mischief in his eye.

"To tell you the truth"—her tone had dropped into the personal, confidential key—"I'm not at all conceited about my looks, but I've always flattered myself that I am rather interesting."

The statement ended with a rising inflection which made it a question, and it was evident that she was awaiting his decision with some anxiety.

"Rather interesting, I think we may say," he agreed suavely.

"And I'm sure I'm affectionate and fairly good tempered and—and"—

Mowbray encouraged her by a nod.

—"and domestic."

"I shall have to take your word for that."

"Well, I am domestic. I know I am! So I want you to explain to me"—her voice was growing tumultuous—"but first promise on your honor that you'll never tell—how it is that I've reached the age of thirty-three without ever having had a proposal."

Mowbray threw himself back and roared, while her arms came down off the bench and she dropped her face upon her hands and sat looking at him with the puzzled air of a pupil at the feet of a master.

"When you've done laughing," she began with dignity.

"Pardon, dear, a thousand pardons!"

He had never called her that before, and there was something in his voice which bespoke a new hope and confidence, but she was too engrossed in her pursuit of self knowledge to notice.

"I forgot to say that I'm sensible. Men always like that, you know. Anyway, they pretend to."

She finished in a way that suggested that she had her doubt of their sincerity. With a mighty effort her companion swallowed his mirth and prepared to face the situation with her.

"Is it because you haven't wanted any one to ask you?" he inquired diplomatically.

"No, indeed!"

"And no man has ever told you that he loved you?" he murmured in a thoughtful tone. "Strange!"

"Well—now—I didn't say just that, you know!"

There was a faint suspicion of a blush on Miss Farrar's smooth cheeks, but her glance met Mowbray's with its usual unswerving honesty.

"Men have told me that they loved me—several of them! But that's not a proposal, you know, any more than it's a purchase when I say that I adore a string of pearls at Tiffany's!"

"A-a-h!"

The ejaculation was full of enlightenment. Mowbray was beginning at last to understand things that had always puzzled him, as his next question showed.

"Would it be impertinent to ask how you have received these declarations?"

"Why, I just listened. You see, it's embarrassing. It makes one feel so terribly conscious."

"What about the man?" Mowbray asked quietly. "Doesn't it occur to you that perhaps he might need a little encouragement—that perhaps he might be a trifle conscious too?"

For a moment there was silence between them. The point of view was utterly new to Miss Farrar, and she was obviously impressed by it.

"I never thought of that," she admitted slowly. "I thought that sort of thing was so in a man's line—his metier." She laughed a bit ruefully.

A squirrel darted swiftly across the grass and, turning its head jauntily to one side, fixed a bright, inquiring eye upon them. Then, with a saucy wave of its tail, it scurried away.

"I have it," said Mowbray, "I have it! Learn from the squirrel! Lightness, airiness, coquettishness! Don't you see what I mean?" And he looked at her teasingly.

But she was not to be diverted. "I am serious," she assured him. "There's always a reason for everything, and there must be a reason for this. There's Alice Nixon. She's not so awfully pretty. I heard her say that she had had nineteen proposals!" Miss Farrar's voice was touched with awe. Then a skeptical thought seized her. "Still—she's from the south," she added, and her tone implied that an allowance should be made for the fact.

Mowbray bit his lip.

"Then there's her sister—just an ordinarily nice girl—follows with fifteen. Marion Pierce owns up to a dozen, and Beth Garrett—dear, homely Beth—acknowledges six! I asked her because I specially wanted to find out. Perhaps you can imagine how queer it makes me feel."

"What do you say upon such occasions?" demanded Mowbray, watching the squirrel that was again eying them from a distance.

There was a palpable pause before Miss Farrar replied. But at last her straightforwardness prevailed.

"Sometimes I shake my head and look rather shocked. Then they think that I disapprove of such conversations—think I'm noble, you know! At other times I laugh and say, 'I have never had one!' in a tone which implies just the reverse."

She finished this confession and looked at Mowbray out of the corner of her eyes in a way that drove the last vestige of fear out of his mind. This naive woman, the person whose dignity and coldness he had stood aloof from in absolute embarrassment for so long! He could have laughed at the absurdity of it. Why had she never shown him her real self before?

"I think I shall propose to you," he remarked deliberately.

For a second she looked surprised, and then her eyes danced.

"Let it be in your best style," she pleaded. "Remember, it's my first, and I fear it may be my last too!"

He leaned toward her and looked straight into her eyes.

"It will be your last undoubtedly!" His voice was low and tense. For a long moment he looked at her—looked in a way that first made her small ears burn and then troubled her clear gaze, which wavered and fell.

"I love you, dear," he said simply, "and I think you know the rest. Tell me that you do."

Her cheeks were hot and her lips trembled. A strong hand reached out and took hers in a masterful way, and she knew that something which she had never even dreamed was true.

"But I asked you!" she moaned when at last she recovered something of her wonted serenity. "I positively asked you!"

"You encouraged me," he corrected, "and that's what they usually do, only your method was brutally direct."

It was when she began to flush again that he aded, "I shall always have something to tease you about, dearest."

And the squirrel, which had been watching them in the lingering hope that they might possibly have brought him nuts, like sensible people, gave up in disgust and scurried away.

Books In the Middle Ages.

When in the middle ages an author at any European university desired to publish his thoughts his book was read over twice in the presence of the authorities and if approved might be copied and exposed for sale, a practice in which the germs for state licensing may be readily distinguished. It was evidently necessary, however, to keep a strict watch over the persons employed in this business, and the statutes of the University of Paris show that the booksellers were subjected to a very severe discipline. They were obliged to keep a list of the books they sold and to exhibit their sale of charges, and they were forbidden to purchase any manuscript till it had been duly approved by the authorities and publicly exposed to view for four days.

A COLD STORAGE ROMANCE.

Bill Bailey was a bachelor, forsaken and forlorn.
He used to eat a single egg for breakfast every morn.

He bought his egg one morning from the shop across the way.
The sign above them read, "These Eggs Are Strictly Fresh Today."

Bill Bailey's wonder and surprise were more than we can tell
When he discovered some one had been writing on the shell.

In fact, it seemed a woman had inscribed upon the egg
Her autograph. The name he found was Clementina Clegg.

He wrote to the address she gave and registered a vow:
"This is the woman of my choice. I'll find a partner now."

For weary weeks he waited, though the maiden had forgot,
And then his hopes were shattered by the answer that he got:

"Dear sir, your letter is at hand, and in reply would beg
To state that there is no one here named Clementina Clegg.

"Some of the oldest people here admit they used to know
A bunch of Cleggs who peddled eggs, but that was years ago.

"They tried to run a poultry ranch, but couldn't make it pay,
So sold to a cold storage plant, and then they went away."

A Shaded Story.

Joseph Alexander is a pickaninny of many virtues, but sadly given to exaggeration. One day when I had him pulling weeds in the front yard he ran into the house with eyes big as moons and cried:

"Law, Miss Minnie, what you think! I dun kilt three big rattlesnakes out in the yard."

"Now, Joseph," I replied, "you know that is not so."

"Well, now, Miss Minnie," he insisted insinuatingly, "it wuz two turrible big snakes, an' I killed 'em fo' sho'!"

Determined to convict him, I insisted, "You know you did not kill two snakes, Joseph."

He thought a moment, then said impressively, "Well, now, I did kill one powerful big snake in dat very front yard."

"Go away, boy! You are an outrageous story teller!" I cried indignantly. He was not one whit abashed by my vehemence, but cheerfully replied:

"Well, 'clare for goodness, Miss Minnie, hit was a powerful big worm!"—Delineator.

On the Installment Plan.

Accosted by a beggar while coming out of a theater on Chestnut street a few evenings ago, a prominent member of the bar was asked for a nickel.

"That's all I want, boss, just a nickel," said the beggar in a whining tone of voice.

"No!" answered the lawyer, rather sternly. "I am saving up my nickels to give away a million dollars at one time. I'm not a philanthropist on the installment plan."—Philadelphia Times.

The Broken Trust

That evening was, perhaps, the most brilliant of his life. His highest dreams were realized; fame, fortune, wealth, position, honor and love were all his.

That night he dreamed of new honors, of the Peerage, the Garter, Lady Blanche smiling in his face and telling him she loved him at last.

But toward morning, when the sky was streaked with crimson, a terrible dream haunted him; it was that he lay dead in the hut near Otana, and Alan Wayne stood over him reproaching him for his broken trust.

By this time he had almost forgotten the wrong he had done; so completely and thoroughly had he entered into the spirit of his past that he forgot the fraud, the betrayed friend and the full enormity of his sin.

The dream haunted him, and he wondered as the full glory of the morning shone in his room—he wondered why this night, of all nights, he should see so clearly the face of Alan Wayne!

He rose, resolved now to hurry his marriage, and dressed without a shadow of care.

Captain Chandos sat in his room alone; his face was haggard with suspense. He had so much at stake that he could not rest; the blood ran like molten lava through his veins; then seemed frozen like ice.

If Sir Alan were an imposter and had taken his dead kinsman's name and place; if, indeed, he were Sir Vivian Aynsley of Carsdale, if instead of being parted from Lady Blanche, she might be his own; what, dear Heaven, thanks could he offer for such a boon! What mercy, what kindness would he not show to others; what gratitude would he not show to Heaven! His eyes grew moist with tears, his lips trembled, his hands were clasped as though he would pray, but the words died upon his lips.

Suppose it was nothing but the fevered dream of a romantic girl, a visionary's delusion—ah, well, even then he was a soldier and could bear his fate :it could be no worse than it had been

Yet it was heard to bear, to remember how much was at stake, yet keep cool, calm and unconcerned

Mr. Grey had been to Carsdale and returned that day to London and would be here any minute. So Vivian waited for him, trying to bear the suspense the best he could.

It was late when the lawyer arrived, for he had been detained against his will. Captain Chandos' lip quivered with excitement.

"I have been to Carsdale," said Mr. Grey. "I told you it has always been the custom of the Aynsleys to have two keys of the spare room—one is always in possession of the reigning baronet, the other in charge of the family solicitors. The Aynsleys have always been great travelers, and it is necessary that their lawyers should have access to their papers, without sending to some foreign country for the key.

"I must tell you first," continued Mr. Grey, "that I was present when Sir Alan placed all his papers in the iron safe; some were letters, tied together and dated; there were certificates, too, as I could see. I noticed that he took a large pocket-book and emptied its contents without examining them.

"The letters and certicates are all right, Captain Chandos; you know what they are. I turned out the contents of the pocketbook, and see what I found among them."

Mr. Grey carefully unfolded a letter that bore some marks of age, and gave it into the young soldier's hands.

"A murderer," he said, "cleverly destroys the traces of his crime, but invariably leaves one clew that condemns him. This man has played his part most skillfully; but the only written piece of evidence that could convict him he has forgotten to destroy."

As Captain Chandos read the paper great drops of perspiration gathered upon his brow, his strong hands clinched the letter tightly; it was some minutes before he could control himself sufficiently to speak; then he cried:

"This is like a voice from the grave. What blind fools we have all been!"

"Nay," said Mr. Grey, "I cannot allow that; say, rather, how clever he has been to delude us. Rely upon it, when he finds that evidence is in our hands we shall have no need to cross the seas in search of witnesses."

"Lord Damar ought to be consulted," said Captain Chandos, "before we take any further steps. He is still at Cowes shall we send for him or go to him?"

"Better send," replied the lawyer; "it will be quite impossible for me to leave London again just at present."

"I will write to-night; he will be here on Thursday morning," said Vivian; "and until then we can do no more. There is one thing I should like to say, Mr. Grey. I have more at stake in this matter than anyone else; but I cannot bear the thought of stabbing a man, not even a rogue, in the dark. Let him, by whatever name he calls himself—be told what we suspect, what we know, what has been discovered, and what we are going to do; let the fight be a fair one."

A CUNNING WEASEL.

The Trick by which he Trapped His Big Rat Antagonist.

Once a sawmill in a western town was infested with rats, which, being unmolested, became very numerous and bold and played round the mill among the men while they worked during the day. But one day there appeared on the scene a weasel, which immediately declared war on the rodents.

One by one the rats fell victims to the weasel's superior strength, until only one very large, pugnacious rat was left of the once numerous colony. This weasel had a go at the big rat several times, but on each occasion the rodent proved more than a match for his slender antagonist and chased the weasel to a hiding place.

Shortly thereafter the weasel was seen busily digging under a lumber pile near the mill. He was engaged for some time, but later appeared again in the mill, seeking his old enemy. He soon found him and at once renewed hostilities. As usual, after a lively tussel the rat got the better of the argument, and the weasel ran, pursued closely by the rat, straight to the hole under the lumber pile.

He ran in, still followed by the rat, but immediately reappeared round the end of the pile and again dodged into the hole behind the rat. Neither was seen again for some time, but the weasel finally reappeared, looking no worse for the fight.

The curiosity of the men in the mill being aroused, they proceeded to investigate the hole under the lumber pile. They found that the weasel had dug the hole sufficienly large at the opening to admit the rat, but had gradually tapered it as he proceeded until at the other end it barely allowed his own slender body to pass.

When the rat chased him into the large end of this underground tunnel he quickly slipped through ,and while the rat was trying to squeeze his large body into the smaller part of the hole the weasel dodged in behind him caught him in the rear and in a place where he could not turn round and finished him at his leisure.

How Pausanius Died.

Pausanias, the Greek general, died by self-administered poison. When hotly pursued by those sent to apprehend him on a charge of treason and sacrilege, he took refuge in the sanctuary of a temple. Unable to remove him by force and also unwilling to violate the sanctuary, the officers walled up the entrance and began to unroof the building. When he could be seen they noticed that he was chewing something which proved to be a quill filled with poison. By the time the work had sufficiently advanced to admit of their entrance he was in a dying condition.

A Mistaken Sign of Generosity.

The young son of a Germantown man who lives up to every cent of his income heard a compliment for his father the other day and passed it on thinking to please the parental head and win future favors perhaps from the parental purse.

"Heard something nice about you dad," he announced over the dinner table.

"Ah! that's pleasant, murmured father modestly.

"Heard you was awful good to mother," went on the boy.

"I hope I treat your mother as a man should treat the person he cares most for," responded father evenly.

"Heard you were so generous to her that every one in town knew aout it Habrd a man say every one was talking about it too. He said everything you had was in your wife's name."

The father's countenance underwent a sudden change. He sputtered for a moment painfully. Then he spoke.

"You go to bed!" said papa.

The Salt Charm Failed.

Some three years before the Franco German war broke out Count Seckendorff accompanied King William I. on his visit to Napoleon III. and was present at the celebrated dejeuner given in the Pavilion de Diane at Fontainbleau. King William, who was sitting next the empress, was asked by her to pass the salt, and in complying with this request he threw a little salt over his shoulder. Upon the empress exclaiming "Why do you do that?" the king explained that in his country it was the custom to do so when passing the salt to ward off bad luck and any chance of a quarrel. The empress in a prettily turned speech at once replied. "But surely there is no danger of anything interfering with our friendship." In less than three years the Germans had crossed the Rhine.

Cheering Up Thuse.

James Whitcomb Riley was going up the steps of the statehouse in Indianapolis one day when he met his friend Warren G. Sayre. The two had been close friends for years.

"Good morning, Mr. Riley," said Mr. Sayre in greeting.

"Why, hello, Warren!" Mr. Riley replied. "How are you?"

"Never felt better in my life. You are looking well."

"I don't know," said the poet; "I sometimes feel the weight of years, for you know I am getting old."

"Nonsense! Nonsense!" Mr. Sayre remarked with considerable emphasis. "You don't look old. In fact, you don't look a bit older now than when I first saw you."

"Perhaps that is true, but I feel age coming on. I was just thinking as I came up these steps about old Methuselah. I imagined I could see him driving along the road in his big wagon. He met an old friend who was sitting on a rail fence at the side of the road. 'Why, hello, Thuse!' says the friend. 'How are you?'

"'Oh, pretty fair for an old man,' said the patriarch. 'But I'm getting along in years.'

"'Oh, bosh, Thuse! You don't look old. How old are you, Thuse, anyway?'

"'I'm 969,' he answered.

"'Well, well, I never would er thought it!' said the friend. 'Why, Thuse, you don't look a day over 968.'"—Harper's Weekly.

Dangerous Sport.

First Lady (reading a newspaper)—This golf seems to be a very dangerous game. Did you see what happened to a man named Taylor? He went into bunker and was in two when he came out.

Second Lady—How dreadful!

"Yes; here are the words: 'Taylor getting out in two, Braid secured a half.'"

"Does it say what happened to the other half."

"No, but there was worse to follow. According to the report, Taylor then fell altogether to pieces."—Word of Golf.

DECORATIVE HINT.

The Garden Hat Centerpiece Is the Latest.

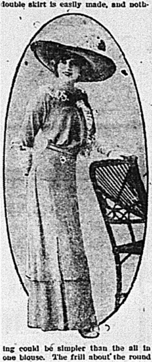
If you are thinking of giving a luncheon party or a small porch tea and want something smart and new as a centerpiece, why not duplicate the garden hat effect seen in the illustration?

The large straw chapeau is caught up into a jaunty basket shape and tied about with gauze ribbon the shade of your color scheme. Poppies and grasses fill the hat in question.

Tea, chocolate or some kind of fruit punch is usually served at these porch parties, and often all three when the affair is a large one. When a small number of guests are being entertained it is easier to have the tea made in the kitchen and brought in with the tea things.

There are many varieties of sandwiches, but the secret of a delicious sandwich served recently was to be found in the cooking of the ham and in the abundance of the mayonnaise used in mixing. The ham had been boiled until it was brown and then ground very fine and mixed with mayonnaise. Sandwiches spread with quince jelly and sprinkled with minced nuts are very appetizing, and a filling of fig paste sprinkled with ground peanuts is also good.

The Summer Girl.



Checked gingham or linen makes up smartly in the frock illustrated. The double skirt is easily made, and nothing could be simpler than the all in one blouse. The frill about the round neck and down the front are dainty touches.

The Furniture's Summer Clothes.

If your parlor, living room or any of the most used rooms in the house are upholstered in heavy goods, be sure to make or have made summer slips, not only as a protection to the finer goods, but to give a lighter and more summery effect to the rooms.

There are many really pretty cretonnes and other materials which may be used and which will add to rather than detract from the beauty of the rooms. Time was when we thought only the plain linens should be used for this purpose, and the house looked as though it had gone into a sort of mummy-like slumber for the season. But this time is over. We may make the summer clothes of the furniture as bright and pretty as possible and still be in the vogue.

Of course the heavier rugs will be stored away, and if any rugs are used they will be of the cool fiber or "rag" materials, which are so pretty and light looking.

Then the draperies at the windows should be of the plain and cool materials, easily washable and not injured by the summer's dust.

If you have very valuable rugs or hangings it is well to place them in cold storage with some reliable firm during the season dangerous to their safety.

Household Helps.

One of the best things to remove grime from the bathtubs is a cloth moistened with paraffin. Then wash the tub with clear water.

Now that ants are "in season" the housewife should head them off by blowing cayenne pepper into the crevices by which they enter the house.

A good old writer says, "There is just one thing fixed and indispensable in bringing up a child—make him feel that he is loved."

To clean windows first wash well with a clean cloth, then polish with a newspaper which has been rubbed soft between the hands.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

In Westminster Abbey.

Fox's tomb is perhaps the most ridiculous in the abbey, but others run it hard—the naked figure of General Wolfe supported by one of his staff in full regimentals and receiving a crown from Victory; William Wilberforce apparently listening to Sheridan telling a comic tale and contorting his features in the endeavor not to laugh; the Sir Cloudesley Shovel ,in periwig and Roman toga, which excited the mirth even of contemporaries, and all the monuments erected by the East India Company, with palm trees and other tropical exuberances, to the memory of great soldiers, like Sir Eyre Coote. From the point of view of good taste a dictator would be justified in dismissing these and many more to the stonemason's yard.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,2.0 square miles.

The Origin of Oxygen.

That eminent scientist, Lord Kelvin, maintained that all the oxygen in the atmosphere probably originated from the action of sunlight upon plants. When our earth was a globe of hot liquid it contained no vegetable fuel and probably no free oxygen. But as it cooled off plants appeared on its surface, and these began to evolve oxygen through the medium of the sunbeams. Upon the oxygen thus derived, we depend for the maintenance of life by breathing. When we burn coal or other vegetable fuel we use up oxygen, and it is to plants again that we owe the restoration of the oxygen thus lost to the air. If they failed to keep up a sufficient supply the atmosphere would gradually part with its oxygen, and the inhabitants of the earth would disappear in consequence of asphyxiation.

The Cold Young Lawyer

Mrs. Sol Smith, the veteran actress whose 80th birthday was celebrated by a dinner of the Professional Women's League in New York, said of the modern spirit at this dinner:

"The modern spirit is more mercenary than the spirit of the '50's. I know a very beautiful girl—in my day she'd have been married off at 18—but though she is now 25, her matrimonial prospects are dark and gloomy.

"At a tea I pointed the beautiful creature out to a young lawyer and said:

"There's nothing sweeter and lovelier than that girl in America. Why don't you try for her hand?"

"What has she got in it?" the young lawyer coldly answered.

Good Form

It requires tact to be a strict yet popular mother of a grown daughter, for to steer between the points of being too much in evidence and not sufficiently so requires thought, etiquette and common sense, says an authority on questions of etiquette.

It is true that the continued presence of an older person acts as something of a kill-joy to younger ones, so parents need not be in the room all the time, for girls must learn through experience to be easy and gracious hostesses, an art they will not acquire if it is always done for them.

Good form demands that a man when calling upon an unmarried woman living with her parents or guardians shall send a card for them. For him to omit this courtesy is the height of rudeness or ignorance of good manners, and in either case he can be severely criticised. When the card is sent the mother or father goes into the reception room and remains for ten minutes or more, but ten minutes is long enough. It is not necessary that both parents shall see the caller. One is enough, and neither goes in with the daughter. Whichever decides to be present follows ten or fifteen minutes after the young hostess.

As soon as the older person enters she or he is included in the conversation. If some one special topic is under discussion she is told what it is, so she can take up the thread where her entrance broke it off.

To ignore the presence of an older person, talking on subjects of which he or she has no knowledge, is nothing less than boorish.

The parent or guardian after taking part in the conversation for a short time excuses himself or herself. This individual does it frankly, making no pretext of trying to slip out. The woman or man rises and says good night to the caller, saying that it has been pleasant to see him and she or he hopes the caller will come again soon. Then the parent asks him to excuse her. By the fact that she has gone into the room and been cordial to the guest she has expressed her approval of his acquaintance. If she does not like him and prefers that her daughter should not know him she remains in the room throughout the entire visit.

To Overcome Embarrassment.

If you are so shy that it is painful, instead of trying to brazen it out or retiring into your shell, go in for cultivating self forgetfulness.

It is misery to be conscious of embarrassment. No one knows this better than the victim, yet often she sees no way to conquer her feelings.

Sometimes she makes the attempt by fighting her failing. Generally she errs in overdoing and appears pert, rude or aggressive when in reality she is working hard to feel at ease.

Too often she doesn't put up any fight. Because she is shy she shuns every one and every place where she will feel uncomfortable and too soon is hopelessly submerged by her unfortunate self consciousness.

The only certain cure for embarrassment is self forgetfulness. There is an old saying that the one sure way to make friends is to be a friend. This may be paraphrased to read that the one way not to think too much of yourself is to fill up your thoughts with some one else.

The next time you dread going into society try to recall some one of your acquaintances who is shier and more awkward than you are. Determine to make her enjoy herself for one time at least. If your efforts are honest you will be surprised to find that you have been so busy in good times giving that you have forgotten to be embarrassed.

The next time you are caught by your failing hunt up another buffer for your embarrassment, and before long not only will your shyness be in leash, but you will find you have become popular.

Question For Guest to Ask.

"At what time do you breakfast?" is a question for a guest to ask when bidding her hostess good night after the first day of the visit has expired. Then it is that an explanation is forthcoming as to the domestic habits of the household, and to these habits a good guest will conform willingly. If it is the practice of the family to gather about a breakfast table promptly every morning, then it is bad form for the visitor to disturb her entertainers by forcing them to wait until a slow toilet is completed. Many hostesses in country houses send to the bedroom a tray with a light breakfast in the morning, and the family breakfast table no longer exists. This is considered easier for the household and more comfortable for the guests, who are able to read their mail and attend to correspondence before leaving their rooms.

Length of Formal Call.

A formal visit should last twenty minutes at least, and half an hour is not too long if one is interested. If there is no clock in the room some guess can be made.

All first calls should be returned within a month of the time they are made.

Smart Stationery.

For their personal correspondence women often have their initials in a medallion at the top of their writing paper, and girls have their Christian name stamped in facsimile of their handwriting across one corner.

A SNAKE STORY.

The Wonderul Old Time Serpent That Talked Like as Man.

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a mowe or rycke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpentes as there were sheafes, so as no one sheafe could be removed, but there presently appeard a heape of ougly and fierce serpentes. The countrie men determyned to set fire upon the barne and so attempted to do, but in vaine, for the straw would take no fire, although they laboured with all their witts and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heap a huge great serpente, which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying, 'Cease to prosecute your devise, for you shall not be able to accomplish our burning, for wee were not bredde by nature, neither came we here of our owne accorde, but were sent by God to take vengeance on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "countrie" men did, but it is natural to suppose that they surrendered at once.

An English officer who some years ago was wounded in a battle in India and left lying all night among the native dead and wounded tells this story: "Next morning we spied a man and an old woman, who came to us with a basket and a pot of water, and to every wounded man she gave a piece of joaree bread from the basket and a drink from her water pot. To us she gave the same, and I thanked heaven and her. But the Soobahdar was a high caste Rajput and, as this woman was a Chumar, or of the lowest caste, he would receive neither water nor bread from her. I tried to persuade him to take it that he might live, but he said that in our state, with but a few hours more to linger, what was a little more or less suffering to us—why should he give up his fate for such an object? No; he preferred to die unpolluted."

Y. M.C.A. APPEAL

Belleville, July 14th, 1910.

To the Citizens of Belleville

For eight days energetic committees of representative business men have earnestly canvassed the city for funds to provide a modern, well-adapted Young Men's Christian Association Building for Belleville.

The wide response from citizens of all classes has been most gratifying, and indicates that this is generally regarded as a worthy and popular object.

It is freely recognized that a Building of this kind is in the best interests of every young man and boy in the city. The good results that have followed in other cities in Canada and the United States may confidently be expected here.

Up to noon today 856 persons have subscribed the sum of $36,713.

We need exactly $3,287 to complete the fund and make all subscriptions binding.

Many have not yet helped.

The canvas closes tomorrow (Friday) evening.

Every dollar counts.

If you have, not subscribed will you not lend a hand NOW.

If you have but can do anything additional, your further assistance would be most timely.

THE UNITED EFFORTS OF ALL ARE URGENTL NEEDED.

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

From Col. Percy Sherwood, C. M. G.,
Chief of Dominion Police.
Ottawa, July 12th, 1910.

Dear Colonel Ponton,—I am writing to relatives in Toronto to ascertain if a portrait of the late Judge Sherwood can be obtained there. If so, it would give me much pleasure to present it, as is being done in the case of the late Judge Smart.

I am obliged for the invitation to take part in the Old Boys' Reunion, and if I can possibly arrange to be there for a day or so in that connection, I shall certainly be present.

I much appreciate your kindness in ranking me as a Belleville boy, for I almost look upon it as my home town, many of the pleasantest days of my life being spent there.

A. P. SHERWOOD.

Victoria, B.C.
7th July, 1910.

Dear Sir,—Your kind invitation to the "Belleville Old Boy's Reunion" is just to hand. While I am not a Belleville boy, my wife is and I suppose you think I and my wife are one, and you are right; hence your invitation which I appreciate very much. There is no place this side of the Great Beyond I would prefer visiting, for Belleville is the Town of 'Honest Men and Bonnie Lassies." I secured the bonniest of them all. I say this without reflecting on the others. They are all bonnie.

"May He who gives the rain to pour,
And wings the blast to blaw,
Protect them frae the driving shower
The bitter frost and snaw."

My best wishes for the "Old Boys."

For yourself ,the Secretary:—

"May ne'er misfortune's growling bark, Howl thro' the dwelling o' the Clerk."

Yours very sincerely

Lost His Home in Campbellton Fire.

Mr. Wm. Hitchon arrived in the city to-day on a visit to his parents and friends. Mr. Hitchon's headquarters are at Campbellton, N. B., and he was a sufferer from the disastrous fire which wiped that town out of existence on Monday last He was at Montreal at the time the fire broke out. but learning of it he hastened to Campbellton as soon as possible. only to find ashes and cinders where a few days ago his home was. He with hundreds of others lost all his household effects. In speaking to a representative of the Intelligencer. Hitchon says the scene beggars description. For over twenty four hours thousands had to find shelter under trees and even lie out on the open ground. Food was also scarce, as not as much as a loaf of bread was able to be secured. As soon as it was possible relief trains and boats were sent to the desolated place bringing food and tents for shelter. Nothing is left of the progressive own but a few scattered houses on the outskirts At least two thirds of the 5500 inhabitants are in destitute circumstances and assistance will have to be rendered.

A Society Funeral

At noon yesterday the remains of the late Mr. D Coyle, who died in Buffalo, N. Y., arrived here and were taken to Tickell and Sons Undertaking establishment. They were accompanied by Mrs. Coyle, her daughter Mrs Gay and husband, and Mr. Wm. Lott, jr. Later in the afternoon the funeral took place, which was largely attended. It was under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. Society, of which deceased was a member. Services were held at Tickell's establishment, being conducted by Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's church, and Rev. Bro. A. L. Geen on behalf of the Society. The floral tributes were not only numerous but most beautiful in design. After the service the cortege was headed by the I. O. O. F. band, which played the Dead March in Saul, and proceeded to the Belleville cemetery where the interment took place. A goodly number of the members of the Society accompanied the remains to the cemetery. The bearers were members of the Belleville Lodge, I. O. O. F., namely Bros. J. W. Walker. J. Brown, G. S. Sharpe, A. Gribble, L. R Terwilliger and J. Fenn.

Mr. Burrell Explains

Belleville, Ont., July 13th, 1910.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

Dear Sir,—In looking over your report of the proceedings of the City Council at their last meting, we find that the Mayor asked if we had signed an agreement for the use of the City water, and when he learned that we had not done so, he wished to know why the water was not cut off.

We are simply writing this letter to you in order that you may be informed as to some of the doings of the Council and of the first citizen, Mr. Marsh.

Last year we built 1200 feet of water line on Pine St., at considerable cost, owing to the rocky ground. The pipe is five feet deep, and according to the bill we received for the past three months from the Water Works Department, it will cost us for two wash basins and one closet from $70.00 to $80.00 per year.

You will see that we are not very anxious to use the water at this rate, and are being forced to sink a well to procure our water from some other source. You will find enclosed herewith part of the agreement. This agreement we have never refused to sign.

You will see from it that we are compelled to do almost everything in the way of keeping it in repair and allowing City workmen to come in on our property, etc.

When we were putting in this pipe, we asked the City to put in a larger pipe so that the City could use it as a main. Our only request was that they pay the difference in cost between the one inch pipe we proposed putting in and the larger main that they might require.

They would no do this and now you see by the agreement that they require the privilege of taping this pipe. You will understand that a one-inch pipe 12-hundred feet away will not give much pressure, and if we allow them to tap the pipe for other people we would not get any pressure at all.

We are writing this not with the idea of publication, but would like you to know for the welfare of the city what is going on behind the scenes.

Our old factory on Mill street which is empty and of no value to us, is taxed at the full assessment that we had to pay when actively engaged in business there.

We note from your paper that you are endeavoring to boost Belleville as much as possible, and we think it might possibly be a benefit to the City to compel the City officials, particularly Mr. Mikel, to use the people who are bringing money to the City, with some common fairness.

Apologizing to you for the length of this letter and regretting that we cannot put the matter to you in less words.

Yours very truly,
The Burrell Rock Drill Co., Limited.
H. S. BURRELL.

(In case the City desires to turn off the said water temporarily or permanently, the City or its servants, agents or employees may go upon the premises of the Company or of any other person or party for the purpose of turning off the said water or inspection or repair of said water service or any part thereof and the City will not be liable for any action, claim or damage by reason thereof; but any cost or damages arising or accruing to any person or party by reason of the said action of the City, its servants, agents or employees shall be paid by the Company or its successors.)

Chicago Old Boys Will Stop at Quinte.

Mr. Thomas F. Lynch. who is secretary of the Belleville Club at Chicago, in a communication to Mr. J. V. The request will be complied with.

A Sad Death.

John Terrance Armstrong, aged 3 years and 3 months, died at midnight last night, after a brief illness of pneumonia. Although yesterday two physicians were called to attend the little fellow, they were unable to cope against the disease. A sad and unfortunate circumstance in connection with this case is the fact that the parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Armstrong, arrived last evening at Vancouver, B.C., on a visit to relatives, Mrs. Armstrong having been ordered to take a holiday, the first in 18 years. The bereaved parents have been notified of their loss. Their many friends will extend to them their heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of sorrow.

FORGET QUITS 'SCOTIA'

Montreal Financier Sells Out to President Harris.

Forget-Osler Group, Which Bought So Heavily Into Nova Scotia Steel, Is Now a Thing of the Past—Warring Magnates Enter Stock Exchange Arm-in-Arm—President Harris Announces a Reorganization.

Montreal, July 15.—What was known in financial parlance as the Forget-Osler group, which had acquired a great deal of Nova Scotia Steel stock, and who were defeated at the battle of New Glasgow, has ceased to exist, and for cause. In other words, Rudolphe Forget has sold out his 20,000 shares to President Harris and his associates for about $2,000,000, and thus gets out of "Scotia" affairs altogether.

It is understood that the upper province people began to realize that the provincial feeling was being worked too strongly by their opponents, hence their desire to part company with their stock. It is also understood that Forget wanted to engage in a bull campaign in the Quebec merger, hence his desire to make use of the money locked up in Scotia.

It is pretty well understood that $2,000,000 is the correct figure, and that $300,000 is the profit cleaned up by the Forget faction.

There was a dramatic scene on the Stock Exchange when, at 2.30 Rudolphe Forget, Robert Harris, president of the Scotia, and J. W. McConnell walked into the Exchange arm in arm, thus giving evidence that the war was over. The street believed it anyway, and the stock, which opened yesterday morning at 81 1-2, advanced to 86 on a fair turn over.

President Harris of the Nova Scotia Steel Co., announced last night that the upper province representation on the board will be increased at a very early date, and that he will be able to announce that the new directors will be men of the very highest business ability.

Big Fire at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, July 15.—The dry kilns of the Keenan Woodenware Co. were totally destroyed by a fire which started at 5 p.m., and which was still burning at 9 p.m., though under control. All the kilns were practically full of stock. The fire at one time was a solid mass 20 feet high and a hundred feet square.

The loss will be in the neighborhood of $20,000, pretty well covered by insurance, mostly in Lloyds and Rimouski companies.

The firm will start immediately to rebuild the dry kilns, and expect to be running again in thirty days.

Firemen's Desperate Battle.

New York, July 15.—With the knowledge that any moment a huge tank in which there were half a million cubic feet of gas might blow up, with probable appalling loss of life and the destruction of many buildings, Chief Croker, Deputy Chief Skelly and the fire-fighters brought to the scene by two alarms, battled desperately for an hour and a half to subdue a fire in the stair factory of J. J. Wallace & Co., 508 East 19th street. The fire was stopped thirty feet from the tank.

World's Record Marksmanship.

Wakefield, Mass., July 15.—In a phenomenal exhibition of marksmanship, which continued until after 7.30 o'clock last night, Corpl. Perry B. Scofield of Company E, 5th Massachusetts, of Bedford, nearly doubled the world's record for 500 yards at the Bay State rifle range.

He scored 116 consecutive bull's-eyes. The previous world's record, held by Capt. Stephen W. Wise, inspector of small arms practice of the 6th Massachusetts, was 60 consecutive "bulls."

To Aid Immigration.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted selects fed and watered at $9.40, with $9 for selects f.o.b. cars at country points, which would mean about $8.75 to $8.85 for the farmer.

Cannot Share In Funds.

Washington, July 15.—Ottawa and Chippewa Indians who long ago crossed the border to Canada are not regarded by the Interior Department as U. S. redmen, entitled to share in the funds of their tribes. This position was affirmed by Acting Secretary Pierce yesterday, after hearing the arguments of representations of the Canadian Indians.

Mayor Does Business In Jail.

Lawrence, Mass., July 15.—The executive chamber of this city yesterday was a cell in the Essex County Jail, where Mayor W. P. White, who was sentenced Wednesday by Judge Schofield of the Superior Court to serve three years and to pay a fine of $1,000 for conspiracy to bribe, continued to discharge his official duties.

Male Teachers Scarce.

Ottawa, July 15.—Dr. James P. White, principal of the Ottawa Normal School, deplores the increasing scarcity of male teachers and blames the lowness of the salaries paid. Last year Ottawa sent up nineteen young men to qualify.

German Shipyard Workers May Strike

Hamburg, July 15.—Thirty-five thousand shipyard workers united yesterday in a demand upon their employers for an increase of ten per cent. in wages and a fifty-three hour week. They threaten to strike.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

Reject Company's Schedule.

Winnipeg, July 15.—The Canadian Northern striking car men have decided to reject the company's proposals of a new schedule. It was practically the same as the award of the arbitration board, with the exception it offered the men the alternative of a 10-hour day, which would enable them to earn more money than the nine-hours of the award.

Rate Advances Suspended.

Washington, July 15.—The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday announce its intention to suspend all tariffs, naming general and important rate advances, pending investigation into the reasonableness of the proposed advances.

Starving In Filthy Cell.

Washington, July 15.—William Pittman, the American captured by the Madriz forces near Bluefields, was found Wednesday in a starving condition in a filthy cell at Managua, according to a despatch to the State Department yesterday.

KING GEORGE'S REIGN.

Astrologer Daoud Says It Will Be Short and Stormy.

A short and stormy reign for George V. is predicted by S. Daoud, the Washington astrologer. Two years ago, it is said, Daoud foretold the death of King Edward and described the circumstances accurately. Among the things which be foresees in the new king's horoscope is that his reign will last but six and a half years.

"The first five years," Daoud says, "will be among the stormiest in England's history. The last eighteen months, however, will be comparatively fortunate. The coming reign will be terminated by the king's death, which will be a natural one. He will more than once be the object of attempted assassination, but would be murderers will be powerless to harm him.

"There will be trouble in all the British possessions during the second year, especially in India.

"In the third year of his reign there will be a conflict between England and another European power ruled by a kinsman of King George, which will precipitate a great war. England will on her own part wage war with this European country. The war will be short and decisive and will result in England's being obliged to make concessions which will deprive her of much of her power.

"Egypt will give King George decided trouble, but will not be able to free herself from English rule during his reign."—New York World.

A Curious Will.

Countess Anna Maria Helena de Noailles, a member of one of the historic families of France, has made a curious will which has just been proved. She left her estate at Meads, Eastbourne, England, to found "St. Mary's orphanage," laying down the following rules for the education of the girls: No competitive examinations, no study before breakfast, no study after 6 p. m., all lessons to be learned in the morning, no girl to work more than four and a half hours daily. No arithmetic, except the multiplication tables for children under ten. No child with curvature of the spine to write more than five minutes a day until thirteen. Each girl must be certified by two phrenologists as not deficient in conscientiousness and firmness. No child to be vaccinated.

A Machine to Measure Love.

Science is slowly killing romance. The latest invention is an instrument called a plethysmograph for scientifically testing the warmth of lovers' affections. The person whose feelings are to be weighed in the balance puts his or her arm into a rubber bag, which is then drawn tight and filled with water. Names of young men or young women, as the case may be, are introduced, and if the name stirs the heart the pulse rises and the indicator mounts up. If the name leaves the subject unmoved the pulse remains stationary.—London Gentlewoman.

Quaint Sewing Implements.

An interesting find is reported to have been made by Professor Mestorf, director of the Museum Schleswiger Alters Tumer at Kiel. In the grave of a Germanic woman dating from the pre-Christian era was found a stone box containing a set of sewing utensils, a pair of scissors of considerable weight, a horn knife with an iron blade, a stiletto and several thorns, which were used as needles. There was also a stone resembling the so called "Genkleistein," which was still in use as a flatiron as late as the seventeenth century.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

TOURISTS IN BERLIN.

They Should Be Careful In Selecting a Boarding House.

A case has occurred in Berlin showing the unpleasant experiences which may occur to tourists who engage board in a boarding house not well recommended. Three American women were the victims.

In the new part of the town, the so called American quarter, a neat sign of "Pension" attracted the women, and they engaged board there. According to the German custom, they paid the boarding house charges a month in advance. Two days afterward the landlady went to a hospital, and the next day the domestic girl of all work took her departure. Food and service ceased, and the host, a count, moved into the attic for some reason unknown to the Americans.

The Americans protested that their money should be refunded or they should have food and service. The host told them he could supply neither as he had no money. The women consulted their friends and were advised to make the best of the bargain and camp out for the rest of the month.

Some days later the host appeared in their rooms and proceeded to remove the curtains from the windows. The women appealed to an American who happened to be calling, but the only result of his interference was a scuffle with the landlord, who knocked him out with a bunch of heavy keys.

Two of the women then sought police aid at the nearest station, a mile away. The officials laughed at them, telling them it was a private matter and no concern of theirs.

In the meantime the landlord returned with two men and took down the curtains, informing the women that he would be back at 5 o'clock the next morning to remove the furniture. The women then sought the aid of the American consul general, who advised them to move out quietly and offered them hospitality for the night. They accepted the offer, but did not get their things away before half past 3 in the morning.

Incidents like this are not rare in Berlin's American colony.—New York Sun.

What He Found Out.

An Italian journalist, Signor Tommaso Giloni, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he presented himself at the gates of the Cimarosa asylum and asked for an audience of the king of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran foul of the police and in the end found himself interned in the asylum. The doctors examined him and, finding him far from tractable, administered an emetic. Then they gave him a shower bath and next vaccinated the enterprising journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic," whose bona fides they evidently suspected, and brutally but unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was trepanning for a cancer on the brain. By this time Signor Tommaso Giloni thought the best he could do was to confess. This he did and found himself at the police station. The magistrate, however, released him, observing that he thought the doctors had administered sufficient punishment.

The Trolley In Japan.

Japan has been invaded by the trolley. Shades of the samurai! From misty dawn until the fireflies are astir one may now trolley around Tokyo and from there to Yokohama. No other trolley system on earth offers a more tempting and diversified program for its guests than this trolley ramble, for instance, which visitors to the Japanese capital are now taking at a cost of less than 50 cents. From any corner of Tokyo the trolley deposits one at the Shinagawa suburb, where the rural lines have their city terminus. The equipment is made up of heavy high powered cars, quite similar to those used in the same service in the United States. The different devices about the cars bear the names of patentees and manufacturers familiar to those who overhaul the rolling stock of any American company—Travel Magazine

A New Rifle Muffler.

The stir created by Maxim's murderous rifle silencer, which is really a muffler, not a silencer, has brought other inventors into the field. A Moore silencer is chronicled that is said to have many advantages over that of Maxim, not the least of which is its relative cheapness. The ordnance department of the army is now giving it a test. With a considerable crop of "silencers" it is probable that a really effective eliminator of the report of a rifle will eventually be evolved. The next war is thus likely to be fought in a deadly silence, far more terrifying than the roaring of the unmuzzled gunpowder of historic battlefields.—New York Press.

A King's Coin Collection.

Victor Emmanuel is considered, and rightly so, an exceedingly clever numismatist. A rather interesting story is told of the manner in which the king, while still little more than a child, acquired a taste for the science of numismatics. One day he received a soldo bearing the head of Pope Pius IX. A little later, finding another, he added it to the first, and in this way he collected fifteen. Meanwhile his father, King Humbert, presented him with about sixty pieces of old copper money, and thus was formed the nucleus of his collection.—McClure's Magazine.

RAN OVER DYNAMITE

Auto Party Has Thrilling Escape From Death in B.C.

Three Men Come Suddenly on Narrow Part of the Yale Road, Where a Workman Is Thawing Out Seven Sticks of Explosive — Chauffeur Dashes Over It and Dynamite Is Crushed by Wheels.

New Westminster, B.C., July 16.—While motoring over the Yale road an auto containing H. A. Eastman of New Westminster, H. Witt of North Vancouver, and Chauffeur J. Hunter, ran over seven sticks of dynamite, crushing three, which failed to explode, thus saving the lives of those in the machine.

The party had rounded a sharp bend in the road when a man who had apparently been standing on the side of the road, and, not seeing them coming, rushed toward them, waving an axe and shouting to them to keep back.

At the same time the chauffeur's attention was attracted by the actions of the man, he saw lying on the road only a few yards in front of the machine, seven sticks of dynamite. He was right on top of them; the road was narrow and the machine was traveling fast. He thought that the best and only chance he had was to pass over the sticks fast and give the dynamite the least weight possible. He put on full power. For the fraction of a second there was a period of horrible suspense as Hunter waited for what he thought was certain destruction, but the mighty explosion never came and the machine passed in safety.

When all looked back at the man who had come too late with his warning, they saw him sitting on the side of the road, his face buried in his hands, utterly collapsed under the great strain he had undergone. He had been conducting some road mending operations there and some of his dynamite had become congealed over night. There was not a great deal of travel over the road and he thought that if he put the sticks out in the warm road they would soon thaw.

Found 100 Pounds of Gold.

Haileybury, July 16.—In a letter received here yesterday from a mine manager in Porcupine it is stated that in Sudbury the Timmins people found one hundred pounds of gold nuggets on their property.

The find was made in a part of the property not being worked over. Where their shaft is, the Timmins people have gone down 100 feet and have struck rich ore at every foot.

The story of this marvelous find is authentic, for it is vouched for by the manager of a Porcupine mine owned by Burr E. Cartwright, the well-known and highly-respected president of the Temiskaming Cobalt Mine.

Word was received here yesterday also that on B. E. Cartwright's mine, which adjoins the Timmins property, 15 gold showings had been uncovered. This gold is in a vein which runs northeast and southwest. It is trenched for 20 feet and is 15 feet wide. The trenching has been slow, as there is 10 feet of earth over the vein.

New G.T.R. Branch.

Springfield, Mass., July 16.—Preliminary plans have been made by officers of the Grand Trunk Railway for a branch from Barrett's Junction, near Belchertown, to Springfield, in order to compete with existing lines for a large business in western freight from Springfield, Chicopee and Holyoke.

In view of the fact that the proposed line parallels the road which the New Hampden Railroad Co. intends to build and would also make the Grand Trunk a competitor of the Boston & Albany for western freight, there is a prospect for lively railroad war.

Current Gripped Him Tight.

Washington, July 16.—Joshua F. Myer, an assistant engineer in a street railway power house, fell against a big electric feeder yesterday, and while the magnet gripped him tight 600 volts coursed through his body. His fellow workmen saw Myers' form enveloped in sparks and flames tight against the big machine as if he had been fastened there for electrocution. When they pulled down the powerful load his charred body fell away lifeless.

Children Had Narrow Escape.

Clarkson, July 16.—Their pony becoming unmanageable as they were crossing a level crossing at the station here Thursday, four children had a narrow escape from serious injuries or death.

The pony dashed into a passing freight train and was badly cut up and was later shot. The children escaped without a scratch, they not even being thrown from the cart.

An Extraordinary Fatality.

New York, July 16.—A sheet of window glass, accidentally knocked from its frame while being washed, sailed obliquely through the air and slanted against the neck of Miss Lena Phillips, who was walking on the street below. She fell to the ground without an outcry, dead, almost decapitated.

Lost on the Prairie.

St. Laurent, Man., July 16.—Lost on the prairie since Wednesday evening, Maudie Hunter, aged 6 years, is being ceaselessly sought for by her parents and neighbors. The child was trying to find her way home from her grandmother's, where she was visiting.

AFRAID OF TYPHOID.

Officials Fear an Outbreak at Campbellton.

Campbellton, N.B., July 16.—What was feared to be a case of smallpox in the fire-stricken Restigouche town is said by Dr. Murray to be but chickenpox. The patient is a Russian, who came here on Wednesday from Prince Edward Island. He is in the hospital, though his case is mild. A little girl has developed a mild attack of typhoid, however, and there is a danger of diphtheria or typhoid breaking out, as the sanitary conditions leave a wide scope for improvement.

The militia have taken hold of this problem in the tented town and latrines have been placed in position and incinerators and garbage barrels will follow. Tents and blankets sent from the Dominion militia stores in St. John arrived yesterday, and the people are now encamped for the most part in a village of tents on high ground. They are fairly comfortable, and there is food enough for present need. Many people have left town and gone to friends in other places.

The relief stations fed many yesterday. The building of shacks for temporary business houses or dwellings continues, and there is a general air of improvemenet. The cheeriness of the people under their trials is remarkable. Insurance men now place the losses at $1,250,000 to $1,500,000. A good deal of petty thieving has been going on down town.

It turns out that no life was lost in Campbellton. The Doyle child supposed to be dead was taken to Kent Junction by a woman who went there for shelter. Daniel O'Keefe, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, and who was ill, was taken to Dalhousie, has since died there.

St. John, N.B., July 16.—It is suggested that the Provincial Government should guarantee the interest on the debt of the town of Campbellton, which amounts to $300,000, or take other means of lessening the burden. Governor Tweedie and Premier Hazen go up on Monday.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Earl Grey sailed for Canada from Liverpool yesterday.

Capt. Kenneth Beardwood, a well-known Montrealer, is missing.

No trace has been found of Dr. Crippen, whom the London police want on a charge of murdering his wife.

When King George opens Parliament next spring there will be places reserved for the High Commissioners of the four colonies.

William Watkins of Ardoch was struck by a flying board in a sawmill, which severed his jugular vein and caused his death.

Mary Allen, stewardess on the steamer City of Meaford, was missed, and her body was found by dragging in the harbor of Meaford.

Mrs. Cassie Ellis, formerly of Toronto, is under arrest at Pontiac, Mich., in connection with the shooting of Frank Bevier, to whom she was to have been married on July 24.

Too Lenient With Dufour.

Ottawa, July 16.—The Free Press, the Liberal organ, has this to say of the Dufour case: The officials of the immigration branch of the Interior Department possibly know their own business best, but we are convinced that the general opinion of the Canadian people will be that they have been too merciful in their treatment of the immigration inspector, Dufour, of Windsor, who has been convicted of discourtesy to passengers on a train coming east from Windsor a few weeks ago.

Mercy is all very well in its place, but surely that quality has been strained to the limit.

Dufour should, in the opinion of The Free Press, have been summarily dismissed from the service, not only as a punishment for his own offence, but also as a lesson to other officials of the public employ that politeness pays, and that Canada has no place for boors among her servants.

Issued a Manifesto.

Winnipeg, July 16.—The C.N.R. striking carmen are determined to hold out until they secure a better wage schedule, and a union officer has stated that nearly all the strikers had secured more remunerative employment, and he thought the company will have great difficulty in replacing their experienced men.

The men have issued a manifesto affirming that they had no other option than to apply for a conciliation board, and that the latter, disregarding the enhanced cost of living, adopted the schedule presented by Supt. S. J. Hungerford, with but the slightest alterations.

Muskoka Free Hospital.

Toronto, July 16.—Information has been received that the Dominion Government are about to open a post-office at the Muskoka Cottage Sanitorium. In this institution and the Muskoka Free Hospital, which is only a mile distant, about 200 patients are in residence. To secure admission to the Muskoka Free Hospital the only conditions necessary are to be poor and to have consumption in its early stages. The trustees are anxious to have it made known that an applicant seeking admission from any part of the province will be promptly admitted.

Will Not Use Mailed Fist.

Tokio, July 16.—Lieut.-Gen. Viscount Terauchi left yesterday for Seoul to assume the duties of Japanese resident-general of Korea. At the moment of departure he stated that Japan would not use the mailed fist in Korea or antagonize the interests of Korea or of those of foreign residents. Radical changes in the system of Government would, however, he thought, be necessary.

MORRIS STANDS SIXTH

Bowmanville Man Highest Canadian in Final Stage.

Lieut. Mortimer of Quebec Is Eighth in King's Prize Final List, and He and Morris Are Eligible to Shoot for Silver Medal—Steele Is Second in Grand Aggregate—Canadians Win Many Money Prizes.

Bisley Camp, July 16.—The official list of the final stage of the King's Prize places Sergt. Morris of Bowmanville in sixth place, and Lieut. G. Mortimer, Quebec, in eighth place, each thereby winning $75.

Three had scores of 200, three of 199, five of 198, eight of 197, twelve of 196, sixteen of 195, twenty-one of 194, and thirty-one of 192.

These with scores of 200 will shoot off for the silver medal, and Morris and Mortimer are among the number.

Four Canadians were among the prize winners in the competition for the St. George's Challenge Vase, first stage, winning $10 apiece; Mitchell, 140th; Clifford, 157th; Morris, 191st, and Freeborn, 212th.

Three Canadians won $5 apiece from the Birmingham Metal Munitions Co.: Bayles, 15th; Steele, 16th; King, 20th.

In the shooting for the silver cup and prizes donated by John McQueen & Co., three Canadians won $5 apiece; Bayles, 12th; Freeborn, 14th; Steele, 31st.

In the Armorers' Company competition Bayles repeated, coming 10th and again winning $5. Along with him were Richardson in 9th place, and Steck in 21st place, who won similar amounts.

In the Alexander Martin match, Freeborn, 5th, won $10; Bayles, 21st, won $5; Eastwood, 28th, won $5.

In the competition for the challenge cup put up by J. H. Steward, the Canadians who won are: Bayles, 10th, $10; Steele, 16th, $5; King, 22nd, $5; Sharpe, 27th, $5; Freeborn, 41st, $5; Crowe, 45th, $5.

In the shoot off for first place in the grand aggregate, Steele came second.

In the St. George's, at 600 yards, the Canadians won the following places and prizes: Mitchell 4th, Richardson 11th, Steele 16th, McKie 17th, Steele 18th, Stuart 22nd, Eastwood 27th, each won $5. At the 500 yards' range: Richardson 7th, McKie and Steck 11th, Eastwood 22nd, each won $5.

Fooled Again.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 16.—Investigation of the highly exaggerated story published in the Toronto papers about 37 men narrowly escaping from drowning in Ontario Power Co.'s waterway yesterday morning. That there is no truth in the story, which, no doubt, was the dream of some imaginary overheated newspaper reporter, who, 24 hours after a trivial happening, pen-painted a huge occurrence.

The night before last, when the engineers were testing a few feet of the new cement tub by filling it with water, the temporary bulkhead gave way and the watere passed on down through the new tube and tunnel way into the river, doing no damage. Not a single person was even in the way of danger.

For the Murderers of His Son.

New York, July 16.—By a codicil in the will of Henry Dexter, founder of the American News Co., who died on July 11, filed yesterday, the reward of $10,000 offered by Mr. Dexter for the arrest and conviction of the murderers of his son, Orlando Dexter, who was killed in the Adirondacks in 1903, is continued during the lives of his two executors and trustees.

Bequests to religious, charitable, literary and scientific institutions aggregate nearly $1,200,000.

Pretty Fast Flying.

Bournemouth, Eng., July 16.—J. Armstrong Drexel, a son of Anthony Drexel of London and Philadelphia, and the French aviator, Leon Morane, yesterday engaged in brilliant performances of over-sea speed flights. The start of the course was at the aerodrome, across the Solent in the direction of the Isle of Wight, thence around the Needles light house and back, a distance of 21 miles. The Frenchman covered the distance in 25 minutes, and Drexel in 34 minutes.

Boat Struck Cartridge.

Chicago, July 16.—The freight steamer Parks Foster is undergoing costly repairs as the result of an unusual accident. The other day, while coming down the river for Collingwood, Ont., the boat struck something on the river bottom, evidently a discarded dynamite cartridge or bomb, which exploded, making a hole 5 x 7 feet in the boat's bottom.

A Peculiar Accident.

Chatham, July 16.—The 12-year-old son of Wesley Greigg of this city met with a serious accident on Thursday evening while bathing in the River Thames. When the engine of a launch suddenly started Greigg was hanging on near the stern. His legs were sucked under and the fast revolving wheel struck his foot.

Princess Chimay at It Again.

Paris, July 16.—Clara Ward, formerly Princess Chimay, has formally begun proceedings against her husband, Peppino Ricciardi. The court made the customary efforts to effect a reconciliation, but without success.

Elevators and Tariff.

Winnipeg, July 16.—Continuing his western tour Sir Wilfrid Laurier expects to speak on grain elevators and the tariff next week.

COUNTING THE VOTE.

Grand Trunk Trainmen Silent Regarding Strike.

Montreal, July 16.—The votes of the Grand Trunk trainmen on the question as to whether or not there shall be a strike are still coming in to the headquarters here. Until they are all counted and analyzed the leaders of the men refuse to make any statement. It is believed that decisive action will be taken on Sunday night.

Stratford Deeply Interested.

Stratford, July 16.—The City Council, at a special meeting called last evening, authorized the sending of a telegram to the Minister of Labor asking that an effort be made to bring about a settlement between the G.T.R. Co. and the trainmen so as to avoid the threatened strike, which would seriously affect the city and its interests. A strike would probably mean the shutting down of the local shops, which employ in the neighborhood of a thousand men.

London Urges Intervention.

London, Ont., July 16.—As a result of a petition signed by over 400 London men employed by the Grand Trunk, the City Council, at a special meeting yesterday afternoon, decided to ask the Government to inquire into the strike situation. The Minister of Labor will be asked to have a conciliation board appointed. Supt. Treleaven, on behalf of the men, pointed out that the situation was critical, and that 500 men in the car shops here would be affected by a strike.

G. T. Michigan Men Will Strike.

Windsor, July 16.—A special from Corunna, Mich., last night says:—Because they were refused an increase of eighteen per cent. in pay all the employes of the Grand Trunk Railway in this state will go out on strike on Monday, causing a general tie-up of the road. The engineers and firemen will not participate in the strike, however, as their contract with the railway company is still in force. Agents and operators, it is understood, will go out with the trainmen.

Nearly Loses His Seat.

Toronto, July 16.—While Count de Lesseps, in his favorite "Scarabee," soared around like a huge eagle at a height of 3,200 feet, Ralph Johnston, in a Wright biplane, took wing and before he returned to earth had attained a height of 3,500 feet at the aviation meet yesterday. He seemed rather pleased to get back safe to terra firma, for he had encountered a wind, which, blowing at 75 miles an hour, according to his own estimate, gave him an uncomfortable experience.

At his extreme altitude, his machine took a dip, which, to the spectators below, appeared to be only four or five feet, but which in reality was nearly 200 feet. It was that sudden dip that made Johnston decide to come down, for it lifted him right up in his seat for some seconds, and nearly threw him out.

Johnston said he encountered two distinct currents of air, blowing in opposite directions and divided by a space in which it was quite calm.

Tried to Wreck Bridge.

Pittsburg, July 16.—A detonation rocked buildings and broke windows throughout the west end yesterday. Some heavy object came flying through the fog and punctured a big hole in the deck of the steamer Valiant lying in the Ohio River nearby. The mysterious missile then rolled off and sank. For some time the concussion, which was felt all over the city, was a mystery. Finally it was learned that an attempt had been made to blow up the west belt line's new bridge on West Carson street, because of the open-shop policy insisted upon by the contractors. The bridge wreckers escaped.

The contractors, the McClyntic-Marshall Construction Co., declared that since 1906, when the open-shop policy was inaugurated, no less than a dozen bridges under construction by them in New York, Buffalo, Chicago and other cities had been damaged by dynamite.

"Jack the Diver" Drowned.

Brockville, July 16.—A conspicuous figure along the waterfront for the past few years has been a character commonly known as "Jack the Diver," a middle-aged man of dissolute habits, but an excellent swimmer and diver, whose feats of remaining under water were nothing short of marvelous. Though proficient in the art of swimming, he lost his life yesterday in the river opposite the waterworks dock while diving for pig-iron, which he brought to the surface by means of making it fast to a rope. After one dive in 30 feet of water he remained down too long and drowned, though the body rose once almost to the surface and then disappeared. The deceased's proper name was Charles Cuinell, a French-Canadian, whose home was in Montreal.

Situation Critical.

Winnipeg, July 16.—Continued reports of crop damage in the Canadian West are responsible for further activity in the wheat market, with sharp advances in prices. The bulls were in control and quotations were pegged up steadily. July was most active and showed largest gains. It closed 117 5-8, as compared with 114 Thursday, a gain of nearly four cents. As compared with the close Wednesday, July is 8 1-2c. higher; October 7 1-2c. and December 7 5-8c. higher.

The situation is critical, according to leaders of the bull party, and every day of hot weather adds to the extent of the damage. Manitoba seems to hove been the principal sufferer from heat, but lack of moisture in all the provinces makes the condition of the growing grain the subject of concern.

The value of water power is not so great as the investing public may think, according to "The Engineering News." "The value of undeveloped water powers is today much less than it was 15 to 20 years ago. The cause of this decrease in value of water power is the great reduction in the cost for which power can now be developed by other prime movers."

Only three days ago John D. Rockefeller said at Cleveland that a new religion is needed—a universal religion. And here comes an announcement from Washington that a new religion has been incorporated there and will build a church.

It is something new in religion, most of which take a serious view of life and destiny and discipline. It is cheerier than Christian Science, which abolishes everything unpleasant by teaching it as non-existent, a la Mikado. This new organization presents "the religion of happiness" and goes in for fun. Music, merriment and laughter are announced as components of its creed. It announces in its incorporation papers the definite setting aside the hell of the old regime which is declared to be "an idea adroitly employed to frighten people into the church." It turns on the light after this fashion:

"The new religion recognizes that crime is hatched where there is no mirth. Depravity flourishes in the shades of darkness. Music and merriment will be important elements in the religion of the future."

The new church is based on the teachings of Theodore Valient, an evangelist. It is said the movement is backed by wealthy and influential people. Members of the personal liberty league are also backing it. Happiness will be the chief thing thought for. According to the papers of incorporation, "there will be no blue laws in the religion of the future. In the good book is related how God tried to bring happiness to His people by smiling upon them, and such being the case we must establish a church to be directed on a new basis and with a new doctrine." If it can be established on new facts all will be well. That is where new religions are apt to fall down.

This should please Mr. Rockefeller, however. A religion of light should have use for kerosene.

GETTING MONEY FROM HER HUSBAND

Few people who live in the suburbs to the north of Philadelphia do not know "Pete" Jenkins, a ticket agent in one of the railroad stations. "Pete" is a peculiar man, and living in a town where nearly all the residents are modest and unassuming, his idiosyncrasies cannot help but stand out in clear and strong relief.

Every week when he gets his salary he extracts $3 from the envelope, handing it to his wife with the usual admonition not to spend it foolishly. The balance from week after week he carries around with him tied in a red calico cloth. At night when he is about to retire he places the bundle of money in a neat wooden casket and takes it to bed with him.

"Pete" has become a somnambulist. One night last week his wife awakened and found him walking about the room groping with his hands and muttering to himself.

With the intention of waking him up and getting him back to bed she walked over and touched him on the shoulder. "Go out of this cage," he shouted at her in his sleep. "If you want to get a ticket you'll have to get in line with the rest."

A sudden idea struck the woman. She walked over toward him and touched him on the shoulder.

"I don't want a ticket," she said, "all I want is my change. I gave you a $20 bill for a ticket to Philadelphia and you gave me change for a five." The old man went over to the bed pulled out the key of the casket and handed her the change which she said was due to her.—Philadelphia Times.

A Long Motor Trip.

The Yorkton, Sask., Times in its issue of the 7th inst., had the following item:

Dr. T. Caldwell arrived home on Monday night, having driven his powerful No. 10 McLaughlin Buick car from Belleville, Ont., a distance of 2217 miles in 16 days, averaging 138½ miles a day.

During the trip, Doctor and Mr. Caldwell passed through Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Grand Forks and many other American cities and on their arrival in Winnipeg, created considerable interest amongst motor men and were assured that they had established a record for the distance.

With the exception of a puncture or two and a broken spring, necessitating but brief delays the long overland trip was accomplished without mishap, and the intrepid Yorktonians declare they had a most enjoyable trip. They are certainly looking well after the journey.

Mining in Hastings.

Hastings mining region was visited by Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Minister of Mines and Mr. Miller, Provincial Geologist, who declared themselves well pleased with what they had seen, and the Minister promised to do all that lay in his power to encourage the mining industry in this region.

And well might the minister make the promise which he did, for in variety of product the Hastings mining region is unequalled. In no other portion of the world in a territory of equal extent is there so great a variety of mineral—metallic and non-metallic—profitably produced as there is in the northern township of Hastings and the counties of Addington and Peterborough. The product includes gold, copper, iron, lead, arsenic talc, asbestos, pyrites, actinolite, slate, marble, sodalite, corundum, and in the southern township of Hastings cement rock and building stone of the very best quality.

Mining operations have been greatly hampered by lack of cheap power, but now this want is being supplied by means of hydro-electric energy, and the mining industry is now entering upon a career of prosperity which cannot fail to be of great benefit to the county and to the province as well.—Trenton Courier.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

THE WORLD'S GREATEST MEDICINE

The True Elixir of Life

Aids Digestion, Stimulates the Circulation, Invigorates the Brain, Builds Nerve Tissue, Tones up the Heart, Insures Refreshing Sleep and Prolongs life. It is a most wonderful Remedy in the Prevention and cure of Dysentery, Cramps, Cholera, Congestion, Diarrhoea, Chills, Fevers, Heat Prostrations and all Other Summer Complaints.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, producing a liquid food, tonic and stimulant, requiring no digestion, in the form of medicinal whisky.

1860—just a half century ago—the formula of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey was discovered. It was also discovered that it was a great curative agent in the treatment of all summer ills and in throat, lung and stomach troubles.

The merit and honesty of an article that has been before the public for such a length of time cannot be questioned. Scientists have tested it, chemists have analyzed it, and always found it pure and full of medicinal virtue; doctors have prescribed it, ministers of the Gospel, temperance advocates and men and women in all walks of life have used it, and all indorse it as the most effective tonic stimulant that nourishes the body, stimulates the circulation of the blood and acts as an aid to digestion, thus keeping the entire system in a normal, healthy condition and stopping the inroads of disease and old age.

During these fifty years some chemists and other dealers, who were interested in products which they claimed to be "just as good as" Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, have done everything in their power to discredit. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and the great work it has done for humanity, but without success. The fame of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has spread the world over, and stands to-day one of the most celebrated and most successful medicines known.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY — never in bulk. Look for the trade mark the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.25 a large bottle. Write Medical Department, N. Y., for doctor's advice and an illustrated medical booklet containing testimonials and common sense rules for health, both sent free.

RADIANT HAIR

New York Society Women's Hair Matched Only by Parisians.

While much attention is given to choicest gowns by New York society women, the turbulent fad just now is the care of the hair.

For many years the clever women of Paris have been famed for the magnificent beauty of their hair.

"Glorious hair", a Virginian calls it; "so radiant and luxuriant that it not only attracts but fascinates and compels unstinted admiration."

But now that the elite of New York ever anxious to improve their beauty, have learned that Parisian Sage, a remarkable and almost marvelous hair nourisher and beautifier, is almost entirely responsible for the charming hair of the ladies of France, the demand for it has become enormous.

Parisian Sage is now sold all over Canada and in Belleville by J. S. McKeown who is glad to guarantee it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. Large bottle 50 cents.

Canadian Reforms Finances.

The part that newspaper men sometimes play in public affairs has been demonstrated by certain events in New York recently. As the outcome of reform in the financing of New York City there was a reduction in the amount of money required to administer the city government for the first three months of this year of nearly $22,000,000, and a consequent saving to the city of $240,000 in interest charges, as compared with the same period of 1909. This new method of handling the public funds was the direct result of a series of illuminative articles written for The New York Tribune by the well-known Canadian journalist, William Richmond Smith. Mr. Smith has been a member of the editorial staff of The Tribune for some time and has lately won wide recognition as an expert on municipal finance. The subject is not a new one with him for it will be remembered that some years ago when a resident of Montreal he went to England at the request of a number of leading business men and made an impartial investigation of the working of municipal ownership. The result of his enquiry was published in book form and the volume is one of the most thorough expositions of the pros and cons of the subject extant.

When Will Niagara Run Dry.

It is stated that a comparison of gauge records for a period of twenty years shows that the land surrounding the great lakes is being gradually tilted from northeast to southwest at such a rate that of two points 100 miles apart the northern rises five inches with reference to the southern in one hundred years. At Chicago the lake level rises about one inch in ten years. It is predicted, therefore, that should this movement continue in about 3,000 years all the upper lakes will discharge into the Illinois River, the Detroit and St. Clair rivers will flow backward, carrying the water of Lake Erie into Lake Huron, and the Niagara river will run dry.

THE STICK CAME BACK.

Coleridge Was In the Habit of Losing and Recovering It.

Of walking sticks there is no end. For interesting sticks, however, the one which Coleridge was in the habit of losing during his tramping days must take first place. The philosopher was never happy till he had got it back. He sent the crier round. Here is the cry, as noted by Mr. Lucas in one of his essays: "Missing, a curious walking stick. On one side it displays the head of an eagle, the eyes of which represent rising suns and the ears Turkish crescents. On the other side is the portrait of the owner in woodwork. Around the neck is a Queen Elizabeth's ruff in tin. All down it waves the line of beauty in very ugly carving."

And then came the appeal and warning note: "If any gentleman (or lady) has fallen in love with the above described stick and secretly carried off the same he (or she) is hereby earnestly admonished to conquer a passion the continuance of which must prove fatal to his (or her) honesty. And if the said stick has slipped into such a gentleman's (or lady's) hand through inadvertence he (or she) is requested to rectify the mistake with all convenient speed. God save the king!" The stick came back!—London Chronicle.

The Early Circus.

Leaving out of count the great circuses of Rome and Antioch and coming down to something of modern times, the first circus in England was on a footpath known as Halfpenny Hatch, in the Waterloo road, London. There, in 1770, Astley's first performance was given, with the aid of a drum, two fifes and one clown. A charge of sixpence was made for the front standing places. There was no building and not even a tent, but merely a ring of ropes and stakes. Primitive as were the arrangements, Astley soon attracted good audiences and was able to add to his program conjuring, transparencies, vaulting and tumbling, with displays of fireworks. In course of time he was able to hire an inclosed ground and erected seats under a substantial roof. He called the place Astley's amphitheater riding house.

Fooled the King.

In one of Sir Richard Francis Burton's rare collections of ancient Arabian stories is a story of how the king went into the dark among his sleeping slaves and detected the man he was after by putting his head upon all their breasts and listening to the tumult of the heart. The king cut off a lock of the culprit's hair, so he could tell him next day. But what did the sly rascal do but sneak up and cut every other slave's hair. When all the slaves were mustered next day before the throne the king saw he was beaten by a master mind and said, "Don't dare do it again." The king ought to have tried the Chinese test by giving them dry rice grains to chew. In fright the saliva will not flow, and the culprit has to spit his rice out dry.—New York Press.

DANCING STARS.

The Twinklers Seem to Jump When Viewed Through a Telescope.

One of the most interesting things appearing in the telescope when that instrument is pointing heavenward is the appearance of jumping stars. Of course we can see stars twinkle without a telescope, but with a telescope they may be seen to jump and actually to dance. The cause is the same—mixing currents of light and heavy air causing refraction or bending of the rays of light coming from the star. We can see the same phenomenon by looking at a small object in a room through the air directly over a hot radiator. The object seems to jump and dance as if playing hide and seek with itself.

This jumping in the telescope or twinkling to the naked eye has also been explained by what is called interference. If two sources of light are placed close to each other, then on a screen placed properly we can catch an alternate band of white and dark lines. Of course if the eye be placed at a dark line it can see neither source of light. The production of these dark lines is accomplished by different light waves reaching the screen in opposite phases so as to blot out or cancel the effect due to each. In like manner it can be shown that if the star has polychromatic light it can and has actually been observed to change color from this effect alone.

The best time to observe this effect of star dancing is on a cold, crisp night. The telescope should be pointed to a twinkling star as near the horizon as can be found, as to see a star on the horizon we have to look through much more atmosphere than to see one in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied currents.—St. Louis Republic.

Boosting Moncton.

Certainly the mushroom towns of the prairie can teach the staid cities of the East a few things—in the matter of municipal advertising, for instance. There is hardly a town in the West minus a boost club, the Greater Regina Club, formed a few weeks ago, being the most noticeable of the latest publicity organizations, in the wheat country; fat salaries, five thousand up, are being paid by the new cities to advertising experts. But the East is waking up. Particularly maritime Canada has gone in for hustling. Front page editorials are preaching sermons on action—Moncton, N.B., in point of fact. There the other night was brought into inception the Greater Moncton Club; object, "Build, Boom and Boost Moncton, and make this district the Manchester of the Maritime Provinces." The prime boosters of Moncton have outlined their program. They would show prospective manufacturers the beauties of their town, fan the flame of patriotic fervor among the citizens, and best of all, "Make the city a more attractive place to live in." Excellent ideals, those of Moncton. Why should not the New Brunswick town take on a Manchester aspect? What need of young Moncton chaps piking out West when their home town has stores of natural resources which don't need a Conservation Commission to point out; not forgetting a snug little harbor that might be developed for a few dollars?

ORANGE MEAT

IS MADE FROM THE WHOLE WHEAT.

No other cereal contains and furnishes more nutriment to the human system.

Oroage Meat and Milk is a Perfect Food.

In Flour Too Much Starch Produces Heat

Starch and Gluten are the two Big Things in flour.

But too much starch, Madam, makes your bread heavy, soggy, hard to digest.

Starch alone never yet made bone, and brain, and brawn; never yet made energy, health, force.

A fat producer is starch, a heat producer, a weight producer—unwelcome summer visitors, the hotter the day the more unwelcome.

Only gluten and proteid produces muscle, stamina, rich red blood.

Buy a flour with enough gluten to balance the starch—buy FIVE ROSES.

Your cooking will bring, health, strength, with the least tax on the family's digestive apparatus.

There will be no more complaints from an outraged stomach.

Because, you see, FIVE ROSES is milled essentially from the hardest, purest Manitoba wheat—the wheat which is hard and flinty just because it is saturated with glutinous proteids and has so very little starch compared with wheats that are weak and white and mushy.

Of soft wheat there is absolutely none in FIVE ROSES—your breadstuffs contain the least starch, the most gluten.

Your summer eating is more tempting, more palatable, more digestible.

No regrets before eating—no regrets while eating—no regrets after eating.

FIVE ROSES is the best flour for winter cooks, but for summer cooks it is indispensable.

How about YOU!

"I have used the bicycle to quite an extent during the past fifteen or sixteen years and still use it almost daily. I consider it not only a great convenience from a business standpoint, but appreciate very much the stimulus of the exercise derived from its use."

HERBERT OSBORN, M-Sc., Director Lake Laboratory, Sandusky; Professor, Zoology and Entomology, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio; Author.

This is a black and white copy of the old-time soster of the "Cleveland." It was the herald of the "Bicycle Age" and to-day it is a leader in the big "Bicycle Revival."

The "Clevland" has always been the leader. Apart from the splendid quality of the material used in its construction, Cleveland has all the new inventions that have helped to bring bicycling back as the popular means of healthy exercise.

If you get all the exercise and fresh air that nature demands every day of your life, you are going to be a very young-old man. And its great to feel "young" when you are old.

Bicycling will do more for you in this respect than any other form of pleasurable exercise. And a Good Bicycle gives your outing "Pullman comfort."

"Nor rural sights alone, but rural sounds, exhilarate the spirit and restore the tone of languid nature.—Cowper.

"What was true in Cowper's time is still more true to-day, and the bicycle has made it possible for all of us to go into God's country and refresh both body and soul."

DR. LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor, "Christian Herald," New York City.

THe HYGIENIC CUSHION FRAME—If there is one invention more than another in the Bicycle line that has helped to popularize wheeling, it's the Hygienic Cushion Frame. "Makes all roads smooth," is the slogan that carries it to popularity, and it has lived up to the advance notice. The Cushion Frame gives "Pullman comfort" to bicycling.

The Canadian Navy.

"Call it a tin-pot navy if you like, but it's our own, with the King at its head."

So exclaimed Sir Wilfrid in a speech delivered in the west, when discussing the Navy question. What dolts and idiots he must have considered his hearers. "Our own with the King at its head," sounds well, but under his policy it is worse than nonsense. The King, which means his minister of war, would have nothing to say in the disposition of the Canadian Navy in time of war, until Sir Wilfrid through Parliament had expressed his approval of the war, and given his consent that the Canadian Navy might take part in it. That's his declared policy. He, so far as war is concerned, places himself and Canada in the position of a foreign nation. Every time he opens his mouth and refers to this subject the more transparent it is, that his old aim is independence.

Words of Caution To Young Mothers.

Mothers must keep guard over the health of their little ones during the summer months. Summer is an anxious time for all mothers, but more especially for young mothers. It is the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children. It is then that stomach and bowel troubles come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes there is any danger, the little one may be beyond aid. The mother must take strict caution to keep her little one's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine can do this so quickly and thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets should always be kept in the house. An occasional dose will keep baby well or if illness comes on suddenly the Tablets will quickly remove the cause and make baby well and happy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TO KEEP ON SPENDING

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Promises to Do So Profusely.

In Torrid Meeting at Morden, Man., the Premier Discusses the Hudson Bay Route—It Will Shorten Distance to Europe For Wheat by 400 Miles and Will Give Western Canada a New Trade Outlet.

Morden, Man., July 16.—Under a zinc roof, with the prairie sun scorching everything to a crisp, the thermometer hovering around 95, Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed a crowd of over 1,200 yesterday.

Despite the intense heat, which visibly affected Sir Wilfrid, he spoke with animation.

Morden is situated in Lisgar County, 67 miles southwest of Winnipeg, near the international border, and comprises part of the belt which has been affected by the dry weather. For the most part the district traversed by the railway presented a parched appearance. Half grown wheat met the eye in every direction, and the soil crumbled in the hand to a fine powder. Dark in appearance, it looks at first to be full of moisture, but close examination indicates that the virtue is almost dried out. Without rain, the yield over the district will be only half, but experienced farmers declare that showers would, even now, repair a great deal of the damage. What is said here only applies to the part of Southern Manitoba, over which observations have been made. The northern crops are in better condition.

"You do nothing by halves in this country," began the Prime Minister, "and when you give a warm greeting it is warm both inside and out. While the conditions are different in the east, there must not be any antagonism between the east and the west, and what is for the benefit of one is for the benefit of all. That is why I am with you on this occasion."

"We have spent money profusely, but shall continue to do so. It is not for the benefit of the east or the west, it is for the whole country."

They had just commenced the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, remarked Sir Wilfrid, which was the goal of the west. This would shorten the route to the markets of the world by 400 miles.

Answering the criticism why they should build in opposition to the St. Lawrence route, he said it was not enough for Canada to have only one outlet. She should have ones to the north, east and west.

Sir Wilfrid said that he had been asked to discuss the controversy over the Manitoba boundaries, and declared that if Mr. Roblin had been so anxious to reach a disposition of that question as he was to rush on the elections a few weeks ago, it would have been settled long ago. In the proposed settlement Sir James Whitney did not get all he wanted, asserted the Prime Minister, but relied upon the patriotism, commonsense and good spirit of the Dominion Government.

Hon. G. P. Graham spoke at considerable length. He stated that $366,000,000 was invested in railways west of Lake Superior, excluding the G.T.P. "Water transportation," he said, "enabled the people to get the best possible rates, and the Government proposes to spend millions more to see that you have the cheapest of all routes, so long as navigation is open, in order that you may get the best possible results for the products of the soil and factory." For equal distances under similar conditions, rates in the United States were for from one-quarter to one-third higher than in Manitoba. The Hudson Bay route would solve the live stock transit problem and land Canadian farm products in Liverpool in prime condition.

No Definite Rules Then.

London, July 16.—At The Hague conference J. S. Ewart, continuing for Great Britain, argued that the United States was wrong in asserting that in 1866 Great Britain had recognized that the United States had the right to fish in the Great Bays. Secondly, the word "bays" in the treaty of 1818 should be taken in its geographical sense, because the word did not then possess a judicial signification, as definite rules of international law respecting bays were not in existence at that time, and Britain then claimed sovereignty and absolute jurisdiction over the fisheries of its possessions far beyond the territorial limit.

The Broken Trust

Mr. Grey smiled quietly. 'You speak like a soldier, Captain Chandos,' he said, "and not like a lawyer. It shall be as you like."

At Cowes Lord Damar sat at breakfast alone and not in the best of humor. The funds were getting low again; he missed Sir Alan's well-filled purse, and could not imagine what nonsense Chandos had taken into his head about the marriage.

The bright sunshine and shining sea had no pleasure to the man who had frittered away his life with sin and folly.

He picked up his morning correspondence ,and with an exclamation of annoyance ,he recognized Vivian's handwriting.

"More nonsense," he said; "that man wants Blanche for himself, but he shall not have her."

Excellent coffee, strongly flavored with something stronger ,and more excellent still, brought him into a more genial frame of mind.

Quickly his eyes traveled over the letter's contents.

"So Vivian wants me to come up to town immediately and meet him at his chambers. He has news that will surprise and interest me as much as it has him," he muttered, and his first impulse was to utter a very unorthodox word. His first thought was that some great money trouble had occurred, some proceedings were to be taken over one or other of the money debts that hung like millstones around his neck.

"Of course I must go," he said to himself; "there is no help for it," and he made a mental resolve to pass his time at Belgrave Lodge, where, for his daughter's sake, he would be a welcome guest.

"Blanche," he said, as an hour later he stood ready equipped for his journey, "I am going to town ;some one of those hateful bills, I suppose. I shall see Sir Alan, of course, and, my dear girl, if it be possible, I shall make some defineite arrangement with him over the marriage. I cannot stand this kind of thing much longer. You will be ready at any time, I suppose?"

"Time is all alike to me," replied Lady Blanche, wearily; and, though Lord Damar detested all sentiment, her face and tone haunted him until London sights and sounds drove both away.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Closing In.

It was with something like surprise that Lord Damar looked at the little council assembled in the captain's room.

"Mr. Grey!" he exclaimed. "I did not expect to see you. What has gone wrong?"

Vivian introduced Paul Westerne to him, and Lord Damar looked at him in unmitigated astonishment, wondering what on earth an artist had to do with his affairs.

"This looks a solemn committee meeting," he said, with his usual half-languid sneer.

"It is a solemn meeting. Before it is broken up you will find there is a great injustice to be punished—a great wrong to be set right."

Lord Damar resigned himself wearily. It was no affair of his; the words "justice," "right," and "wrong" were not attractive to him.

He felt vexed that he had been summoned from such comfortable quarters on other people's business; but indifference and weariness both, died away at Vivian's first question.

"Lord Damar, I must ask you for form's sake, have you ever doubted the identity of Sir Alan Aynsley, or suspected him of being an imposter?"

Lord Damar positively sprang from his chair with the agility of a youth of twenty.

"Never!" he cried. "Why should I? The lawyers managed the matter, and surely they would make no mistake."

"We fear there has been a grand mistake," said Captain Chandos. "You as father of Lady Blanche, have as much at stake as I have."

Lord Damar's face grew very pale. A mistake over his daughter's marriage would be fatal to him.

"Listen," said Vivian, "and you shall hear all that is known. The discovery is due to Mr. Westerne's daughter, who from the moment she saw him felt convinced he was not the real Alan Wayne."

"Sure to be a woman in it," muttered the earl, sotto voce; "there could be no mischief without."

Clearly, plainly, concisely, Captain Chandos laid before the earl all the evidence against Sir Alan. It was strong, yet not proof conclusive.

"Convictions and beliefs and portraits are very well," said Lord Damar, "but not sufficient to oust a man out of his estates. If there is anything in it you must produce stronger evidence than that."

"We have evidence here no man can refute," said Vivian, holding up a folded paper; 'it is a voice from the grave.

He gave the paper to Lord Damar, who read it attentively, and as he did so the expression of his face changed.

"This looks grave," he said, "where was it found?"

They gave him the history of the discovery, and Lord Damar sat down again, all his confident, half-sneering vivacity gone.

"Good Heavens!" he exclaimed, "what will Blanche say?"

"There are two questions," said Captain Chandos; "one is ,where is Alan Wayne? That is answered; the second is, who is this man? Gentlemen, I remember going to meet him when he paid his first visit to Lord Damar. I drove him to Woodale, and, during that drive, he mentioned his friend Paul Lynne, who is supposed to be dead and buried."

Despite the solemnity of the words a long, low whistle escaped Lord Damar's lips.

"I have expressed to Mr. Grey my dislike to fighting in the dark. I should prefer going to see Sir Alan at once ;of what use is waiting for a quantity of legal forms and ceremonies Let us fight the battle as man to man. If, despite this that seems so sure, he can prove his right, I will be the first to beg his pardon; if he cannot——"

The soldier did not finish his sentence, but in his eyes flashed a dangerous gleam, and his strong hands were clinched together.

'If he be an imposter, who for all these long months has kept me from a just inheritance, let him look to himself," continued Vivian; and those who watched him were glad to be ranked among his friends and not among his foes.

Undervaluing Goods.

Kingston, July 16.—Infraction of shipping regulations has got United States Consul Johnson into a controversy with a number of local shippers, who have been invoicing goods to be shipped across the border at the price they bought the goods at, instead of at the market value. Bill Huissel's Speech.

There have lately been several references in the press to the address of Bill Huissel, the shanty boss of Chaudiere, to the Duke of Cornwall and York (now King George V.). It was to the latter the most enjoyable episode of the royal tour of 1901. Bill started to speak in French, but the cry "En Anglais," "En Anglais," made him change off. He said:

"I half worked in de bush all ma life. Messyer Edouard he's give me job wen young man. Barn by I see Messyer Edouard mak a heap of monie, an' I think maself I mak monie also, but I mak big mistake instead. I tak de job in de bush, an' pretty soon I mak start in business for maself. After while I found out I had mak $17,000 debt, an' wors nor dat, I loos ma shantie, an' hav nothing left. You know wen I was small ma modder she say if I don pay ma debts here a will hav to pay some place helse. So I go to Messyer Edouard, and he say, 'William, come work for me again,' and I go to work for him; but how am goin' to pay dat $17,000? Ma modder say, 'William, you be good man an' pay your debt.' So I go an' mak ma confess, and the pries shall say, 'Better pay your debt.' But a can't pay dat $17,000, and a go to God an' say, 'You mak me good man an' give me chance for mak little home. Now you show me how to mak $17,000. I don can pay that monie, so I give you de $17,000, and you do what you like with it.' I build shantee for a king and queen, and maybe when William he's got job, he go over to the hol countree, and the King he'll give him job."

In Westminster Abbey.

Fox's tomb is perhaps the most ridiculous in the abbey, but others run it hard—the naked figure of General Wolfe supported by one of his staff in full regimentals and receiving a crown from Victory; William Wilberforce apparently listening to Sheridan telling a comic tale and contorting his features in the endeavor not to laugh; the Sir Cloudesley Shovel ,in periwig and Roman toga, which excited the mirth even of contemporaries, and all the monuments erected by the East India Company, with palm trees and other tropical exuberances, to the memory of great soldiers, like Sir Eyre Coote. From the point of view of good taste a dictator would be justified in dismissing these and many more to the stonemason's yard.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,2,8 square miles.

It is seldom wise to give soothing syrup to fretful babies. The cries of the little folks are apt to be signs of indigestion. Nyal's Laxena is probably all that is required in such cases. It brings instant relief by regulating the bowels and the stomach. In extreme cases

M'GILL'S NEW SCHOOL.

Medical Faculty Has a Fine Modern Home.

When the 500 or more students in medicine of McGill assemble for another year's work in the autumn they will find the new $800,000 Medical Faculty Building prepared to receive them.

It is pretty safe to say that none of the universities of the world will afford its students and professors a more practically designed and complete home for their avocations.

As befits a modern medical training college, the first consideration of the builders has been hygienic.

The vaulted passages and corridors are wainscotted with white tiling, which finds place also around doors and windows, where wooden moulding is usually employed. Where wood is used at all, it is old oak, chemically treated to resist fire. The lesson of the disastrous fire which destroyed the old building and its valuable museum has not been overlooked.

The administration department and faculty room are on the McGill College avenue side of the building, and are beautifully finished in oak. Adjoining on the campus front are students' libraries and reading rooms of equally sumptuous design and finish, the leaded windows bearing in colored escutcheons names famous in medical and surgical science from Aesculapius and Galen down.

There are two striking tablets also in the upper corridors, to the memory of G. T. Holmes, M.D., LLD., and R. P. Howard, M.D., LLD., both former deans of the faculty.

The class rooms and smaller lecture rooms are on the campus front side on the three stories.

The two extensions, which run almost close to the Royal Victoria Hospital, are devoted on the Avenue West side to pathology, chemistry and anatomy respectively. Dentistry also finds a place on the ground floor, several demonstration and class rooms being devoted to that branch of the science.

In the basement the subjects for dissection will be disposed in airtight receptacles, and preserved by an alcoholic arrangement of great practibility. An enclosed special elevator will convey subjects to the dissecting room on the third story. These arrangements are of peculiar interest, and represent the latest word in anatomical education..

The eastern extension is fitted up for museum purposes. Its distinguishing feature is a central lighting tower, surrounded by massive pillars, and low-tiled walls, with handsome hatchments displaying the special coat of arms of the faculty. The two lower floors will contain the pathological specimens, the uppermost Dr. Shepherd's collection.

These large apartments are at present being fitted up with steel and glass air-tight cases of uncommon design by Messrs. M Edwards and Co., of Syracuse, N.Y.

The building itself was erected by Messrs. P. Lyall and Co., and is of fireproof construction, stone, tiles and steel being the structural material employed. Like so much that is connected with the upbuilding of what is best in Montreal, the beneficence of Lord Strathcona is represented in the new structure, as is the honorable memory of other merchant princes of that city.

Admiral's Long Career.

One of the few Canadian officers of the British navy arrived recently in Montreal, where he was honored with the degree of LL.D. from McGill University. He is Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas, Grand Commander of the Victorian Order and a K.C.B., since 1902. He was born at Quebec in 1842, the son of George Mellis Douglas, of that city. He was educated at Quebec High School and as a boy of fourteen entered the navy as a midshipman on the "Boscawen," flagship of the North America and West Indies squadron. He won rank successively, as follows: Lieutenant, 1861; commander, 1872; captain, 1880; vice-admiral, 1901. Since 1907, he has been on the retired list. He served in the naval brigade in Congo and Gambia in 1860 and from 1873 to 1875 was director of the Japanese Imperial Naval College; he saw service in Egypt in 1884 and was commander-in-chief of the squadron in the East Indies in 1898 and 1899; a Lord of the Admiralty from 1899 to 1902, commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic and West Indies squadron from 1902 to 1904, and commander at Portsmouth, 1904 to 1907. He held the honorary post of A.D.C. to the late Queen Victoria, is a Knight of the Legion of Honor (France), 1st Class Rising Sun (Japan), and 1st class, Order of Naval Merit (Spain), He has many friends in Canada.

What He Was Doing.

It is said that some years ago a mayor of Toronto who was anxious to appear extremely busy, made a point of attempting to surprise certain officials, in order to catch them in neglect or idleness. This course of action on the part of the chief magistrate did not lead to an overwhelming popularity, and he soon found himself regarded with coldness. He persisted in his over-zealous vigilance, however, but made no alarming discoveries.

One morning he arrived at the City Hall at the hour of eight and proceeded to the office of Dr. Charles Sheard, to find that dignitary in his shirt sleeves absorbed in the toils of the day.

"Dear me," exclaimed His Worship mildly. "What are you doing here so early?"

"Minding my own business," was the laconic reply.

Want Monuments Collected.

Buried at the old cemeteries in Sandy Hill, Ottawa, which the city is converting into a public park, are ten or twelve British soldiers, former sappers and miners, who came here and built the Rideau Canal locks prior to 1830. Now the city is making the change, Mayor Hopewell has received the suggestion from Charles King and others that military men of the city should unite in collecting the monuments of these old soldiers, one of whom, Reuben Traveller, fought at Trafalgar under Nelson, and have them placed at Beechwood Cemetery.

CURE YOURSELF AT HOME IN COMFORT

As a bodily affliction Obesity often seems to be inexplicable, so rapid is the increase of weight and bulk, even in cases where the victims are studiously temperate in eating, etc. There is evidently a predisposition that way, and neglect only tends to confirm it. The remedies tried may have grievously disappointed you.

Here is one that will not do so, and you may get the ingredients at your druggist's and mix them yourself without trouble: Ask for 1-2 oz. Marmola, 1-2 oz. Peppermint Water. Shake together in a good-sized clean bottle. Simply take this mixture after meals and at bedtime, one teaspoonful to the dose, and give yourself no further trouble; the superfluous fat will subside with wonderful rapidity.

Dieting need not worry you in the least, nor is violent exercising at all desirable. Wasting methods of weight reductions are not natural. Try the pleasant treatment above described for a week or so, and you will be fit, strong and free from all bodily discomfort, besides having regained correct weight and a shapely figure.

A New Kind of Insanity.

Many weird things come to the attention of the men who look after the immigrants. Especially do the officials who have charge of the deporting of undesirables not find their lives monotonous. Romance looms up every week—scene of tragedy, scenes of comedy. An interesting incident occurred the other day—something rather new for Canada. A big train crept into Ottawa populated mostly by Russians. There was nothing in that to cause cub reporters to prick up their ears; many incoming foreigners hiking for the prairies are given a glimpse of the capital city en route. But this train was not westward bound. It was pulling in the opposite direction—full of deports, so the officials said. They also calmly said in answer to journalistic queries, that all the foreigners on the train were demented. Nor were they joking. Of course, there are many forms of insanity. Brainstorm was not one of the symptoms of this. The Russians were afflicted with a peculiar malady common to those of the Slavic temperament—intense homesickness. Nostalgia is the name in the psychology books for it. The Canadian Immigration Department has so far, except in rare instances, been saved nostalgia troubles. However, other Governments have been worried. The United States spends a large sum annually returning Russians who yearn for their little villages, out of place on the western heath.

THE Y. M. C. A. MEN NOW FEEL GAY-- OVER 41 THOUSAND CAME THEIR WAY

GREATEST FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN IN BELLEVILLE'S HISTORY CAME TO A CLOSE LAST NIGHT — IN TEN DAYS THE CAPTAINS AND THEIR HELPERS RAISED $41,332.25 — ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING AT THE ROOMS LAST NIGHT — TOTAL AMOUNTS SECURED BY EACH TEAM.

Everybody cheer!

The greatest financial campaign ever inaugurated in this city was last evening brought to a successful issue, and the hearts of those who were engaged in it were filled to overflowing with joy at the result of the venture.

Ten days ago, as everybody knows, a campaign was launched to raise $40,000 for a new Y. M. C. A. building, and there were not a few who shook their heads and said it was impossible. The pessimists, like the poor, are ever with us. Those who were behind the undertaking, however, felt confident that victory would crown their efforts, and it certainly did.

The campaign was brought to a close at 9 o'clock last evening, and it was an expectant crowd which filled the Y. M. C. A. rooms at that hour to hear the result announced Amongst those present were a number of ladies who are members of the Ladies' Auxiliary and they certainly took great interest in the proceedings. At about 9.20 the result was known and when it was announced that the grand total subscribed was $41,332.25, cheer after cheer was given.

The figures were flashed upon a screen on Front street and again cheers were heard.

To add to the joyous occasion the fire bell at the city building was sounded and whistles were blown.

At the Y. M. C. A. building a meeting was held, presided over by Mr D. V. Sinclair. The proceedings opened by the singing of a hymn, after which the captains of the various teams were called upon to report the amounts their respective teams had secured since Thursday noon, when the last report was publicly made. The report by teams was as follows:

Team No. 1—Henry Pringle	$305.00
Team No. 2.—J. J. B. Flint	107.00
Team No. 3—D. V Sinclair	482.00
Team No. 4—R. J. Graham	510.00
Team No. 5—A. E. Bailey	342.00
Team No. 6—W. A. A. Chown.	100.00
Team No. 7—F. S. Deacon	550.00
Team No. 8—J. A. Marsh	305.00
Team No. 9—W. B. Riggs	567.00
Team No 10--C. B. Scantlebury	600 00
Team No. 11—A. Steele	243.00
E. Graham	100.00
Ladies Auxiliary	500 00
Total	$4619.53
Grand Total	$41,332.25

Speeches of a congratulatory nature were then made by Messrs. K. C. Calhoun, of Montreal, International Y. M. C. A officer; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, J. L. Hess, W. B. Deacon, J. C. Moynes, J. Barlow, J. G. Davison, J. Elliott, A. E.. Bailey, G. T. Woodley, P. J. Smith, W. A. A. Chown, F. S. Deacon, J. A. Marsh, W. B. Riggs, L. R. Terwillegar, C. B. Scantlebury, A. M. Chapman, J. Mowry, O Herity, Revs. A. M. Hubly, A. S. Kerr and Mrs. J. L. Hess on behalf of the ladies. The pleasing proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. A. S. Kerr.

All subscribers to the Y. M. C. A. Building Fund will receive, during the coming week, an acknowledgement from the Secretary, and all those who have paid will receive a receipt.

C. N. R.'S New Lines Worth $5.000,000.

OVER 250 MILES IN EASTERN ONTARIO PURCHASED WITHIN THE PAST SIX MONTHS.

Toronto, July 15.—Ontario railway properties of a total estimated value of over five million dollars have fallen under control of the Canadian Northern Railway.

The transfer of the Brockville, Westport and Northwestern Railway yesterday at Brockville brought into the ring the fourth railway property indirectly acquired within the present year. The Ontario and Ottawa Railway company, which acts as a holding company, takes over the franchise of the four and a mortgage will be issued in the usual course blanketing the acquired roads.

The four railways represent a total of 251 miles of line and equipment, which is roughly valued at $20,000 a mile..

There are as follows: Brockville, Westport and Northwestern Railway from Brockville to Westport; Irondale Bancroft and Ottawa, from Kinmount Junction to Bancroft, 48 miles; Marmora Railway and Mining Company from Central Ontario Junction to Wanston, 9 1-2 miles; the Central Ontario Railway, Picton to Trenton Junction, 32 miles; Trenton Junction to Coe Hill, 72 miles; Ormsby Junction to Maynooth, 35 miles.

Alleged Cruelty.

City Clerk Mikel Makes Explanation.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your issue of the 15th inst. a letter from Mr. H. S. Burrell, in which he says that I, as a city official, should be compelled to use the people who are bringing money to the city with some common fairness. I presume he refers to his agreement for city water to his industry. I am quite surprised to know that Mr. Burrell did not understand that city officials are simply servants of the Council, carrying out the Council's bidding. The agreement for the use of city water by the Burrell Rock Drill Company was sent to Mr. Burrell by me under the unanimous direction of the Water Committee. In fact the Water Committee wished it sent much sooner than it was transmitted by me.

Yours truly,
W. C. MIKEL.

St. Swithin's Day

Yesterday was Saint Swithin's, or Saint Swithun's day. The good saint, who was bishop of Winchester from 852 to 862, was a zealous builder of churches, and of conspicuous devotion. He is credited with many miracles and when he died asked to be buried "where passers-by might tread on his grave and where the rain from the eaves might fall upon it." When a century later his body was to be exhumed for the purpose of being deposited in Winchester cathedral on the day appointed for the translation, July 15, 912, it rained, and for many days thereafter so as to delay the ceremony. Hence it was believed, originated the idea that if it rained on St. Swithin's day it will be wet weather for forty days thereafter.

Belleville had rain yesterday. And the end is not yet.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE MAKES GOOD APPOINTMENT

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States have appointed Mr. Charles Wilmot sole General Agent for the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, with headquarters in Belleville.

The Equitable Life is regarded in insurance papers as the Bank of England is in the banking world—THE STRONGEST ON EARTH. The last and 50th annual statement of the great Equitable shows assets of FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY MILLION DOLLARS.

Annual dividends are paid to all holders of Equitable policies each year. Even under an Equitable policy costing $11.38 for $1,000.00 annually, a splendid dividend will be paid each year.

Statistics prove indisputably that the increased use of such a pure and wholesome beverage as Regal Lager ensures a decrease in any community's record of intemperance. That alone suggests the truth that Regal is NOT an intoxicant.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

The Campaign's closed at last dear wife,
And I'm a wreck complete;
But what is sadder news for you
I'm coming home to eat,
So dust around, spruce up a bit
And have things looking neat,
For meals at the Y.M.C.A
Are mighty hard to beat.

The education I've received
In culinary art
Has made a connoisseur of me,
So now you'll have to start
Constructing fancy dishes
Of salads, sweet and tart,
For living on plain food again
Would break your hubby's heart.

So don't delay a minute, wife,
Call up the grocery store
And order up a load of stuff—
A half a ton or more—
For I will need more pampering
Than I have had before,
Since dining with the 'canvassers,"
I've appetite galore.

LLOYD-GEORGE IN CANADA.

The Welshman's Clothes Were His Chief Feature.

It was between sessions at Ottawa; accurately, in August, eleven years ago, when the tourists and citizens in the Russell House rotunda were amazed one afternoon. Into their midst, coming from the elevator that had deposited him on the ground floor, entered a gentleman whose attire was a sartorial wonder. On his head was a felt hat with a brim that would make any Stetson look like a narrow-brimmed straw. His form was half obscured by a roomy garment of rough tweed that hung from his shoulders and swayed in the August air like a South American poncho. He wore knickerbockers that were as ample as a Dutchman's breeches, and his fifteen-inch laced up, hobnailed boots would have lasted across country to Dawson City, then lately placed on the map.

Two or three newspaper correspondents were in the rotunda. They made a run for Frank St. Jacques, the proprietor, and demanded to be told the name and style of the phenomenon.

"Why," said St. Jacques, "that's one of three Welshmen who have just struck town. They're registered. Let's see their names."

There they were:
D. Lloyd-George, M.P., London.
J. D. Rees, Cardiff.
W. L. Griffith, Cardiff.

While the search was being made the man with the clothes disappeared, but Griffith was close by. The newspapermen soon identified him as an old friend—the Canadian immigration agent at Cardiff; a Welshman who had farmed for many years in Manitoba and had lately been appointed to Cardiff by Hon. Clifford Sifton. Mr. Griffith is now Lord Strathcona's right-hand man.

A few observations were immediately taken through unsmoked glasses, and The Globe man asked:

"Say, Griffith, who's the chap with the weird clothes?"

"Why," answered the genial Griffith, "you want to keep your eye on him. He's a young Welsh lawyer and M.P. And he's going to be in the next Liberal Government, sure."

"But, gentle stranger, why that rig? What has Canada done to him that he should thus dazzle our eyes?"

"Well, he just went to a colonial outfitter and told him that he wanted a wardrobe for a Canadian trip. That's what he got. As he is in Canada, he's wearing it."

"So I see," observed one of the correspondents. "I could feel very much worse over it if we had another gentle quencher."

It was the now famous Lloyd-George, sure enough. He and Rees and Griffith were on a trip to the West to pick out land for a proposed Welsh colony. Some thousands of the Cymrians had been sent to Patagonia a few years before to found agricultural settlements, but they did not get along well with either the Argentine Government—the Argentine owns Patagonia—or the priests. The Welshmen wanted to come to Canada, and Lloyd-George, Rees and Griffith were to spy out the land. They went west with W. D. Scott, now Superintendent of Immigration, and had a buckboard trip from Regina northwest to near where Saskatoon now stands.

The Welsh settlement, as Lloyd-George wanted it established, came to naught. The future Chancellor of the Exchequer had a few stipulations which didn't suit either Clifford Sifton or W. D. Scott. One of them was that the Welshmen were to be given a big slice of territory which they were to own and govern. Welsh was to be the only language used, and English-speaking settlers were to be barred.

The Minister of the Interior promptly turned down this proposal, but an arrangement was arrived at under which some hundreds of the Patagonian Welshmen were brought to Canada as ordinary settlers. Joseph Chamberlain, then Colonial Secretary, was asked by Lloyd-George to finance the journey, but answered that Her Majesty's Government was not in the business of paying emigration expenses. Finally some wealthy Welshmen supplied the necessary funds for those who wanted to come north. In the interval many had changed their minds and stayed where they were.

When in Ottawa on the return trip from their tour, Lloyd-George and Rees became very friendly with the Canadian newspaper correspondents. The man who is now one of the three or four most prominent figures in the Empire was a hard-shell free trader and anti-militarist. The Boer war was a good deal nearer than most men thought, but Lloyd-George was as strongly convinced that it would come as was Chamberlain.

"Chamberlain will force Britain into a murderous war because his masters tell him to do so," said Lloyd-George.

"And who are his masters?"

"Ask Rhodes. Ask in the city of London."

A year afterward Lloyd-George was being execrated, hooted; chased through Birmingham disguised as a policeman. Now he is no longer "a young Welsh lawyer."

He has got there.

But, oh, those clothes!—Roden Kingsmill, in Canadian Courier.

A Snow Slander.

It fills the Canadian heart with desolation to read such an item as this:

"Sir Ernest Shackleton has chosen Canada as a place for his future home. He yearns to tramp all over the snowy wilderness and discover its mineral resources."

Thus writes The San Francisco Argonaut, in the full tide of its enthusiasm. This chilly bit of information comes, too, just at the time when the winter flannel is forgotten and the straw hat gleams on every highway. To throw the snowy wilderness in our faces in this way is the act of a cruel enemy. If Sir Ernest is indulging in any "yearns" towards our iceland districts, he has indeed another "yearn" coming to him. If we don't look out Peary will be buying that ice palace in Montreal and Dr. Cook will want a lonely hut on the Hamilton mountain-side.

Because the native two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1914.

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

Appendicitis Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURGH, ONT., Feb. 12th. 1910.

"'Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation.

We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done we were ready but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health."

MET THE NEWSPAPERMEN.

Goldwin Smith Had an Evening With Them In Montreal.

No more lovable personality than the late Dr. Goldwin Smith could well be conceived. His great scholarship sat upon him so lightly as not to be for a moment suspected.

Men of the world, bulking in the community, yet devoid of learning, have stammered in his presence, felt, for a mortifying moment, ill at ease, but that warm shake of the hand, that happy remark put all at their ease.

Dr. Smith was, indeed, as simple as a child. Pedantic airs he had none. The very weight of his learning made him humble; and his attitude was that of the great Greek philosopher—"I know enough to know that I know nothing."

One remembers a happy evening, many years ago, when Dr. Smith entertained a number of Montreal newspaper men at the Forest and Stream Club.

Dr. Smith made known his wish through Mr. Donald MacMaster, then a rising lawyer in Montreal, now a prominent M.P. in the British House of Commons.

The weight of years had not then bowed the great publicist. He was sprightly in his walk, eager in his spirit.

Some of the younger fellows were shy—nay, in dread—of the scholar; but never did a host discharge his duty with more grace and felicity than Dr. Smith.

He encouraged the rawest youngster to talk; drew him out; applauded his remarks; gave him the distinction of special notice.

In time every one found his tongue, and there followed a veritable "feast of reason and flow of soul."

Dr. Smith rather directed the conversation than sought to monopolize it; but when he intervened it was so brightly, so charmingly, that all were entranced.

The youngsters blushed with pride, but the affability of the notable man, his youthfulness of spirits, his delightful adaptability, eagerness to be one with his guests in their aptitudes, the keen relish he took in the unpremeditated flashes of wit or humor, which were not infrequent when everybody had found his speech—these will be recalled by those who still do their work on the Montreal press.

There were creature comforts; there were songs; but, chiefly, there was an evening of bright talk—talk which, at least on the part of Dr. Smith, as might be expected, was full of charm, various, illuminative and all on the spur of the moment.

Some have since joined the majority; but that night by the shores of the St. Lawrence, whose blue waters flashed in the moonlight; with the summer air breathing gently through the open windows; with its "Attic salt"; with the all-pervading personality of a brilliant and gracious figure; with the clock firmly put out of sight and forgotten — is a treasured memory to those who survive.

"Honorable Ben" Rogers.

Mr. Benjamin Rogers, whose early appointment to the position of Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island is predicted by the Government press, is one of the oldest Liberal politicians of the island, and one who has held responsible office in the Provincial Government. On account of his having held provincial Cabinet rank he is still known as "The Honorable Ben" on the island although, according to the official rule, former provincial Ministers are not entitled to be called "Honorable." Mr. Rogers was born at Bedeque, in 1837, but so lightly has his 73 years passed over him that he could easily be taken for a man of fifty. He still takes satisfaction out of fast horses, and enjoys a day's fishing. In 1858 he removed to Alberton, where he began a general mercantile business, which he has since carried on extensively in conjunction with farming. He has been for no less than forty years in political life, and always a supporter of the Liberal party. In 1890 he was appointed the island's first Commissioner of Agriculture, and also Provincial Secretary-Treasurer. The influence of his efforts to improve agricultural methods is still felt in the province. Mr. Rogers was associated with Premier Farquharson and Hon. R. C. McLeod on the delegation to Ottawa to press the claims of the island concerning the alleged non-fulfillment of the terms of Confederation with respect to winter communication with the mainland. In 1903 Mr. Rogers took part with Premier Peters and Hon. Mr. Weir in the conference of provincial Premiers that dealt with the fishery award and redistribution of the provincial subsidies and provincial representation. Mr. Rogers also was a delegate to the Liberal convention at Ottawa in 1892, and was one of the committee of forty that framed the platform, taking a very prominent part in the work.

A Canadian Pygmy.

Edward Hupman, probably the smallest man in Canada, died on May 26th, at his home in Allendale, Shelburne County, Nova Scotia. He was 38 years of age, 33 inches in height and weighed but 30 pounds.

As a lad he was given all the education which the district school afforded, and was very bright in his studies. He was a constant and careful reader of the newspapers. He was not in the least sensitive as regards his small stature and mingled freely among his fellow men by whom he was cordially liked. He was keen in conversation and to indulge in pleasantries with him was to run the risk of receiving a sharp retort.

While he had his health, up to about five months ago, he frequently visited Lockeport, but never, with one exception, went farther from home. When the Government wharf at Lockeport Station was constructed the late Mr. Hupman was employed as timekeeper and discharged his duties carefully. This was the only work which he ever undertook, although his advice was frequently sought by people in his neighborhood whose education was meagre. He was keen in a business deal.

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, JULY 18, 1910. NO. 264

HEAT REDUCES CROPS

Weather in the West Causes Widespread Anxiety.

Extremely Warm Weather on a Single Day It Is Believed Will Cost the Wheat Farmers One or Two Bushels Per Acre—Some Districts Have Had Conditions to Produce Fine Yield—General Outlook Low.

Winnipeg, July 18.—The intense heat of the last few days has brought a recurrence of anxiety for the crop of the West. Leading authorities have been interviewed on the subject, and the following review of the situation is given:

On the 13th of July telegrams from all over the west indicated that while the damage was very serious, there was still a good probability that a crop of about 90,000,000 bushels of wheat would be reaped. This was entirely contingent upon a good general rainfall. On the 14th the west experienced one of the worst days of the season. The thermometer out on the open country ran as high as 104 in the shade. The intense heat was accompanied by a hot dry wind, which lasted from early morning until late at night, and was calculated to reduce the crop from one or two bushels per acre in every district suffering from want of rain. The 15th brought cooler weather, and a number of fairly heavy showers, distributed pretty well over the country between Winnipeg and Calgary. It fell both north and south of the main line of the C.P.R. While this improved condition, to the extent of checking a rapid deterioration of the crop, it was not sufficient to promote growing or filling.

There are large areas in the west, particularly in Northern Manitoba, Central and Northern Saskatchewan and Northern Alberta, that have had abundant rain all season, and where the crops are as fine as these districts have ever produced, and from these sections, even without much additional rain, a good crop will be realized. But taking the west generally, where there is an acreage of 8,500,000 sown to wheat this year, without immediate rain generally over the whole country lasting at least thirty-six hours, there is little hope of reaping more than seventy or seventy-five million bushels, and every day of hot dry weather reduces this probably one or two bushels per acre.

"Well Satisfied; Not Grumbling."

Toronto, July 18.—Although a considerable deficit was recorded against the two aviation meets in Toronto and Montreal, which were run jointly, the promoters express themselves as "well satisfied; not grumbling." In fact they didn't look to make money out of the exhibitions. Their chief aim was to give the people of the two cities an opportunity of seeing the foremost demonstrators of the foremost international scientific sport, and to advertise Canada to the whole world.

Manager Wilcox said last night that he had received no end of thankful expressions and congratulations from Toronto's most prominent citizens concerning the success of the exhibition here. It is considered that the people of Toronto and Montreal were afforded the opportunity of witnessing the finest flights ever made in the world to date. Count de Lesseps' achievement in flying over both cities has never been equalled when the dangerous aspects of the adventure are considered.

The expense of the two meets was greater than had been anticipated, being about $75,000, but this is due to the insistence that the best known and most skilful aviators in the world be secured. The attendance in Toronto and Montreal combined was 60,000; Montreal drew three times as many as Toronto.

Count de Lesseps leaves this week for Paris to prepare for the big aeroplane race from London to Paris. Johnston and the Wright machines got away yesterday.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

Welland, July 18.—William H. Willson, aged 30, manager of the Hennessy drug store here, was accidentally shot and instantly killed here Saturday night. A friend of his, Night Policeman George Laing, had borrowed from him some days ago a revolver to carry, while cleaning his own. In the police office Laing was returning Willson's revolver, and, showing how well his worked after cleaning, thinking he had removed all the cartridges, he snapped it and the ball entered his heart.

A horse owned by Cecil Hagar, near here, was killed by lightning while pasturing in a field on his farm Saturday morning.

Protecting Powers Withdraw.

Paris, July 18.—The protecting powers—Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy—have decdied to withdraw the second guardships from Crete, which were sent to Suda Bay to insure respect for their decisions. The French armored cruiser Conde has been ordered to proceed to France immediately.

Flew Across the Sound.

Copenhagen, July 18.—Sevendends the Danish aviator, flew in an aeroplane across the Sound, a distance of 14 miles Saturday. He arose at 4.03 a.m., and landed at Malone at 4.34.

Strike Riots In Spain.

Bilbao, Spain, July 18.—Several collisions occurred between the strikers and the police Saturday. The latter used their revolvers, killing one man and wounding several.

STRIKE IMMINENT.

G.T.R. Trainmen's Vote Is In Favor of Standing Firm.

Montreal, July 18.—Apparently the critical stage in the dispute between the G.T.R. and its trainmen, yardmen and conductors is now close at hand, and is will depend upon the attitude to be taken by the company whether there is an extensive strike on both the Grand Trunk and the Central Vermont Railways. The returns of the second strike vote on the Grand Trunk were counted yesterday, and it was stated that of the 3,350 votes cast less than fifty were against a strike.

President Hays was notified on Saturday that the forty-two delegates from the various centres along that system between Portland and Chicago had returned to the city, and he promptly sent them word that he would be prepared to meet them for another discussion at 11.30 on Monday morning. It may be that this meeting will decide the fate of the issue, but it is more probable that there will be further conferences before anything definite is decided. It is, however, stated by the leaders for the men that, in view of this second decisive vote, they will lay the matter firmly before Mr. Hays, that the company must grant them the standard eastern wage or they will call a strike. If it became evident that the company did not intend to meet this demand, the strike would be called without delay.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

A Sunday baseball game was stopped by the sheriff at Elmira, N.Y.

China is looking for German officers to undertake the work of reorganizing her army.

Frank Clark was killed at Port Colborne, being run over by a yard engine which he was attempting to board.

The youngest son of the Earl of Glasgow was badly injured by the fall of his aeroplane at Bournemouth.

Rev. John Mockridge of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Toronto, has been appointed vicar of Trinity Chapel, New York.

Both the officials and men of the Pennsylvania Railroad are hopeful that an agreement will be reached at a conference to-day.

Frank Bezanson of Sydney, C.B., was killed while driving an automobile near Baddeck, his wheel striking a stone and the car being upset.

Plunged 100 Feet.

New York, July 18.—Frightened by an automobile last night, a horse drawing a two-seated carriage in which John J. Vorhees, a leather manufacturer of Jersey City, was taking his wife and their two-year-old daughter out for an outing, dashed through a wooden railing on the outer edge of the Jersey City boulevard, and plunged to the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad 100 feet below.

Mrs. Vorhees was dashed head first against a telegraph pole and instantly killed. Father and daughter were buried beneath the wrecked carriage and lay unconscious while a Pennsylvania express thundered down on them. They were taken to a hospital where it was said their injuries were serious.

For Local Option.

Welland, July 18.—At the county convention of the Temperance and Moral Reform League, the Welland County Temperance and Moral Reform Association was formed, officers appointed and business outlined for an active temperance campaign for voting this winter. Reports were received from Welland Town, Port Colborne, Fort Erie, Bridgeburg, Crowland, Willoughby, Bertie and Thorold Townships that they were already organized, and had passed resolutions to vote for local option January next. Reports were received from Thorold town and Stamford Township, Chippewa Village and Niagara Falls town, that they were organizing, and expected to vote at the same time.

Children's Shelter for Brantford.

Brantford, July 18.—By the generosity of Mrs. Peter Wood, a new children's shelter will be erected in this city. Her husband, who died some time ago, left $1,000 to the Children's Aid Society, which she now supplements by $6,000, making possible the erection of a fine new building, which will be put up as a memorial to the late S. M. Thompson, who died last January, after being secretary of the local Children's Aid Society for many years.

Unveiled Monument to Montcalm.

Vauvert, France, July 18.—M. Doumergue, Minister of Education, yesterday unveiled a monument to Montcalm, erected by public subscription by Canada and France, near his birthplace, Chateau de Candiac. A delegation from Canada and the Canadian agent in France, Hector Febre, were at the ceremony.

A replica of this monument will be set up in Quebec, and unveiled in the autumn.

Welcomed Canadian Teachers.

London, July 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The London Teachers' Association, the National Union Teachers' and the Victoria League welcomed the Canadian teachers on Saturday night when expressions of cordiality and friendship were given by several speakers, including Lord Strathcona, Sir J. M. Yaxall, M.P., and H. J. Mackinder, M.P.

Robbed Railroad Car.

St. George, July 18.—On July 12 some unknown party entered a Grand Trunk car at St. George station and stole a number of small castings. Grand Trunk Detective Tisdale has been in the village investigating.

DISASTER TO MONORAIL

First Day of New Railway Is an Unhappy One.

Hastily Constructed Line Gives Way Near New York Under Pressure of Overcrowded Car and Fifteen Suffer Painful Injuries—Are Literally Piled on Top of One Another When Taken Out.

New York, July 18.—The Pelham Bay Park and City Island Monorail Co., which has been hastily constructing its track and superstructure between Barstow and City Island for the last two months, sent its yellow, cigar-shaped car from its City Island barns to the Harlem Railroad station, at Barstow, Saturday afternoon to meet the 2.10 p.m. train from New York. It was the first time in the road's brief history that the cigar-shaped car had been put on the practical test of carrying a full load of passengers.

After taking on more than 100 passengers, who packed the car so full that they could hardly move, and who had all come from Manhattan and the Bronx to have a swim at City Island, the long, cigar-shaped yellow car left the Barstow station, and, with gathering speed, began, under the direction of its inventor, Howard Hansel Tunis, to run back toward City Island on its single rail. The single rail on which the car runs curves slightly in several places, and puts an additional strain on the superstructure which the company admits it put up as hastily and as economically as possible, in order to comply with the terms of the board of estimate's franchise, gave away. The wooden ties supporting the monorail along the ground sank an inch or two into the uncemented bed of dust on which they were laid.

The spikes holding the iron uprights supporting the superstructure by means of which the car is held steady on the monorail, tore out of the wooden ties, and amid the screams of the imprisoned passengers, the car fell over on its side, resting against one of the thin, lathe-shaped uprights supporting the superstructure. The upright, though bent, did not snap.

If it had snapped the car would have rolled over and over down a four-foot embankment and many of its hundred passengers would have been either killed or badly injured. As it was the passengers were thrown one on top of the other on the floor of the car, so that they lay literally in layers when the car was opened to let them out. In the jam fifteen suffered painful injuries.

The car runs on a cross-tie road-bed similar to that of a railroad train. But only a single rail runs along the centre of the ties; while every 20 feet on each side of the track iron supports are erected. These supports hold up two light steel rails, along which a double set of deep-grooved wheels pass. These not only hold the car upright, but receive the electric current that propels the car.

When the car rounds a curve it tends naturally to tilt. If the curves of the track are improperly calculated, or if the parallel set of overhead wheels slip off the trolley rails, the car must topple over.

The normal capacity of the monorail car is 40, according to President Burrows. After over 100 holiday folk has crowded into it, Inventor Tunis, at the front motor, began to fear that the car was taking on too big a load.

Lost His Past.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 18.—After having been known only as the "Nameless Man" since June, when he disappeared from his home in Syracuse, the mystery was identified Saturday as Albert Edward Gill. He was picked up by the police when unable to tell his name. Everything that happened previous to last Friday is blank to him. He remembers every detail of his life since that time, but who and what he was is still blank, beyond the fact that he learned his name on Saturday.

The description of the missing Syracuse man places it beyond a shadow of doubt that the stranger and Gill are the same. When told that nis name was Albert Edward Gill, he said that "Albert Edward" sounded more familiar that Gill, but that he had a faint recollection of that also. The message from Syracuse said that he had a wife and child in that city, but Gill says he cannot recall Syracuse or even the fact that he was married. Dr. Gillick will take the man to Syracuse to see his wife, in the hope that that will bring back his memory.

Three Cent Fares Yield Deficit.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 18.—A deficit of $78,800 is declared by the Cleveland Street Railway Co. yesterday after four months' operation under the three cent fare rule. The report of the company for the month of June shows a deficit of $48,927. The directors adopted a resolution to borrow $250,000 to meet pressing obligations. A profit was shown on the first month, but since then there has been a steadily growing deficit.

Sentenced for Accepting Bribes.

Pittsburg, July 18.—Former Councilman M. L. Swift, jr., who was described by counsel as a mere boy of 26 years, with wife and family dependent on his wages of $15 a week, was sentenced by Judge Fraser yesterday to eight months in the County Jail for accepting bribes for his votes on two municipal ordinances and fined $100. An appeal will be taken.

SLOW SCOTLAND YARD!

England Censuring Sleuths For Losing Dr. Crippen.

London, July 18.—The press is devoting columns to the Crippen murder case. The most remarkable feature has been the sluggishness of Scotland Yard in its preliminary stages. The case was laid before the authorities on June 30 with ample evidence that Dr. Crippen had made contradictory statements respecting his wife's disappearance and death, and her friends both in England and America suspected foul play. There was an interval of ten days before Crippen's flight with his typewriter. During that interval the detectives received a fresh series of misstatements from him, which ought to have warned them to keep him under constant surveillance, and yet they did not take any precautions to prevent the escape of the suspected criminal.

The excuse offered for this astonishing negligence is that they wanted to frighten him into flight and thereby force him to incriminate himself. If they had been clever, they would have induced him to run away and kept watch on him, so as to arrest him at an opportune moment. As it is, they are now dependent on the co-operation of the amateur detectives of the press, and are overwhelmed with hundreds of false clews, based on mistaken identity, in every section of the kingdom.

As Crippen disappeared only four days before the horrible discovery of the mutilated body of the woman under the coal cellar, the scent is fresh, and the arrest of the suspected murderer is highly probable, especially as every newspaper is seeking to frighten the typewriter into betraying him in order to escape her own responsibility as an accessory before or after the fact.

WELCOMES HOSTILE CHIEF.

W. D. Staples, M.P., Shows Laurier Courtesies of War.

Somerset, July 18.—Political heresy might be charged against William Staples. "Bill," as he is known to his constituents, member of Parliament for Macdonald, for the reception which he and his ilk gave to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Saturday afternoon.

Meetings in these French-Canadian districts assume more the character of a village, or family picnic, rather than a political demonstration, and when a few hundred people are drawn together the represent a wide range of country.

The Government association did not know that Sir Wilfrid was actually coming until twenty-four hours before he arrived. There was a dilemma; the Prime Minister was coming to see people of his own race and no preparation made to receive him. Consternation reigned; a number of heads got together; Tory led and Grit followed. Ways and means were devised. A messenger was dispatched sixteen miles away to bring the nearest band at a cost of $100. Willing hands undertook to building a temporary platform on the village green; streamers and bunting were made ready, and even the indispensable motor-car was on hand for the grand march. When Sir Wilfrid arrived the crowd of several hundred were serene and expectant. No Scottish chieftain ever received more cordial welcome than the Canadian Prime Minister gets from his compatriots. "Vive Laurier" is the cry everywhere.

Sir Wilfrid does not say much upon these occasions. While he was glad to speak to them of the traditions of the French race, they must not consider him as a French-Canadian, but as a Canadian.

Too Much Kelly.

New York, July 18.—Because the "Lead, Kindly Light," of his church's organ is frequently drowned by the "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" of neighboring phonographs and pianos, and because he cannot always make himself heard in the pulpit above the laughter and talk outside, Rev. H. D. Coe, pastor of the Richmond Hill Baptist Church, printed in the local newspapers an open letter, in which he requests the residents of the neighborhood to make less noise during church services.

"For several Sundays it has been almost impossible to hold our services," said Mr. Coe Saturday night. "On Sunday evenings every resident of the neighborhood seems to start a phonograph or commence playing the piano. Groups of young persons sit on porches and make much noise.

"I decided to request through the local papers that the neighbors make less noise after last Wednesday night's prayer meeting. The organ had just commenced playing "Lead, Kindly Light,' when a loud phonograph started 'Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?' The effect was indescribable. I was almost half through my sermon, which was on the duty of parents to children, when a group started singing 'What's the Matter with Father?' Then I thought it time to call a halt."

Cousin of Gomez Killed.

Havana, July 18.—Joaquim Gomez, a cousin of President Gomez, was shot and killed Saturday night by Martinez Moles, mayor of Sansoti Spiritus. Moles claims that he fired in self-defence.

Took the Dare.

Winnipeg, July 18.—Egged on by the derisive jeers of a large crowd at the Exhibition Saturday night, Eugene Ely twice went up in an aeroplane in the teeth of a biting gale and landed successfully. The third time he attempted a longer flight, and his machine now lies broken to pieces on the field, while he himself was rendered unconscious and was hurried to the hospital, where his condition is reported as precarious.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Only four more days to the Old Boys' Reunion. The fatted calf must begin to feel rather sad.

◆ ◆ ◆

Already the old boys and girls are arriving. They heard and answered the call of the big cities, but still sing the old song, "There's no place like home."

◆ ◆ ◆

Doesn't Q. V. park loom up beautifully these nights? Reminds one of Hanlan's point without the dip the dips.

◆ ◆ ◆

It begins to look as though, when the old boys see all the pretty things, including the girls who have grown up in their absence, they'll feel like settling down again in Beautiful Belleville.

◆ ◆ ◆

In a day or two it will be:
Masons, Masons everywhere
Things are done upon the square.

◆ ◆ ◆

Without prejudice, now, which member of the City Council would you like to nominate for a free trip in one of those flying machines?

◆ ◆ ◆

BLESSING, NOT CURSE.

Two gentlemen were going home from church yesterday morning. One of them was a minister, whose charge is in the United States. He is now visiting his old home here. They were talking of the cheap moving picture shows, and the layman was roundly denouncing them.

"Well," said the minister, "that may be your view in Canada, but where I live we look on cheap picture shows as a blessing. In many districts in the United States they have closed up thousands of saloons. If we have to choose between the picture shows and the saloons we prefer the former every time."

◆ ◆ ◆

There is no truth in the report that Mr. Flint will head the Old Boys' procession in an aeroplane.
As a matter of course
He'll ride a horse.

◆ ◆ ◆

Some of the autos in this city couldn't smell any worse, no matter what name you called them by.

◆ ◆ ◆

A gentle-faced, well-dressed old lady on Front st. last night called it the "Old Boys' Re-Onion." And still we wonder at the horrors and crimes these days bring forth!

◆ ◆ ◆

Lest they forget, we might mention that the great procession is only a week from to-day, and, if they have not already done so, the members of the City Council and Board of Education should put their "plug" hats into drydock at once.

◆ ◆ ◆

Sir Wilfrid boasted in Winnipeg that there was no misconduct in the building of the Transcontinental Railway, and challenged investigation, yet when an investigation was demanded in Parliament, the committee was so hampered that its work was confined to the white-washing of every wrongdoer. Sir Wilfrid should not have forgotten that there were among his hearers, men who had memories.

Mr. Pugsley became valiant when in Winnipeg, and while 2000 miles away, challenged Mr. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, to repeat his charges in relation to the Sawdust Wharf in parliament. This same Minister made just such boasting when in St. John, N. B., but when his charges against the Conservative party were challenged he dared not repeat them, but sneaked off like a dog with his tail between his legs.

◆ ◆ ◆

Crop reports from the Northwest are unfortunately discouraging. Hot weather and lack of rain have materially affected the yield of grain, and as a consequence wheat has advanced 3 1-2 cents per bushel and flour 10 cents per bag, and 20 cents per barrel.

IT IS NOT IN THE BLOOD

Medicine Taken Internally Cannot Cure Eczema. It is Caused by Germs.

Eczema cannot be overcome by ordinary treatment and the old-fashioned way of dosing the system with drugs. Eczema is caused by a parasitic germ that bores into the skin. It is generally a contagious disease. Until the parasite is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of skin diseases are in the form of eczema.

We so thoroughly believe that Rexall Eczema Ointment will overcome eczema and allied skin ailments that we unhesitatingly promise to promptly return the money paid us for it should it in any way be unsatisfactory to the user.

Because of its remarkable cleansing antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing influence, Rexall Eczema Ointment has a very pronounced value in the treatment of skin diseases, especially where the form of ailments is of the chronic, aggravating sort. We highly recommend it for the dry scaly form or the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very prompt in relieving pimples, blotches, skin discolorations, ringworm, acne, nettle rash, tetter, hives, ulcers, insect bites, and for healing sores and wounds. It is a pleasant smelling, grayish-white ointment, and is very cleanly for use. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

Slept in a Barn,

It was reported to the police on Saturday that a lad named Daniel Sweeney was sleeping in a barn on the Canifton road, on the outskirts of the city. He was found and taken to the Children's Shelter until the case could be looked into. He alleges that he was compelled to sleep out and ran away from home owing to trouble there. We are informed, on the other hand, that the parents can do nothing with the lad.

New Parish Hall.

Ground was broken today for the foundation of the new Parish hall in connection with Christ church. The building will be erected on a lot adjoining the church.

Tomlen-Dworzith.

A wedding was solemnized in St. Michael's church at ten o'clock this morning, by the Rev. Father Spratt. The groom was Mr. Thomas Tomlen and the bride, Miss Agnes Dworzith, both of Point Ann. The bridesmaids were Miss Gyneth Mackie and Miss Marie Britanik. The best man was Mr D. Rosa. After the ceremony the company were entertained handsomely at a residence at Point Ann.

Halifax Youth is On a Long Jaunt.

FRANK HINES HAS A BIG JOB AHEAD OF HIM — HAS WORN OUT 32 PAIRS OF SHOES ALREADY ON HIS LONG WALK.

The Intelligencer had a call this morning from a young fellow who introduced himself as Frank Hines, of Halifax. He is a good-looking lad, and is walking across the continent on a wager of $2100. He left Nain Labrador, on April 2nd, 1909, and has already travelled over 2550 miles. The wager calls for him to make the trip to the Pacific Coast and return to Halifax on foot, by October 17, 1911. He is now five days ahead of his mapped-out schedule. He must work his way, and started without any money. Mr. Hines says he is feeling fit, though he has worn out 32 pairs of shoes already. The total trip will be 15000 miles. He leaves for Toronto this evening.

How would you like to take the job off his hands?

Porto Rico's Pineapples.

Pineapple culture in Porto Rico has given such large returns that many of the insular government officials have bought small plantations, given up their official positions and become independent. Lands have quadrupled in value in some cases. The present acreage on the north shore exceeds 2,000, and it is predicted that it will soon be over 10,000.

Soapstone in China.

The Chinese in utilizing soapstone, which is found in their country in large quantities, make of it trays for 1338, slabs for rubbing ink, flower vases, incense boxes, sandalwood burners, flower baskets, candlesticks, chessmen, cups, bowls and lamps, all sorts of emblems, animals and the idols which the disciples of Confucius revere with so much fervor.

H. E. FAIRFIELD

Founder of Great American Steamship Line Came From Halifax.

Few of the thousands of Canadians who are familiar with the name "Cunard" and associate it with steamships are aware of the fact that the man who made his name for ever associated with Atlantic travel, was himself a Canadian—or it would be more correct to style him a Nova Scotian, for the broader application of the word "Canadian" has obtained only within the memory of the present generation. Sir Samuel Cunard, the founder of the great Cunard steamship line, was born at Halifax, N.S., in November, 1787. He was the son of a Philadelphia merchant, and for years carried on a mercantile business at Halifax, owned a line of whalers running from Nova Scotia to the Pacific and was interested in coal mines in Pictou and in Cape Breton, as well as in lumbering operations in Miramichi. In 1830, when in middle life, he conceived the idea of a mail service between England and America by steamers from Liverpool to Halifax, but it was ten years later before the project became an established fact. Mr. Cunard began his enterprise by going over to Great Britain in 1838, where he met an eminent marine engineer, Robert Napier, of Glasgow. His mission was so successful that Mr. Napier undertook the construction of four steamships of 440 horse-power each, and 1,200 tons burden. In 1839 he formed a partnership with David MacIver, of Liverpool, and George Burns, of Glasgow, under the name of the British and North American Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., and early in the same year the new company entered into contract with the Government to carry the mails for seven years between Boston and Quebec and between Liverpool and Halifax, for $300,000 per annum. In 1850 he received knighthood on the recommendation of Lord Palmerston and in 1860 was one of those whose counsel was asked in connection with the construction of the Intercolonial Railway. He had been elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society in 1846. He made his home and his later life at Kensington, London, where he died in 1865, leaving an estate valued at $1,750,000. For the first seven years of his contract with the Government for the carriage of the trans-Atlantic mails, which commenced in July, 1840, six boats were employed, but after that time the Government decided upon a weekly service, and the fleet was increased to eleven vessels. The annual subsidy was increased to $725,000 and again to $985,000 when the service was made to include New York. The Persia, built in 1855, was the first iron boat used in the service, and was not only the largest but the fastest vessel in the fleet. From the first, the use of iron steamers was so satisfactory that no side wheelers were built after 1862, when the first large steamer, the China, crossed the Atlantic, propelled by a screw. Probably no name is so fully identified with the reduction of time in ocean travel as that of Cunard.

THEY KEN THE BIG MON.

B. C. Sunset's Hielan'man Aroused an Old Bruce Boy.

The sturdy sons of Bruce County, the famous region that divides Georgian Bay from Lake Huron, are to be found in every western town or settlement from Kenora to Dawson city. Recently the editor of The Vancouver Sunset knowing that he was making a popular appeal on the coast and in the west, published an old-fashioned wood-cut of a Highlander, one of the sort used to illustrate advertisements of Caledonian games, the favorite diversion in Bruce County. His kindly thought brought a response from The Salmon Arm Observer, entitled: "He Kenned the Big Hielan' Man Whatever."

The picture of the old Lucknow Hielan' man, will make many a Bruce and Huron old boy homesick, says the exile at Salmon Arm, B.C. Many there are who would take a trip back to witness the Caledonian games if only they had time or the price or both. Some of us who have seen no person from "home" in recent years will wonder if Johnny Murchison, Sandy McPherson, Sandy Lawson, and many other of the old-time Scotties are still on deck; whether or not Jock Adams will compete in the quoit tournament, and if he loses will want to bet a couple of his pet canaries that he could win another round; if Jimmy Hunter is still living and will announce the results of the athletic and dancing records so that all on the hill may hear and that without a megaphone. The editor of The Observer learned his trade in the office where the "big Scotsman" is printed, as "devil" pushed the big roller which supplied the ink, and later on pulled the old Washington hand press on which the large posters are run. Here's hoping that Lucknow may have as big a crowd as she did the year that Donald Dinnie, champion athlete of Scotland, favored them with his presence, and was defeated by the boys of Bruce, Huron, and south as far as Zorra.

LOOK FOR SOMETHING TO BE STARTED IN SPAIN.

(Intelligencer Special)

San Sebastian, Spain, July 18. — That people of wealth and title have fear of a revolutionary uprising in this country that will be terribly serious is evident by the gathering of whole families in border cities such as this, where they can easily escape across the boundary and obtain protection in foreign countries.

There is no hiding the fact in some quarters they fear a repetition of the massacre of aristocrats like that which occurred in the French Revolution. The Cabinet met in emergency session Sunday, and there is talk of placing the whole country under martial law.

YAWNING.

Its Effect Upon the Respiratory Organs and Upon the Heart.

Dr. Emil Bunzl of Vienna, Austria, in speaking of diseases of the throat and remedies, said that yawning had its great value. Yawning has recently been recommended independently as a valuable exercise for the respiratory organs.

"According to Dr. Naegli of the University of Luettich," said Dr. Bunzl, "yawning brings all the respiratory muscles of the chest and throat into action and is, therefore, the best and most natural means of strengthening them. He advises everybody to yawn as deeply as possible, with arms outstretched, in order to change completely the air in the lungs and stimulate respiration. In many cases he has found the practice to relieve the difficulty in swallowing and disturbance of the sense of hearing that accompany catarrh of the throat. The patient is induced to yawn through suggestion, imitation of a preliminary exercise in deep breathing.

"Each treatment consists of from six to eight yawns, each followed by the operation of swallowing. It should be added, however, that it is quite possible for deep breathing to be overdone, particularly by persons with weak hearts, and it is at least open to question whether the obstacles to free respiration which the yawning cure is alleged to remove are not useful in preventing the entrance of germs and other foreign bodies."—Washington Herald.

When French Makes the Pace.

Those who have seen Gen. Sir John French during his stay in Canada have been unable to resist mentally comparing his wiry fitness with that of the fleshy officers of the Canadian militia who have been participating in the various reviews organized in connection with his visit. An amusing illustration of this occurred at Montreal a short time ago. A big demonstration was arranged at Lafontaine Park when the general inspected the garrison of that city. The inspection over, he rode away from the park attended not only by his own aides, but by a staff composed of the leading military officers of Montreal, most of whom are men of light and leading and also girth. He at once started at a brisk trot, not a canter, and kept it up all the way to the Windsor Hotel. When he arrived he looked around for his staff, but found only his personal aides in sight. The various Montreal officers were scattered at varying distances over the route of two miles. Sir John said nothing at the time, but at a dinner in the evening he remarked the traditional ability of Canadians to ride anything with hair on it, and in so doing glanced at one or two of the officers just significantly enough to make them conceal their confusion in beakers of champagne.

A Gentle Hint.

Little Bobby had been forbidden to ask for dessert. The other day they forgot to serve him, and as Bobby is very obedient he remained silent, although much affected.

"Josephine," said the father, "pass me a plate."

"Won't you have mine?" cried little Bobby. "It is very clean."

Sir Wilfrid in the West.

Sir Wilfrid is a striking personality, a pleasing speaker, and an adept at captivating an audience, particularly when addressing those who have given current events little study or attention. That he should have captivated his countrymen and the half-breeds in Manitoba, is not surprising. That they should have enthused when they looked upon the man who boasted that he would have shouldered his musket and fought with Riel had he been on the banks of the Saskatchewan during the rebellion is not surprising. There are many of the old Rielites still living on the banks of the Red River. To them he could appeal with confidence.

Let us look at a few of his platitudes, uttered in his sunny ways, and to a few of his direct and indirect promises, and it will be found that he has not been over scrupulous in his statements.

Sir Wilfrid, at a luncheon tendered to him by the Mayor and corporation of the City of Winnipeg, in reply to their address, stated that his Western tour was not a political tour, yet he and his colleagues talked little else than politics. How many of those who heard the utterance believed a word of it? The statement was too transparent to deceive any one other than idiots or grafters.

He came nearer the truth when he told the people that he and his colleagues had come West to ascertain the wants and desires of the people. "This is our object—nothing more or nothing less."

Their wants he is finding out rapidly, not more rapidly than are his promises, directly and indirectly. What he fails in this respect, Pugsley and his other Lieutenants supply.

Winnipeg modestly asks a Dominion grant of $2,500,000 in aid of a World's Fair to be held in Winnipeg in 1912. Sir Wilfrid dallied with the question, but ultimately intimated that a grant would be made, coupling it with an intimation that the Fair should not be held until 1914 or 1915. This would enable him and his Government to hold out a bait to the electors, at the next general election, to vote Laurier and get the money. A more flagrant attempt to bribe the electors could not well be made.

In discussing the question of transportation Pugsley outbid his chief by telling the Winnipegers that he looked forward to the time when the Connee Canal, from Edmonton to Winnipeg, would be completed, that in fact the subject was now under the consideration of the Government.

Not to be outdone by an underling, in this particular, Sir Wilfrid went one better. He declared he hoped ere long to see water ways constructed so that vessels could load in Edmonton and proceed direct to England with cargoes of wheat without breaking bulk. In addition to the Hudson Bay Railway, which he boasted they were building, he intimated that Winnipeg might be connected with Hudson Bay ere long by the means of a canal. No promise has, so far as Sir Wilfrid's utterances have appeared in print, been yet made that the Saskatchewan Canal would have its western port on the Pacific Ocean by travelling the Rocky Mountains. The party is not half through its tour yet, so there is no telling what promises are held in store yet to be made.

In addition to all this, Sir Wilfrid intimated that he intended to build the Georgian Bay Canal and deepen the Welland Canal. Yes, exclaimed Sir Wilfrid, in promising to deepen the Saskatchewan River so that vessels could go from the foot of the Rocky Mountains to the City of Winnipeg.

"We are at work on this scheme now, and I believe in time ships will go from Edmonton to the Atlantic Ocean."

What is in the future for Canada in the way of a gigantic debt may be judged by calculating the cost of these promised works. Will a thousand millions cover the enterprise? Doubtful!

Woman Edits This Paper.

There are a number of daily newspapers in Toronto, each of which is unique in some respect. There is one newspaper printed in Toronto daily which is run by a woman editor. It has no street sale, is possessed of a circulation of barely a couple of thousand; it not straining to acquire any more readers and is one of the most important publications that comes out in that city.

Another queer thing about it is that it has no name. What is here alluded to is the sheet issued twice daily by W. R. Houston, under authority of the committee of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

A young woman, Miss Warren, is the working editor of this very important newspaper, and she gets all her information first hand. As soon as the first quotations are put up on the big blackboard on one wall of the Stock Exchange Miss Warren who stands facing the board, begins setting the type into a form in front of her on which is kept standing the names of all the securities that the brokers deal in. When the trading is through at the morning close, Miss Warren compares the figures she has got up with the official register kept by the secretary of the Exchange. Every error is corrected, and then the form is hustled across the street, placed in a press, and soon after that copies of this newspaper, showing the bid and ask price, the sale price, the number of shares bought and sold, are in the hands of all the Toronto brokers and other subscribers to this publication. The same process is repeated in the afternoon.

Most newspapers endeavor to be accurate, but accuracy is the very life and soul of "Toronto Stock Exchange," as one might call this fiscal sheet.

A Veteran Campaigner.

In anticipation of another general election in England the Liberals of the Banbury Division of Oxfordshire have again chosen as their candidate the Hon. Eustache Edward Twistleton-Wykeham-Fiennes, who represented the constituency from 1906 up to the last general election, when he was defeated by Capt. R. B. Brassey. Old-timers in the Northwest will scarcely recognize under this cumbersome cognomen young "Ned Fiennes," who for some years owned and ran a horse ranch near Fort Qu'Appelle, and who, with his chum, the Hon. Maurice Gifford, went through the Northwest campaign, twenty-five years ago, as scouts attached to Gen. Middleton's column. Mr. Fiennes, who still retains some of his interests in the Northwest, is the second son of the fourteenth Baron Saye and Sele and brother of the present one.

Mr. Fiennes, who is now an active member of the London Stock Exchange, was born in 1864, so that he was twenty-one at the time of the Riel Rebellion. During that event he was known to everyone in Middleton's column as one of the pluckiest scouts; and one of the most unassuming young fellows in the force. In only one respect did he put on airs. While others were content with bestowing only the absolutely necessary care upon their mounts, Fiennes kept his horse groomed and his saddlery cleaned and burnished with as much care as if they were about to pass under the critical eyes of the judges at a horse show. And, of course, he was his own groom, and had his turn on picket and fatigue like the rest. There was a tradition in the force that he was well-connected in England; but what the connection was nobody but his chum, Gifford, Lord Melgund, and, perhaps, Gen. Middleton, knew and nobody cared. He proved himself a good fellow, and that was enough.

THE AMOK SIGNAL.

When a Javanese Goes Mad and Kills All Within Reach.

On every side of me the violent closing of doors and shutters resembled a rapid fire volley from machine guns. The Parapalang was deserted, and not a thing stirred in any direction. Not a sound was heard except the repeated "rap, rap, rap, rap!"

It was the amok signal. It had started at some point in the city where an agent of police or possibly a citizen had first taken from its hook a stout, solid wooden club and had struck a long, also solid, beam that hung suspended from an adjacent portico. It had been taken up instantly at many different points in Weltevreden by citizens and police agents, so that the amok signal was flashed all over Weltevreden as quickly as if a central telephone or telegraph operator had flashed it over European wires. The signal meant that some unfortunate little brown Javanese had gone suddenly mad—mad as only a Malay can become. The repeated signals warned all who valued their lives to escape the maniacal rush of the dreaded amok runner.

Around the corner I came upon a native stretched out stark and then upon a dog that was limping along with frightful cuts across its body. A hundred feet farther I saw the first signs of life since the dreaded signal had first been sounded. Almost at the same moment that I saw a small group of police agents, natives and a few Europeans gathered on a lawn down the street there came the "finish" signal of three short raps repeated in rapid succession. This signal, like the first which gave the alarm, concerned the amok runner, only the signal now meant that the madman had been caught or dispatched. It was taken up in all directions. People emerged from their houses, and soon the little group on the lawn had grown into a veritable surging mob.

When I came upon this scene I found a small, wiry Javanese stretched out on the lawn. He had evidently been stunned by a blow from a club in the hands of a police agent. Near him lay a knife, and the knife showed that it had been put to awful use very recently.

The warning amok signals had been altogether vain in the case of one European, for near by, in the entrance to his house, lay a prominent planter, the victim of the mad Javanese. He had been stabbed to the heart. Before the dead planter reached the bed that was to be his last the little Javanese outside had recovered from the amok fever, was wondering what had happened to him and still more so at what he had done and was led away for his execution.—Emile W. Voute in Harper's Weekly.

Some Foreign Coins.

The franc was formerly called livre (pound), though the connection with any special weight is not evident. The name of the German coin, mark, meaning a weight of eight ounces, was formerly in general use in Europe. The name of the Italian coin that corresponds with the franc (lira) also means pound. The coins in present use in Spain have their names from other sources. The five peseta piece is called escudo (shield). "Peseta," the name of the small coin representing the monetary standard, means simply "little piece." "Ruble" is from the word meaning "to cut" and was so called because originally the coin was made with an ornamental edge.

A Patient Priscilla.

Katie, of Pennsylvania Dutch descent, had served for ten years in a wealthy Virginia family.

For more than half of this term of service one Jacob of her own people had at intervals come a-calling. He had sat in the kitchen and watched the deft and skillful movements of Katie with marked respect and ponderous admiration, but he had never "spoken." At length toward the end of the seventh year she took the reins of destiny in her own hands and addressed her admirer thus:

"Vell, Zhakob, if yer vants me yer can zhust haf me."

A light dawned in the mild blue eye of Jacob. Bringing his hand down gently on his knee, he replied:

"I vas zhust about to mention it."

Vegetable Cast Iron.

Official tests of the many valuable hard woods native to Western Australia have made known the extraordinary properties of yate, believed to be the strongest of all known woods. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equalling that of good cast iron. But many specimens are much stronger, and one was tested up to seventeen and a half tons to the square inch, which is equal to the tensile strength of wrought iron. The sawed timber of yate is probably the strongest in the world. The tree grows to a maximum height of a hundred feet and has sometimes a diameter of two and a half or even three feet.

Description of a Mountain.

"Jimmy," said the teacher, "what is a cape?"

"A cape is land extending into the water."

"Correct, William. Define a gulf."

"A gulf is water extending into the land."

"Good! Christopher," to a small, eager-looking boy, "what is a mountain?"

Christopher shot up from his seat so suddenly as to startle the teacher and promptly responded, "A mountain is land extending into the air."—Dundee Advertiser.

The Unkindest Cut.

"We can bear the injustice of being deprived of voting," shouted the suffragist, "but we must protest, and protest with all the vigor of our womanhood, against man, who makes our state of political slavery the target for his insulting irony!

"Just to think," she resumed after taking a drink of water and a deep breath—"just to think of the noble form of woman being made to typify in marble, bronze and granite that which has never been here—liberty!"

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

THE DUTCH NEVER GIVE OVER FROM MORN TO NIGHT.

A Land Where Water Is Plentiful and Is Lavishly Used—Barge Life Is a Peaceful and Highly Comfortable Existence—Picturesque Toy Country That Lies Along the Banks of the Canals.

The most cleanly people in the world? Well, the peasants of Holland are well forward in the line, if not at the head. They scrub their houses not only inside but out, washing the bricks as high as the arm of the good housewife can reach, and if any trees happen to be growing close to the door, their bark is submitted to the same treatment. Every village is the scene of constant scrubbing from morning until night, writes E. I. Farrington in The Interior.

Of course there is water everywhere. As every schoolboy knows, the land is below the level of the sea, so that the safety of the dykes which hold the waters back is the paramount consideration at all times. There are the canals, too, a great network of waterways on which a large population makes its home. Formerly the canal boats were drawn by dogs, but since the Government has forbidden that practice it is not uncommon to see a woman and her child tugging at the ropes while the husband sits comfortably on the deck smoking his pipe. Sometimes, too, the boats are poled along. They are always painted some gaudy color, for the Dutch delight in cheerful hues.

The largest of the canals are big enough to accommodate ocean steamships, and the bulkiest vessels from America can sail right up to the wharves in Amsterdam as readily as though the city were on the seacoast. The locks on the canals are so large that a whole concourse of boats can be raised from one level to another.

The barge people, 50,000 of them, live on their boats the year round. The family have comfortable quarters at the stern, and generally the wife of the owner has an excellent display of flowers. There is usually a good deal of brass ornamentation about the barge, and it is a point of honor that this shall be kept shining like a mirror. Oftentimes the owner of the boat has several cages of birds, in which he seems to find a good deal of satisfaction. It's comfortable enough existence, but it is not a good life for the children, for they have few opportunities for receiving an education—and in Holland, as elsewhere, the necessity of book learning is coming to be more and more appreciated.

The people of Holland still retain their national mode of dress for the most part. Modern ideas, or rather the ideas of other lands, are making themselves felt, however, and the villager no longer goes to a public affair in his wooden shoes, these being worn only about his work and in the fields. He has leather shoes for dress occasions. The Holland peasants—the men, that is—have a curious habit of chewing and smoking at the same time, and the quid of tobacca is laid aside at times for future reference.

Religion is not at high ebb in the cities, and many of the well-to-do people go to church only occasionally. In the villages, however, everybody turns out in best attire on Sunday morning. A woman acts as usher, and on cold days provides the members of her sex with little stoves to keep their feet warm. Sometimes these stoves smoke atrociously, and the good women protect their nostrils from the odor of smoldering peat by turning cologne on their handkerchiefs, which are held to their noses and perhaps the nose of some neighbor who has been so unfortunate as to forget either handkerchief or cologne.

The farmers of Holland are very fond of their sleek black and white cows, and on some of the farms family and cattle live under the same roof, there being a single partition between the stable part of the building and the living rooms. Farmhouses are even to be found occasionally in which there is no partition between the living part of the house and the quarters where the cattle are confined. The neatness of the Dutch stable is proverbial, the good housewife's pride compelling her to scrub as faithfully there as anywhere else on her domain. The hay for the cattle is kept in a loft overhead and the rafters in the living room are hung with smoked meat.

Holland is famous the world over for the bulbs which she produces. The people are very proud of their tulips, representations of which are often seen carved on household articles, worked into the quilts and even reproduced on the women's stockings.

Nowadays every visitor to Holland feels, of course, that he must linger at The Hague, the city which has been made world famous as the seat of the tribunal which is making for peace between the nations of the earth. But if the traveler wants to get a real glimpse of picturesque Holland, let him journey to the old fishing village of Scheveningen, not far from The Hague. Its fishing fleet is an imposing one, and is best seen at night, when the boats are drawn up on the beach. When the fishermen begin to come to land, the women of the village walk down to the beach with their knitting in their hands to meet them. They wear their wooden shoes, and make a merry clatter as they go.

The homes of the middle class Dutch in the cities and towns are much more pretentious than those which belong to the peasant class. But the gospel of work and of cleanliness holds equal prominence there. The walls and the floor are immaculately clean. The pewter and the pottery artistically displayed are polished to the last degree. The linen is spotless. The home, especially at tea time, is a delight to visit, but the inevitable knitting is always at hand.

The German military authorities will use the services of 120 civilian motor cyclists in the army manoeuvres in September.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,200 square miles.

WOMEN AND TROUSERS.

Thoughts Suggested by the Recent Decision Rendered In Kansas.

When a Kansas woman addressed a letter to the Attorney-General of the state asking him if there was any law forbidding her wearing trousers, the matter caused considerable comment. The woman was a plain, sensible person who worked hard to support herself and children on a small farm, and in this employment she found skirts encumbering and awkward. She decided that she could wear trousers with comfort and convenience provided the law would permit.

There is something fine about this Kansas woman's position. She did not simper and treat the subject frivolously, but went straight to the point. There is no hint of immodesty or "mannishness" about the proposition and it certainly is not a joke with her. And it is gratifying to note that the Attorney-General assured her that she could wear trousers if she cared to do so without offence either legal or ethical.

Civilization, among other things, has made us slaves of sartorial custom. We wear conventional clothing as a voluntary concession to what we deem the proprieties, but in reality we are hopelessly possessed with the fear of criticism. To be sure, we vary the quality and the designs of articles of apparel, but fundamentally we cling to the same set rules of habiliments which our fathers and grandfathers inherited. The absurdity of custom is illustrated in many forms, but it is particularly conspicuous in matters of dress. A woman, for instance, will wear a dinner gown cut alarmingly low fore and aft, with a train that drags behind like a comet's tail. At the seashore this same woman will wear a bathing suit that exposes the nether limbs to the knees, but carefully covers the throat and shoulders. A gentleman hesitates, often, to appear in his shirt sleeves in the bosom of his family, but when out bathing he will don a one-piece garment that is a disgrace to decency.

Why should not women wear trousers? In the Orient women wear trousers and men wear skirts. There is nothing immodest about trousers that should make them appropriate for man and inappropriate for women. Certainly some of the gowns of the present day are more shocking in their revelations than trousers could possibly be. Of course, men's attire does not hold many possibilities for orative effect, and for this reason if for no other it will probably never become generally popular for feminine wear. But when a woman has the nerve, the energy, and the independence to work a farm, she certainly is entitled to assume the livery of the head of the house.

A Japanese Custom.

In Japan the well-to-do have almost always in the houses one room called the "chamber of the inspiring view." Its essential is a beautiful view, but taste is catholic in Japan, and the delightful view may be a blossoming cherry tree, a glimpse of a river, a miniature garden or only the newly fallen snow. In this delightful country they get up parties to visit the maple trees in the glory of autumn color or the fresh, untrodden snow, as in this country one gives theatre parties and dinners. Mushroom hunts are a fashionable diversion, and verse writing and harp playing are occupations which, in the estimation of these eternal children, befit the gentlewoman when she is within doors.

Praise Your Wife.

Praise your wife, man, for pity's sake—praise your wife when she deserves it! It won't injure her any, though it may frighten her some from its strangeness. If you wish to make and keep her happy give her a loving word occasionally. If she takes pains to make you something pretty don't take it with only: "Yes, it is very pretty. Won't you hand me my paper?" It will take you only a minute's time to kiss her and tell her she is the best wife in town. You will find it to be a paying investment—one which will yield you a large return in increased care and willing labor for your comfort. Loving praise will lighten labor wonderfully and should be freely bestowed.

No Vowels In It.

Many places have curious names, but apparently there is only one place which has a name without any vowels. That place is the little hamlet of Ws, near Paris. Ws being an unpronounceable name, the inhabitants of the hamlet have transformed it into "D'Us," but this change has not been sanctioned legally, and on all official records the name Ws still appears. The hamlet has 117 inhabitants, and its sole attractions are the Chateau d'Osny, which has been for many years in the possession of Edmond About's family, and the Chateau de Vigny, which is one of the best specimens of the renaissance style of architecture.

Not the Fish He Caught.

"Say," said Baitman as he passed the fish dealer's stand, "send up a couple of nice bass to the house tomorrow."

"All right, sir," answered the dealer.

"And be sure they are bass," continued Baitman. "You see, I'm going—er—out—of town for the day, and—er—the last time I went I told my wife I was going trout fishing, and you sent up a salt mackerel. Another error like that on your part and there will be strained relations in my family. See?"

Not Accountable.

Highest Cathedral Tower.

The highest cathedral tower in the world is that of Ulm, in Austria. It is taller than the Washington monument and the pyramid of Khufu, at Gizeh. The Eiffel tower is the only modern construction which surpasses it in height.

ROSEBERY'S GRAND UNCLE.

He Was a Canadian Lawyer Who Lived and Died In Quebec.

Few are aware that the great publicist, Lord Rosebery, had a grand uncle who played a prominent part in the public life of Lower Canada half a century ago. He was the Hon. Francis Ward Primrose, advocate, who lived most of his life in the city of Quebec and died in 1860 at the age of seventy-six. The deceased gentleman was the second son of the then Earl Rosebery, and might, of course, have had a prominent career in England. He came to Quebec in early manhood, for reasons which made it inconvenient to live in England. For many years he stood at the front of the legal profession in Quebec, and that he earned and retained the good opinions and respect of his fellow practitioners, is illustrated by the highly flattering and complimentary resolutions adopted by them after his death. His remains were interred in Mount Hermon cemetery. Mr. Primrose maintained no correspondence with his family in England during his residence in this country. Prior to coming to Canada he sat with honor in the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, where he was a consistent supporter of Liberal principles. An obituary notice published in The Quebec Telegraph at the time of his death, said: "He was one of the junior counsel of the unfortunate Queen Caroline, and in youth was a prominent cadet of a great Whig family, and, even then, a trusted member of the Whig party. Like his brother, the present Earl of Rosebery, he was an intimate friend of Lord Brougham's, when Brougham, a rising barrister, was struggling at the bar without his noble and honorable friends's advantages of birth and station. He was equally intimate with Denman and a whole galaxy of the forensic talent of the day. In Canada he wore the robe of Queen's Counsel with dignity, conducted the crown business for a brief space impartially and well, and was an advocate of the first rank, uniting the fire and energy of youth to the caution and experience of age, as all will admit who heard his full and elevated voice and noticed his vigorous and appropriate action on his very last appearance before the courts, or noticed how he could quote old statutes and old authors from the capacious stores of his vivid and accurate memory, while young men with book in hand painfully toiled after him, or the manner in which on occasions he poured forth the lessons of constitutional and Parliamentary law from the deep and rich lore of English history."

JUDGE HAGARTY'S MASTERPIECE

From time to time there reappears in the press allusions to a celebrated paraphrase on "The House that Jack Built" which contains a wealth of synonyms not less remarkable than its mock, pompous and grandiose descriptions of the commonplace incident. It was published anonymously and went around the world but is generally admitted to have been the work of the late Chief Justice Hagarty of Toronto.)

Lo! here, with hirsute honors doffed succinct
Of saponaceous locks, the priest who linked
In Hymen's golden bands, the torn unthrift,
Whose means exiguous stared through many a rift.
Even as he kissed the virgin all forlorn,
Who milked the cow with complicated horn,
Who in fine wrath the canine torturer skied
That dared to vex the insidious muricide,
Who let the auroral effluence through the pelt
Of the sly rat that robbed the palace Ian had built.

The loud cantankerous Shanghai comes at last,
Whose shouts aroused the shorn ecclesiast,
Who sealed the vows of Hymen's sacrament,
To him, who robed in garments indigent,
Exosculates the damsel lachrymose,
The emulgator of that brute morose,
That tossed the dog, that worried the cat, that kilt
The rat that ate the malt that lay in the house that Jack built.

Indian Drama.

Oberammergau gets the credit for being the home of the Passion Play—perhaps not altogether justly so. This year the great drama is being produced once more there. But Canadians won't need to cross to Europe to see it. The Passion Play is due to come off on the British Columbia coast—acted by the Skale Indians who hunt and fish on the Fraser. For several days the Fraser has been black with hundreds of redmen speeding from Puget Sound in their canoes. The big United States reservations in Washington and Oregon are silent places now, depleted of the Indians, who have been granted permission to attend the religious celebration of the Canadian tribesmen. Even up in Alaska, Indians are hastening to join the babel of tongues. The British Columbia village has become a vast, picturesque panorama; Skwa, which ordinarily is the usual western fur station—shops, shacks, houses; withal a touch of romance in the little painted church from whose steeple booms for fifty miles into the mountains, the first brass bell that ever went over the trail to the northwest.

Watched It Grow Up.

A certain local character in a New Brunswick village whose statements were often more emphatic than truthful was once a witness in a petty trial involving the ownership of an auger, and positively identified it as the property of one of the parties to the suit.

"Do you swear that you know this auger?" asked the attorney for the other side.

"Yes, sir."

"How long have you known it?" continued the cross-examiner.

"I have known that auger," said the witness in an impressive tone, "ever since it was a gimlet."

THE NEBRASKAN IN ALBERTA.

Arthur Stringer Discusses the Influx Into the Canadian West.

To-day more wheat is bought and sold in Winnipeg than in Chicago. More than half of it is moved by American money. Three-quarters of Canada's most prosperous city, the city of Calgary, which twelve years ago was a sleepy "cow town" and is to-day the bustling, booming centre of the "Alberta Red" prosperity, is owned by Americans. Its most fashionable residential section has been christened "American Hill," and it is already tapped by an American railroad built and operated by American capital. West of Winnipeg the native Canadian is outnumbered two to one by his American cousin. South of the line, in fact, the startled Middle West States are forming "Why-Go-to-Canada Clubs." Yet characteristically American is this brand new country's brand new slogan as it scatters northward for new wheat fields: "A billion bushels a year or bust!"

A State Department report of last December disclosed that the total American investments in Canada had already reached the colossal sum of $226,800,000. This sum was approximately divided as follows:

168 companies, average capital, $600,000	$100,800,000
Investments in British Columbia mills and timber	50,000,000
Investments in British Columbia mines	50,000,000
Land deals in Alberta, etc.	10,000,000
Investments in lumber and mines in Alberta	5,000,000
Packing plants	5,000,000
Implement-distributing houses	4,000,000
Land deals in British Columbia	2,000,000
Total	$226,800,000

"Why'd you leave your own country?" I had the temerity to ask a denim-clad man from Nebraska as he stood in the shadow of his "high-bagger" threshing "Alberta Red" out of the stock.

"Hev' I?" he mildly inquired.

"Of course you have!"

"I ain't seen anything to show me I hev'," persisted the amiable expatriate, "except I get a Canadian quarter in my change now and then!"

"But this is King Edward's country!"

"No, 'tain't, young man! It's God A'mighty's country! That's what it is. And I guess I'm a blamed sight nearer Nebraska and the home folks than you New Yorkers are. And I guess we've got more in common, us prairie folks up and down these plains from Texas to Great Slave Lake, than you Easterners have with anything west o' the Missouri. No, sir; it's all one, this West! It's all God A'mighty's outdoors!"

I tried to point out to him that he was under a new flag and a new Government. His retort was worthy of record.

"A surveyor's parallel o' latitude ain't such a hell of a thing t' climb over!"

And the denim-clad Nebraskan, in his homely way, went on to show me how the country was all one. He wouldn't admit that there was any weakening in the feeling of American citizenship. Nobody had demanded of him the sale of his birthright. He found himself under a system of government that was proving itself as democratic as any in the world, with representative institutions even more direct in the submission of the executive authority to the will of the people. He found a scrupulous enforcement of law and the greatest respect for the rights of person and property. He found himself free of the ever active antennae of that loathed octopus known as the Trusts. He was in a country where everyone was too busy growing wheat and making roads and building cities to hang about talking jingoism and kow-towing to potentates in gold braid. There was no obtrusion of nationality. This newer country of his adoption was, in fact, under hostage to peace, with its thirty-five hundred miles of unfortified boundary and its prairie cities without a machine gun.—Arthur Stringer in Pearson's.

A Round-Up In Saskatchewan.

Some of the yellow fever wastrels who turned their faces northward during the mad rush of '97 from Edmonton to the Yukon gold fields lost more than their health en route. For instance, between two and three hundred horses belonging to the caravans ran derelict. These steeds and their descendants have always been the cause of considerable calculation on the part of ranchers. Expeditions have been sent out to round them up—none achieving the expected results. The horses can run like original mustangs. Many a home-bred equine of the ranch has run himself to death, trying to rope in the Yukon stallions. At last, ranchers have come to the conclusion that running down the wild horses is too costly a job. Not so the Government. The Department of Agriculture wants the stray steeds. They have given the Messinghall outfit, Sounding Lake, a two-months' contract to do the capturing.

Carried It Off.

In New Brunswick and other Canadian provinces when a wife deserts her husband he frequently publishes a notice like this in the local papers:—

"Whereas my wife has left my bed and board without just cause, etc., I will be responsible for no bills of her contracting, etc."

An old fellow who had been deserted by his spouse once came to a lawyer to have such a notice prepared.

The attorney began writing the notice in the stereotyped form, reading as he wrote: "Whereas my wife Emily has left my bed—"

"Hold on," interrupted the client; "It was her bed and she took it with her."

What News Is.

A Toronto paper in endeavoring to describe what news is says:

Some people never can understand what news it. Let us define it. A daily paper will never publish an extra because a Maltese cat eats a canary. But let the canary eat the cat, and see what will happen.

So perfect an insulator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap of an inch.

If Canada's wheat crop last year had been shipped by rail, each car holding 15 tons, it would have made a continuous train 1365 miles long.

Anger and Digestion.

A well known physician has written: "Anger is a passion which especially unfits the stomach for doing much work. If it occurs often or be protracted, but little food should be taken. Those who indulge in it have a double cause for abstinence. Both their folly and their stomachs call for a fast."

Northern China.

In northern China the natives wear only one or two thin garments in summer. In winter they add several suits well wadded to keep themselves warm.

The House of Keys.

The Manx house of keys is credited with being the most ancient existing legislative body. It dates back to many years before the Norman conquest.

Pulse Beats.

A mouse's pulse beats ten times as fast as a man's. Generally speaking, the smaller the creature the more rapid its heart beats. There have been noted, for instance, 30 pulsations per minute in the elephant, 40 in the horse, 50 in the ass and mule, 70 in man, 90 in the dog and 150 to 200 in the rabbit.

CLEVERLY DISGUISED.

A Little Game of Strategy That Was Played by Bismarck.

The Iron Chancellor was not only a statesman, able to handle abstract theories of government, but a shrewd player of the lesser games of life.

When he represented Prussia at the Diet of Frankfort in 1866 he had reason to suspect that his letters and dispatches were tampered with by the Austrians. Other diplomatists suffered from the same meddling. One day after a stormy meeting Bismarck and the representative from Hanover walked away together, and as they walked the Hanoverian touched on the sore subject and asked Bismarck if he had found a way to get his letters through. The chancellor replied that the representative should know presently.

The prince as the two strolled along led the way through dingy bypaths into a slum. Drawing on a thick pair of gloves, he entered a little shop where the poor bought tea, cheese, pickles, lamp oil and such commodities. The astonished Hanoverian followed. A stupid looking lad stood behind the counter.

"Boy," demanded the chancellor, "do you sell soap?"

"Yes, sir," responded the boy, placing on the counter a variety of strong scented cakes.

When, after a careful examination, Bismarck had selected his soap he thrust his hand into his pocket and drew out an uninclosed letter. He gave an exclamation as of dismay and surprise. Apparently annoyed at his forgetfulness, he cried, "Boy, do you sell envelopes?"

Envelopes of a cheap grade were produced, and Bismarck put the letter in one. Then he asked for pen and ink and set out to write the address, but his heavy glove hindered him. "Here, boy," he exclaimed, throwing down the pen, "just write this address for me!"

When the scrawl was finished Bismarck took the letter and left the shop.

"There," said he, putting the letter to his companion's nose, "what with the soap, the herring, the candles and the cheese I don't think they'll smell my dispatch under that writing."

Primrose Salad.

The primrose is only one of the many flowers which graced the salad of the past. The old-time cook looked upon both flower garden and kitchen garden with the same calculating eye. Of herbs all were seized—thyme, rosemary, marjoram, basil, lavender. And of flowers the rose, the violet, the cowslip, the primrose, the lily of the valley, were never safe from the pot hunter. Then there were the roots and buds of the fields. Elder tops, burdock roots, "ashkeys," broom buds—all, indeed, were good that came to the cook. The flowers he used for coloring sirups and custards. The roots he pickled. And his "sallets" comprised everything plantlike. Today the fittest survive.—London Spectator.

A Queer Tug of War.

In Burma the inhabitants have a novel form of the sport that elsewhere is commonly called tug of war. In the Burmese game are a rain party and a drought party, which pull one against the other, the victory of either party being considered to have immediate results as regards the weather. The drought party, however, obtains few victories, for the kind of weather it represents is commonly not so much desired as rain. In the face, therefore, of a strong public opinion the rain party is nearly always allowed to win, the palpable "roping" in the popular notion being generally followed by a fertilizing downpour.

His Helpful Suggestion.

In a church which could be named the pastor was desirous of bringing about in a tactful way some improvements in the midweek service and announced for a subject "The Ideal Prayer Meeting." A number of helpful suggestions had been made, when one brother known to be harmless as a dove if not wise as a serpent got up and said:

"I think everybody should come prepared to say something, so that no time should be lost except that which is taken by the pastor."

As he was known to be a great admirer of the pastor the gravity of the meeting was somewhat disturbed.

The Same Brick.

One day a mother found her four-year-old Alice playing with a brick in the parlor. She threw it out of doors and, turning to the child, said, "If you bring another brick into the parlor mother will whip you."

Shortly afterward she again found the child playing with a brick and, looking at her reprovingly, asked, "What did mother tell you about that brick, Alice?"

"Well, this isn't another brick," said the child. "This is the one I had before."

Napoleon and His Mother.

Soon after Napoleon's assumption of the imperial purple he chanced to meet his mother in the gardens of St. Cloud. He was surrounded by courtiers and half playfully held out his hand for her to kiss. "Not so, my son," she gravely replied, at the same time presenting her hand in return; "it is your duty to kiss the hand of her who gave you life."

Snakes.

The holes commonly seen in the fields are not "snake holes," though commonly called such. They are made by field mice, shrews and moles, often by the larger insects, and it is very seldom that snakes even take refuge in them. Few snakes actually dig holes. They burrow in soft ground, the subterranean species, but these live, as a rule, in soft, yielding soil.

For Modern Health.

"'In aqua sanitas,'" quoted the modern observer. "Now, there's an axiom that needs to be revised."

"What's the idea?" inquired the plain citizen.

"Well, to be correct, it should read, 'In boiled aqua sanitas.'"

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

FIGURE PROBLEMS

Gems That Are to Be Found In the Old Arithmetics.

ALL OF THEM "PRACTICAL."

That Was What the Inquisitive Boy's Father Told Him, and the Lad Started Out to Verify the Statement—The "Practical" Examples He Dug Up.

Was education more practical a generation ago, or did John's father study his books more thoroughly than John does? John is a seventh grade student in the public schools. He asked his father to help him solve the following problem:

"A., asked how much money he has in the bank, replied, 'If I had $10 more I would have $1,000 more than half what I now have.' How much money had A.?"

"Such a fool problem," said the father. "Tell that teacher to ask the cashier. You have been pestering me with problems like that for a week. Suppose your teacher asked you how old you are. Would you tell her 'If I were ten times as old as I am, diminished by forty-two, I would be thirty years older than dad, and if dad were one-fourth as old as he now is he would be my age?' What would your teacher do if you answered in such a manner? In my day we had practical problems in our arithmetic."

In order to investigate his father's statement John went to the public library and asked for an old arithmetic.

The librarian gave him Richard's Natural Arithmetic. He turned to the page marked "Practical Exercises" and read:

"A. puts his whole flock of sheep into three pastures. Half go into one pasture, one-third into another and thirty-two into a third. How many in the flock?"

"That's queer," said John. "Practical exercises too. Here is a man who wants to find how many sheep he has. He counts them so he will know when he has half of them. This half he puts into a pasture. Then he counts out a third and puts it in another pen. Next he counts what's left and finds he has thirty-two. After a little figuring he finds how many in the whole flock. Very practical. I guess dad didn't study that book."

The next book he examined was Milne's Inductive Arithmetic, edition of 1879. In miscellaneous examples he found the following:

"Two ladders will together just reach the top of a building seventy-five feet high. If the shorter ladder is two-thirds the length of the other, what is the length of each?"

"Why didn't he measure each ladder separately?" John asked himself. "That problem is not practical. I guess dad is older than I thought. I want an older book."

The text written in 1868 was handed to him. The book was evidently influenced by the civil war, for it was filled with problems dealing with battering down fortifications and the sustenance of soldiers. One problem was:

"If twelve pieces of cannon (eighteen pounders) can batter down a fortress in three hours, how long will it take for nineteen twenty-four-pounders to batter down the same fortress?"

"That's fine for a general," John reflected, "but dad says that I am going to be a captain of industry."

Another arithmetic of the same date had the famous fish problem with which John's teacher had troubled him for six weeks before he himself finally explained it to the class. The fish problem is:

"The head of a fish is ten inches long. Its tail is as long as its head and one-half the body. The body is as long as the head and tail both. How long is the fish?"

Very handy problem for a butcher.

John turned to the Common School Arithmetic, edition of 1853. "Here I'm sure to find something good," he reflected and read:

"A hare starts up twelve rods before a hound, but she is not perceived by him till she has been up one and one-fourth minutes. She runs at the rate of thirty-six rods a minute, and the hound runs at the rate of forty rods a minute. How long will the race last, and what will be the distance the hound runs?"

"What difference does it make how far the hound runs?" John asked as he turned to the Scholar's Arithmetic, edition of 1807. The present high cost of living made the first problem impractical for present day purposes, John concluded. The problem was as follows:

"If I give eighty bushels of potatoes at 21 cents a bushel and 240 pounds of flax at 15 cents a pound for sixty-four bushels of salt, what is the salt worth a bushel?"

Another problem was:

"A good man driving his guest to market was met by another, who said, 'Good morrow, master, with your 100 geese.' Says he in reply, 'I have not 100 geese, but if I had half as many as I now have and two and one-half geese besides the number I now have already I should have 100.' How many geese had the man?"

How long would you permit a man to live if he made such an answer to you?

"Phew!" John sighed as he wiped his forehead and handed the book back to the librarian. "Dad must have skipped these practical problems."—Kansas City Star.

We are never so ridiculous by the qualities we have as by those we affect to have.—Rochefoucauld.

To make it possible to reach the bottom of a trunk without stooping over, an Illinois man has patented a trunk with metal legs which slide in guideways on the corners to raise it.

A WOMAN'S LOGIC.

It Helped Her Out When the Customs Officials Bothered Her.

On one of the recently arriving transatlantic steamers was a young woman whose extreme economy had not permitted any lavish expenditure abroad. But she had repeatedly referred with commendable pride to the material for two silk dresses she had purchased at a bargain which she was bringing home for her mother and sister. Even the suggestion of one sympathetic listener that she would have to pay duty produced merely a temporary restraint.

Finally when the liner approached New York and the custom house officer received the somewhat plain woman at the cabin table her fellow passengers were curious. Being asked the usual questions about dutiable property, she replied stoutly and defiantly that she had the material for two silk dresses.

"Are they for yourself?" the inspector wanted to know.

"No, they are not," she declared. "I am bringing them home for presents."

"Then since they are not for your own use I shall be compelled to charge you duty," and he figured out for her the required amount.

Taking the pencil from his hand, she figured for a moment and then said: "Well, I declare! That has made those dresses cost me so much that I simply can't afford to give them away now. I'm just going to keep them for myself; that's what I'll do!"—New York Tribune.

LET THE YAWN COME.

A Good One Is a Splendid Thing For the Whole Body.

A good, wide, open mouthed yawn is a splendid thing for the whole body. A yawn is nature's demand for rest. Some people think they only yawn because they are sleepy, but this is not so. You yawn because you are tired. You may be sleepy also, but that is not the real cause of your yawning. You are sleepy because you are tired, and you yawn because you are tired.

Whenever you feel like yawning just yawn. Don't try to suppress it because you think it is impolite to yawn. Put your hand over your mouth if you want to, but let the yawn come. And if you are where you can stretch at the same time that you yawn just stretch and yawn. This is nature's way of stretching and relaxing the muscles.

Don't be afraid to open your mouth wide and yawn and stretch whenever you feel like it. Indeed, if you are very tired, but do not feel like yawning, there is nothing that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight back chair and, lifting your feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretch the arms, put the head back, open the mouth wide and make yourself yawn.

Those tense nerves will relax, the contracted muscles will stretch and the whole body will be rested. Do this two or three times when you are tired and see what it will do for you.

First English Horse Races.

Chester possesses plausible claims to be the birthplace of the British turf. It was one William Lester, who about 1609, "being mayor of Chester, did cause three silver bells to be made of good value to be run for upon the Roode Dee." This seems the earliest definite establishment of a horse race. From the nature of the prize was derived the proverb "To bear the bell," though the bells in this case existed long before the "ring." Our ancestors being more easily satisfied in the matter of amusement than their degenerate descendants, there was apparently only one contest. The "Chester cup," which has been substituted for the "best bell," is now worth £2,500, to say nothing of Cheshire cheeses for the three placed horses.—Westminster Gazette.

Had a Mere Trifle.

A doctor calling on a patient who had been very ill, but was now convalescent, said to the latter's wife:

"You must be careful in regard to his diet for a few days."

"Yes, I know that," was the reply. "He has just had his dinner, and I didn't give him anything but a cup of coffee and two or three warm biscuits and a piece of pie and a couple of doughnuts and one slice of bread with gooseberry preserves on it. I have just been telling him he couldn't have anything very substantial right away until his stummick was stiddier."—New York Tribune.

Pretty Much Alone.

In a rather rabid discussion in parliament a member of doubtful ability and power twitted Disraeli for having deserted his camp.

"I did not know that the honorable gentleman had a camp," Disraeli replied in a tone of mock surprise. "I have always looked upon him as the solitary sentinel of a deserted fortress."

No Chance For Leniency.

"Can't you be merciful and love me a little?" he pleaded as they sat in their steamer chairs.

"I can't show you any mercy at all," she whispered. "This isn't the quarterdeck."—St. Louis Star.

GOLD EXTRACTION.

Getting Metal in Saskatchewan Is Interesting Work.

The evolution of gold extraction from the river bed and bars of the Saskatchewan would form a volume of interesting details. On the hilly drive from Duck Lake, the famous battle ground of 1885, on the south shore of the North Saskatchewan, to Prince Albert, tourists may view an old, curiously constructed, ramshackle, abandoned steamboat, which somewhat resembled a sternwheel passenger craft, and is yet rigged with an apparatus evidently intended for dredging. This is a disused gold dredge, which represents some $10,000 or $12,000 invested, mostly by Englishmen, in enabling an English engineer to develop his ideas as to what a gold dredger should be. Perhaps, if he had been furnished with wheels, pulleys, chains, stanchions and other mechanical parts of good steel, it might have worked to this day. But the parts were made in England, possibly by some one used to contracting for the war office. They gave out at all critical junctures with wondrous rapidity, and the dredger practically wents to bits, as has been said, almost after the manner of Dr. Holmes' "oonehss shay." Yet it produced in the open season of one year, gold that sold at the mint for $8,100, from 18,000 cubic yards of gravel dredged from the bars of the North Saskatchewan; this means 45 cents of gold per cubic yard. The tailings are said to have contained enough more to be worth reworking.

Now, extensive gold-dredging operations are carried on along the Feather River of California, in gravel or sand, which yields less than 20 cents per cubic yard. Boston men and money are engaged on Feather River. Many have since turned their attention to the Saskatchewan.

At present the North Saskatchewan, at many points along the meandering for 500 miles below Edmonton, is being exploited by miners using a very crude apparatus locally called the "grizzly," which term is more properly applied to one part of the collection of cheap contrivances.

The grizzly, whence the evolution of the gold dredge is a very simple device. Any ordinary man could construct one, at a cost of $5 or $10, according to his ability. Men earned and now earn from $2 to $4 a day along the Saskatchewan by this process. On some bars they run as high as $8 and $10. During the open season scores may be seen recovering fine gold; the work is remunerative and fascinating, but now that modern invention has produced a dredge and buckets operated by water power and electricity, doing the work of 1,500 to 2,000 men each day, the days of the "grizzly" and the "rocker" appear to be numbered—so far as being considered distinctive machines for gold recovery.

A steam dredger is essentially a "grizzly" apparatus on a great scale. The machinery lifts gravels from the river bed or the bar, dumps it aboard the boat, washes it over successive screens, and ultimately leaves the gold adhering to blanket cloth, from which work it is washed in receptacles containing mercury, so that amalgam is formed. A steam "grizzly" and all other plant contributing to the formation of a first-class modern gold-dredging apparatus, cost from $60,000 to $125,000—or more, according to capacity.—T. H. Brooks, M.E.

BASEBALL.

Park Nine Beat the Stations in Eleven Innings.

One of the most interesting and exciting games of baseball ever played in this city was pulled off on Coleman's Flats on Saturday afternoon. The Stations and Park Nine were the contenders, and the result showed the truth of the old baseball proverb—a game is ever over till it is played out.

The largest crowd of the season stood round the diamond, and the rooters were out in force. To say that excitement ran high is to put it mildly.

Ladies, men and boys did everything in their power to cheer their favorites on, and the teams responded by putting up a fine article of ball.

In the last game played by these teams the Stations shut the Park Nine out, and the Steam Horse supporters were sure their favorites would win on Saturday.

But many a good thing goes wrong these days, even Jeffries—but that's another story.

The Park Nine were first at bat, and before they were retired three men had crossed the pan.

Good start.

When the Park Nine took the field it was seen that Smith was in the box for them. He appeared to be in great shape, and "had everything" for a couple of innings, with the result that the Trunkers were blanked. In the third, Smith "blew up." Poor condition, it was said, told on him, and between his wildness and a few timely hits the Stations began to make runs. When the fireworks were over five Grand Trunk men had galloped over the home plae.

Then Phelps went in for the Park Nine, and pitched a good steady game. The Stations got two runs in the seventh and two more in the eighth.

The Park Nine got their fourth run in the third innings, and after that Sullivan held them safe till the end of the eighth. When the Park Nine took the bat for their half of the ninth the score was 9-4, and they had the short end of it.

Nobody would have given an ice cream cone for their chances. But the "Wharf Rats" showed their class by landing hard on "Sully," and their supporters took heart. Three runs were scored with one man down. The next man was out on a fly. Two gone and two runs needed to tie. Could they do it? Two men on bases. A hit to left field in the crowd scored the two base-runners, and the score was tied.

Was the crowd excited? Well rather.

The Stations were blanked in their half of the ninth, and the game went into extra innings, with every player and spectator keyed up to concert pitch.

Both drew blanks in the tenth, but in the eleventh the Park Nine scored two runs. They they blanked the Stations and the game was over.

It was a very clever and most exciting game, and players on both sides did classy work, particularly the batteries. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire, and had a hard game to handle, getting away with it in good style.

DEATHS.

LINK—In Barrington, Rhode Island, on Friday, July 15th Mrs. J. C. Link, aged 41 years.

The funeral will take place tomorrow Tuesday, July 19th, from the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Biscomb, Bettes street, at 2.30 p.m. Services at 2 o'clock. Funeral private. Please omit flowers.

Sad Blight Fell On Happy Party On Pleasure Bent

MRS. F. C. LINK, NEE BISCOMB, A FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY, WAS COMING TO THE OLD BOYS' REUNION, WHEN SHE MET WITH AN ACCIDENT IN BARRINGTON, R. I., AND DIED OF HEART FAILURE — PARENTS LIVE HERE.

A sad fatality occurred at Barrington, R. I., on Friday afternoon last, whereby the life of a lady, who was a former resident of this city, was sacrificed.

It appears that Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Link, of Abbeyville, S. C., were en route to this city, for the Old Boys' Reunion, when the unfortunate affair occurred. At Barrington they stopped off to visit Mrs. Rev. Budd, a sister of Mrs. Link, who was also coming here, and on Friday afternoon, the party were in a skiff when it accidentally capsized. All were rescued, but the shock to Mrs. Link proved fatal and she expired immediately upon being taken out of the water. Heart trouble, aggravated by the occurrence, caused death.

Mrs. Link, whose maiden name was Miss E. Biscomb, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Biscomb and a sister of Mrs. J. A. Goodsell, all of this city She had not been here for some time and a happy family reunion was anticpated, but now all is sadness.

Deceased was 42 years of age and a lady who was highly esteemed by all who knew her. The husband, but no family, survives. Another sister, Mrs. W. J. Church, of Norwich, Eng. also survives.

The remains arrived here to-day for interment

SPORTING NOTES.

"A Fan" asks: "Can a man be put in to bat for another in a baseball match?"

Certainly, providing he has not played in the game before. The "pinch-hitter" takes the other man's place and the latter retires. The rules say: "Each side shall be required to have present on the field during a championship game a sufficient number of substitute players in uniform, conforming to the suits worn by the team-mates, to carry out the provisions of this code, which requires not less than nine players shall occupy the field in any inning of the game.

"Any such substitute may, at any stage of the game, take the place of a player whose name is in his team's batting order, but the player whom he succeeds shall not thereafter participate in that game.".

Jeffries believes there is not a living fighter who can stand for ten rounds before Johnson.

Roosevelt, who believed in boxing and indulged in it himself, tells in the Outlook how he had, as governor of New York, to suppress fisticuffs, and how demoralizing the prize ring has become. He hopes the last fight for money has taken place in the United States, and that the moving pictures of it will be suppressed. It is not a remarkable saying, but it is very remarkable because Mr. Roosevelt has said it.

A Good Teacher.

The Parkhill Gazette says: "Miss E. J. Guest, B. A., who has been on the High School staff for the past eight years, has tendered her resignation to the School Board, having accepted a more lucrative position in Belleville. Miss Guest taught, not only by precept, but by example and her influence was felt throughout the school, elevating the moral tone and reaching out after the graduates, keeping them ever near the path of duty after the portals of the school were passed. Miss Guest saw the school grow from a struggling institute to be one of the foremost in the province and of the good work required to insure that growth, she contributed no small share. In the Methodist church of which she was a member, her work as a Bible class teacher, and with the young people will long be remembered, and her work among the women of the town, through the Women's Institute, has made an impression which the years will no eradicate. Her many warm friends and admirers deeply regret the severance of the ties which bound her to the school and town, and while wishing her God-speed, cannot but feel a pang of envy at the good fortune which has befallen the Belleville Collegiate in securing her services.

Tempting Providence.

Cleveland, July 18.—An attack has been made upon aviation by The Catholic Universe, published here, the official organ of Catholicism in Ohio. Editorially, under the caption "Those Who Exalt Themselves," the paper says:

"The craze for dirigible balloons and airships should be legally restricted. We do not think that the Creator intended that man should inhabit the air or to fly like the birds, else He would have furnished him with wings. The numerous deaths that have occurred from the attempts to fly should warn man that his habitation and home is on the earth. To get wings, seek first the kingdom of God and His justice and take the commandments for your daily chart and guide."

A Man Implicated.

Ottawa, July 18.—A young woman of 25, who was found drowned last week in the Rideau Canal, has been identified as Ethel Arney of Montreal. She had been a waitress at the Cecil Hotel here for about ten days. The police are not satisfied that it is simply a case of suicide, and are hunting for a man who was seen frequently in her company. There are, however, no marks on the body to suggest foul play, but it is believed that an unknown man is directly or indirectly responsible for the tragedy.

$10,000 Blaze at Lakefield.

Lakefield, July 18.—A fire broke out yesterday evening in the grain warehouse and coal sheds of Charlton Bros. The building and contents are a total loss, except the coal. The Cavendish Lumber Co. and G. J. Moore & Sons and the village fire appliances kept five streams of water on the building. At one time the lumber and other buildings were in great danger. The loss is $10,000; covered by insurance.

Sergeant Morris Nearly Wins King's Prize at Bisley.

Bowmanville Rifleman Comes Close to Winning Great Event at National Rifle Association Meeting and Carries Off Standard of Empire Prize—Other Valuable Trophies Captured by the Dominion Competitors.

Bisley Camp, July 18.—Corporal Radice, of the Oxford University Rifles, is the winner of the King's prize, with a total score of 340; second, Sergt. Morris, 46th, Canada, scored 337; third, Sergt. Beveridge, 6th Scottish Rifles, 336; fourth, Sergt. Ommundsen, Queen's, Edinburgh, 336. Radice was leading at the finish of the shooting at the 800 yards range, the first in the last stage of the match, with Morris of Canada second. At the finish of the second range shooting, 900 yards, Morris was fifth, ten points behind the leading score.

Morris was third in the contest for the Bisley event in 1909, with a score of 316.

Lord Roberts inspected the overseas teams and congratulated the Canadians on their success.

Morris' position entitles him to the N.R.A. badge and $300, which goes into the team winnings.

Canada has twice won the King's prize. In 1895, Pte. Hayhurst, 13th, Hamilton, won it, and Pte. Perry of Vancouver captured it in 1904.

In the National Challenge Trophy, Steele, Clifford, Freeborn and Latimer shot in the Irish team. Scotland won, with England second.

In the Armorers, Richardson was 9th, winning $10; Bayles 10th, $5; Steck 21st, $5.

Staff-Sergt. Bayles is the winner of the Association Cup.

The following men won prizes in the St. George's first stage: Stuart, 103rd place, $10; Crowe, 106th place, $10.

In the King's first stage, Sharpe was 107th, winning $20; Freeborn, 111th, $20; McHarg, 112th, $20; McInnes, 122nd, $20.

One hundred competitors entered the last stage of the St. George's match Saturday, firing 15 shots at 900 yards. Following were the scores of the Canadians: Eastwood 65, McHarg 63, McKie 63, Steele 61, Steck 68, Richardson 63.

Lieut. Humphrey won the St. George's Challenge Vase, with Williams of Australia second.

The following places and prizes were won by the Canadians: Steck, 6th, $50; Eastwood, 13th, $45; Richardson, 17th, $45; McKie, 18th, $45; McHarg, 31st, $35; Steele, 42nd, $30; Drysdale, 43rd, $30.

Following are the scores of the Canadians for King's prize:

	800	900	1,000
Crowe	48	49	32
Eastwood	42	42	37
Forrest	48	41	41
Morris	48	46	44

A Canadian Suggestion.

Washington, July 18.—The International Railway Commission, when inaugurated, will be a new tie with Canada and is hailed as a long step toward closer relations with the Dominion. The commission as proposed will regulate through freight and passenger rates across the border.

It was learned Saturday that the proposal came from Canada. Needless to say, it has been enthusiastically welcomed in Washington.

Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who has been designated by Mr. Knox, Secretary of State, to confer with J. P. Mabee, chairman of the Railway Commission of Canada, over the preliminary details of the plan, said that he had been in correspondence with Mr. Mabee for several weeks on the subject.

Would Lynch Detective.

East Liverpool, Ohio, July 18.—Adelbert Keddie, aged 21 years, was shot by Detective Ira Ricket of the Anti-Saloon League force Saturday night. The shooting occurred in the business section of the town, Keddie was standing on the sidewalk when Detective Ricket, it is alleged, attempted to shoot Alvin Dawson, 21 years old. Dawson escaped the fire and Keddie was shot through the left ankle. Ricket escaped, pursued by a crowd, but ran into the arms of Policeman Fowler. He and Dawson were taken to the city jail, followed by a crowd of several thousand persons. Threats were made to lynch the detective, but he was finally landed behind the bars. Extra police were placed on duty at the jail to prevent a repetition of the Newark tragedy of eight days ago.

Want to Suppress Wreck Pictures.

Hamilton, Ohio, July 18.—A motion picture manager in this city has increased the displeasure of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Drayton Railway management by exhibiting films of the wreck which occurred at Middletown on July 4.

The pictures were taken an hour after the wreck, and, according to the railroad officials, are morbid and distressing in character.

The railroad company asks that the pictures be suppressed, and the mayor is making an investigation.

Morrisburg's Home-Coming Week.

Morrisburg, July 18.—Final arrangements are about completed for the semi-annual and home-coming demonstration, which is to be held at Morrisburg from Aug. 2 to 5. The several committees are working over time in order to have everything in readiness when Sir James Whitney, one of Morrisburg's distinguished "old boys," delivers the opening address on Tuesday at the exhibition grounds.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

BRONCHITIS.

Need of Watchful Care During an Attack of the Disease.

Bronchitis is the name given to any inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes. In a fairly healthy adult an attack of acute bronchitis is not a very terrifying thing, although it is most distressing and disagreeable.

It is as if an unusually severe cold and cough, instead of confining itself to the head and throat, wandered on down the chest. The irritation of the tubes results in a constant cough and sense of breathlessness. The temperature rises, the patient feels sick, the more so that the incessant coughing does not result in the throwing off of any secretion to speak of.

In a day or two the inflammation in the tubes subsides, the temperature goes down, there is less and less sense of oppression, and the secretion gradually becomes freer. From this point there is gradual recovery, as from an ordinary bad cold.

On the other hand, in the very old or the very young or with those whose powers of resistence are lessened from any cause whatever bronchitis is a dangerous disease. It has a tendency to run from the acute into the chronic form, in which the sufferer may be perfectly well during the summer months or while in a warm climate, but at the least chill or exposure must expect and will get his inevitable attack of bronchitis with symptoms persisting until the return of warm weather.

The moral of this is that it is most essential to give proper treatment during the acute stage. The need of watchful care during a bronchial attack will be the more appreciated when it is understood that such an attack may be the beginning, sign and warning of a tuberculous trouble and, furthermore, that whooping cough and measles sometimes begin that way.

In any case, whether the attack be simple bronchitis or a warning of some other trouble, the first rule should be "straight to bed." In fact, this good old fashioned rule at the onset of any type of so called "cold" cannot be bettered.

A wise secondary rule is to stay in bed till the temperature has been normal for a day or two. If this were observed relapses would be fewer and convalescences shortened.

Never mind how mild the trouble promises to be, a physician should be at once summoned not only because he alone is competent to recognize danger signals, but also because there are many alleviations in his power of the numerous painful and distressing symptoms of this disorder.

Robbery an Art.

Interesting stories of the tribes in the wild northwest frontier of India were told by Dr. T. L. Pennell, a medical missionary, at a meeting of the National Indian Association, recently. Robbery and brigandage, he said, were the profession of some of the tribes, especially the Waziris. When a child was born his mother usually placed him in a hole in the wall of the mudhouse and said to him "Learn to be a thief." It is no unusual thing for the hospital to be called upon to provide artificial noses for the wives of men who in a fit of jealousy had cut off the ends of the noses of their womenfolk. One man who had cut his wife's nose off altogether was told that the cost would be 30 rupees, and he hesitated. Asked the reason of his hesitation, the man said, "Well, it's this way, Sahib, I can get a new wife for 80."

The Driver Was Puzzled.

A negro and his truck were rapidly careening down the steep hill to the station. Crates and boxes were noisily bumping to the street, but a small negro sat on the summit undisturbed by the rapidly accruing wreckage. Presently the driver pulled up at the station with a flourish, and, looking over his shoulder, his face became momentarily transfixed with astonishment to note that a great portion of his load was missing.

Turning to the small negro, he demanded:

"What's de matter wif yo' mouf, niggah? Hit wuks well 'nuff w'en dey ain't no 'casion."

A Timely Affair.

"You," said the magistrate, "are accused of stealing watches. What have you to say for yourself?"

"I was only trying to take time by the forelock, your honor," replied the culprit, who was something of a joker.

"Good—very good!" laughed the magistrate. "Now, let me see. Since you were so anxious to acquire time I will make a contribution myself."

The prisoner seemed very much pleased, but his countenance changed when the judge said severely:

"I'll give you three years at hard labor."

Remarkable Lakes.

On the Mangishlak peninsula, in the Caspian Sea, there are five small lakes. One of them is covered with salt crystals strong enough to allow man and beast to cross the lake on foot. Another is as round as any circle and of a lovely rose color. Its banks of salt crystal form a setting white as the driven snow to the water, which not only shows all the colors from violet to rosy red, but from which rises a perfume of violets. Both the perfume and the color are the result of the presence of seaweeds.

A Record Shipment.

The largest shipment of muskrat skins ever sent by a Canadian firm to European markets has just been consigned from Ottawa and left by the Empress of Britain from Quebec for Liverpool, whence it will be despatched to its ultimate destination. In the shipment there were 17,647 skins, with a weight of 2,580 pounds, packed in ten large bales.

Jason's Defect.

Don't be too critical. The other day I said to a fellow: "Jason, it doesn't show very good manners to whistle in the dining-room." "I know it," replied Jason kindly, "and I'll stop it if you quit eating potatoes with your knife and sucking coffee out of your saucer." The trouble with Jason is that he cannot take advice.

The fur seal will not breed in captivity as does the hair seal, the species that is trained for exhibition purposes.

HE EXPLAINED THINGS

ENGLISHMAN MEETS A CANADIAN WHO TELLS HIM WHY.

The Native Who Abhors a Silence Settles Down to Tell the True Inwardness of Many Matters, Including Evil Habits, Tobacco Chewing, Gum Chewing as a Substitute For Conversation.

They had got into conversation in the smoking car on a branch line of the Grand Trunk, a young, newly-arrived Englishman and a Canadian, who, if not old, was well along in middle-age. The latter could not tolerate the silence, and showed that he was going to talk to the stranger if he couldn't talk with him, as there was nobody else to talk to or with.

"But," said the Englishman, "you do some things in this country that I don't understand."

"We do lots of 'em," was the reply. "But what do you mean in particular? Let's get down to particulars."

"Well, for instance, I heard a man championing what he called temperance, but what I call teetotalism, and he was filling his remarks with profanity——"

"Was it a public speech?"

"No, no! It was in this train on the down trip. But he was taking high ground on the drink question and he used shocking language in doing it. Not only so, but he was actually chewing tobacco at the time. Now, I'd rather drink my beer than swear or chew tobacco as he did."

"It's just a question of taste," said the Canadian. "Now, I don't drink and I don't swear and I don't chew. I tried those three vices and quit them. They got to be too common, so I quit 'em, and hunted up a vice of my own." The visitor seemed curious, but did not ask what this vice was.

"But why should a man chew tobacco," he enquired, "or if he does chew it, why should he venture to criticize any other man's habits?"

"I was just going to tell you," resumed the other. "There's lots of things different here from what they are in England, because of the country. You take a farmer working in a field about a mile from the nearest fellow-creature. Well, he wants a smoke, and has it; then, he wants another, and his last match goes out. He can't walk a mile for another. So he takes a chew. The habit of chewing tobacco arose from the habit matches have of blowing out."

"I never heard of that before," said the stranger admiringly.

"I suppose you didn't. Well, here's another thing. Women in this country are often seen chewing gum, and English people think it's disgusting. Well, all I can say is it doesn't look nice, but it's necessary. I said necessary, and it's necessary in this way. When a man's out in the bush mad as hops because he hasn't got a match, his wife is alone in the house without a soul to talk to. A chew of gum is about the best substitute for somebody to talk to that any woman could have. It keeps her from thinking, and women shouldn't think, especially when they're alone. If you know any English women out on prairie farms in the West, you write and tell 'em to send to town for some gum. In this country we've found out some things, and one is that it's better for a lonesome woman to chew gum than go crazy."

"Really, now!" exclaimed the Englishman.

"I know—you never heard of such a thing. How could you," interrupted the Canadian. "There's lots of pointers I could give you, only I've got to get off at this station we're coming to."

"But, wait a moment. Tell me one thing," begged the stranger. "Tell me this: Why do not people out here eat boiled eggs out of the shell? Why do they turn them out into a glass? It seems barbarous to me."

"Sure, I'll tell you. The reason is that sometimes the pioneer found himself with nothing to eat but eggs. He was a bachelor, and he could boil 'em easier than cook 'em any other way. But he got tired of boiled eggs. Well, he dumped one into a glass, put butter, pepper, and salt in it, then dumped another in and put more butter, pepper, and salt in, then stirred it up and ate it. Say what you like, it was a new dish, and beat plain-boiled eggs all hollow. Try it."

"I will," said the Englishman gratefully, as the older man started to leave the car. "But would you tell one other thing—I hope you will pardon me? You spoke of having picked out a vice of your own. Would you mind telling——?"

"Telling you what it is? I don't mind. I went in for telling lies. Other people were dabbling in it, but clumsily. I've perfected it. It's my hobby."

"I don't think I quite understand——"

"No. How could you. But"—and he clambered off as the train started. Looking back the Englishman saw him shaking hands with the station agent.

"My word!" he said.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Emperor Visits Canadian Pavilion.

Canada is now receiving special attention in the great exhibition now being held in Vienna. Sir Arthur Harding, British Minister, recently inaugurated the small model railway, constructed by the C.P.R. Co., which runs in front of a large painted panorama of Canada. This company also has a model of a Canadian farm in the irrigation district, near Calgary, which demonstrates how the water is applied to the land and the wonderful fertility of the soil. A large number of prominent people attended the formal opening of this beautiful Canadian Pacific pavilion, including the Belgian Minister of Railways, the United States ambassador, and many prominent men from the British and American colony. The Austrian Emperor visited the pavilion on the following day.

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1910. NO. 264

G.T.R. STRIKE BEGINS

Men Left Trains Wherever They Were at Nine-Thirty.

Traffic Is Carried on by Train Officials and Mr. Hays Promises to Get Passengers Through, But Freight Will Suffer — Company Without Warning Closes Down Its Car-Shops During the Strike.

Montreal, July 19.—One of the most far-reaching strikes ever launched in Canada began last evening at 8.30. The Grand Trunk conductors and trainmen having been ordered out by Vice-President Murdock of the Brotherhood of Trainmen.

Although both parties evidently felt that a strike was in the air, the breaking off of negotiations was a surprise to the public generally, who thought that President Hays would give in at the last moment; and that, perhaps, the men also would not go so far as to strike.

Now, however, the die is cast, and 3,500 men on the Grand Trunk, from Portland and to Chicago, and 350 men on the Central Vermant, are now pledged to fight the company to the bitter end, in order to enforce their demands for the standard rate of wages in that particular territory.

The bolt from the blue heaven was the announcement from the company that their shops at Montreal, London, Toronto, Stratford, Port Huron, Battle Creek, Portland, Chicago and all other points would be closed indefinitely, throwing perhaps over 5,000 men out of employment. This will affect 2,520 men here, 700 in Toronto and 1,000 in Stratford, and its effect may be calculated from the fact that the pay-rolls at the Montreal shops amount to $150,000 per month.

President Hays, discussing this feature of the great industrial upheaval, stated that he regretted having to deprive so many good men of their work, but that the company was face to face with a great conflict which, he held, had been unjustly forced upon them, and which left an absolute necessity for the course he had taken.

President Hays offered yesterday afternoon to leave the dispute to an independent arbitration, the decision to be binding on both sides, but the men would not hear this, and negotiations came suddenly to an end.

It came out last evening that the company have for weeks past had private detectives and other officials scouring the country for days past getting together non-union train crews and it remains to be seen what success has attended their efforts. On Saturday over 40 delegates left here for their respective districts carrying orders to strike unless the company would come to time before 9.30 last evening.

At 10.30 a fairly-sized crowd gathered at Bonaventure to see if the 10.30 Toronto train would run out. There was very little delay, however, and the train left only a few minutes late, manned by a non-union crew aside from the engine. Vice-President Murdock, after telling of the men who had left Saturday, added: "We met Mr. Hays to-day when he elaborated somewhat on his original offer, that the standard wage would be adopted by January, 1913. The committee replied that they could not set aside the expressed wish of the men, even if they felt like doing so."

In the afternoon the committee and officers presented Mr. Hays with the last possible basis of settlement that could be considered, which proposed to put into effect a temporary modification of the standard till 1911. Mr. Murdock went on to say that Mr. Hays had refused completely the board's recommendation to standardize conditions on the Grand Trunk, proposing to perpetuate existing conditions.

"There is a protective fund of $1,000,000 back of us," he also said, "and we will have no trouble about getting $350,000 monthly. Fifty dollars a month will be paid to the members of the order of conductors and $35 a month to trainmen."

Four freight trains out of Montreal were cancelled last evening.

The Grand Trunk telegraphers will not strike as before intimated, they had a meeting yesterday afternoon with President C. M. Hays and agreed to let their differences go to arbitration.

WRIGHTS BROKE CONTRACT.

So Say Aviation Meet Officials and Suit Is Entered.

Toronto, July 19.—The International Aviation Association have, through their solicitor, Alex. MacGregor, entered suit against the Wright Co. of Dayton, Ohio, for $40,000 damages for breach of contract, dated the 5th of July, 1910, in connection with the furnishing of aeroplanes and aviators for the recent aviation meet at Toronto.

The association officials claim that the agreement made by the Wright Co. provided two things: First—That the Wright Co. would furnish one aeroplane on July 7, two on July 8, three on July 9, three on the 11th, three on the 12th, two on the 15th, and two on the 16th. Second—The Wright Co. agreed to furnish four aviators, namely: Ralph Johnstone, A. R. Walsh, Duval LaChappelle, and A. Hoxsey, who were to appear and fly on the above dates.

It is claimed, in regard to the first part of the contract, that the Wright Co. had only one machine in operation during the time of the meet, and that on Tuesday, July 12, they failed to make any flight whatever, and on two other days, they were unable to get a machine off the ground until very late, when they only made a short flight, and were obliged to make further repairs. During these three days, Ralph Johnstone endeavored to make repairs, but apparently was unable to do so. The equipment of the Wright Co., the association officials say, contrasted very unfavorably with the methods of Count de Lesseps, who was under other auspices, who, had three experienced mechancis to keep his machines in order; and, as a result, did not fail to make flights on each day.

Ottawa Archbishop Not Named.

Ottawa, July 19.—A report emanated from Montreal to the effect that Mgr. Gauthier, Archbishop of Kingston, has been made Archbishop of Ottawa, was denied yesterday at the archbishop's palace. Mgr. Sbaretti, papal delegate, is abroad and his secretary, Mgr. Sennott, is out of the city.

It is said here in ecclesiastical circles that absolutely no information has been received as to the successor of the late Mgr. Duhamel. The name persistently mentioned is that of Rev. Canon Gauthier of Montreal, not Archbishop Gauthier.

Hunter was found dead in his rooms early yesterday, a suicide. When Hunter fell in love with Lottie Collins, 16, and avowed his love, the girl said not a word, but left the room. IS SBARETTI RECALLED?

It Is Reported That Papal Delegate Will Not Return.

Monsignor Will Not Be Present at the Eucharistic Congress and Opinion Is Expressed That He Has Been Adjudged Unnecessary at Ottawa—Has Always Been on Excellent Terms With Catholics.

Montreal, July 19.—As the opening of the Eucharistic Congress is only a few weeks away, it is nothing more than natural that the interest in this great Roman Catholic function should be daily on the increase. His Excellency Mgr. Sbaretti, for a number of years papal delegate to Canada, will not be amongst the dignitaries present, and no one appears to know if he will ever return again to the Dominion. It has in fact been felt for some time past that the papal delegate is like a fifth wheel to the ecclesiastical coach in this country, for as yet no one has been able to see what he has done that could not have been accomplished by the archbishops and bishops of the Dominion.

MGR. SBARETTI.

Mgr. Sbaretti was looked upon as a political appointment, a former Minister having convinced the Vatican that the natural leaders of the church over here wanted assistance, as the coming of the first delegate was brought about by a petition sent to Rome, signed by every Catholic Liberal member of the Senate and House of Commons. The statement was made not long since by a Roman diplomat that the presence of a delegate in Canada, had not its raison d'etre in this country. If in fact his excellency was to be a fixture in the country, his absence at so great a church function would certainly be the cause at least of universal comment. His excellency has not been too happy in his treatment of certain questions of high Catholic import, such as the appointment of an archbishop to the vacant see of Ottawa, and the unfortunate college question of Ste. Marie de Manoir. It is generally understood that the delegate's relations with the archbishops and bishops since his arrival in this country have been of a very pleasant nature. To be sure many of the lower clergy and even the faithful at times, supposing they had grievances and who went to Ottawa for redress have in almost every instance been kindly told by the Pope's representative in Canada that the matter at hand was one within the exclusive jurisdiction of their bsihops and on no account could he interfere. Thus on almost every occasion the democratic spirit of the church government in this country has been maintained, and his excellency, if he never returns to the scenes of his labors in the Dominion, will leave very little heart burning behind him.

As far as the outside world knows, Mgr. Sbaretti's relations with the Ottawa Ministers have been cordial in the extreme, and it is a well known fact that Roman Catholic members of both Houses of Parliament have invariably found in the delegate a careful listener in any matter they have had to lay before him.

Eleven Killed In Australian Wreck.

Vancouver, July 19.—A special cable from Melbourne, Australia, states that a crowded suburban passenger train crashed into the rear of a stationary train during a fog at Richmond station, four miles north of Melbourne. Eleven people were killed and 68 injured. The accident happened in the morning during the rush hours. The injured were taken to the hospitals at Melbourne. Some will die.

Milk Caused Infant Mortality.

Ottawa, July 19.—Of 200 babies that died in Ottawa this year, 97 died during August alone. The cause of death, says the city health officer, was chiefly owing to the difficulty in preparing and keeping ordinary milk at the homes. To combat this the city has decided to have milk prepared in several different strengths and put up in bottles, one for each feeding.

Goderich Farmer Killed.

Goderich, July 19.—While Thomas Harrison, aged 70, of Goderich Township, was taking in his hay crop, his team ran away and he fell off the wagon. The shock to his system, accompanied by profuse bleeding, resulted in his death.

Inland Revenue.

A Threat That Always Brings England's Upper House to Terms.

To override the veto of the house of lords by a wholesale creation of peers is a plan that has been often threatened, but hardly ever put into practice. It certainly places the king in a very unenviable predicament—so much so that in 1719, after a crisis of the kind, George I. caused to be introduced into the lords a bill for limiting the power of the sovereign to create peers, a sort of royal self denying ordinance.

The measure was twice passed in the lords, but twice rejected by the commons, which was lucky, for had it been carried it would have made the house of lords an almost unchangeable body, entirely beyond the control of king or minister or commons.

The nearest approach that was ever made to "swamping the lords" was in 1832, when the fate of the great reform bill trembled in the balance. Over and over again the measure had been passed by the commons, only to be rejected by the lords. The country was furious. Payment of taxes was refused. Riots broke out everywhere.

The prime minister, Lord Grey, went to the king and begged him to create new peers to carry the bill. His majesty refused, and the ministry resigned. The king, however, presently changed his mind and, fearing a revolution, agreed to the creation of a hundred new peers, "or more if necessary." Then, very reluctantly, the upper house gave way, and the bill became law.—London Family Herald.

THE DEATH DICE.

A Murder Case In Which They Returned a Just Verdict.

The German emperor some time ago presented to the Hohenzollern museum the "death dice" with which one of his ancestors decided a difficult case in the seventeenth century. The history of these dice is generally given as follows:

A young girl had been murdered. Suspicion fell upon two young soldiers, Ralph and Alfred, who were suitors for her hand. They both denied their guilt, and even torture failed to extract a confession from either.

Then Elector Frederick William decided to cut the knot by means of the dice box. The two soldiers should throw for their lives and the loser should be executed as the murderer.

The event was celebrated with great solemnity. Ralph had the first chance and threw sixes, the highest possible number. The dice box was then given to Alfred. He fell on his knees and prayed. Then he rose to his feet and threw the dice with such force that one of them was broken. The whole one showed six, the broken one also gave six on the larger portion, and the fragment split off showed one. This was a total of thirteen, one beyond Ralph's throw. The audience held its breath in amazement.

"God has spoken!" cried the prince.

Ralph, appalled by what he regarded as a sign from heaven, confessed his guilt and was sentenced to death.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Runaway Boys

The police here were asked to be on the lookout for two boys from Kingston, who, on Saturday night, last, left their home for some unknown reason. It was learned that two boys answering their description were in this city on Sunday evening, but left here and proceeded westward As the authorities are upon their trail they will no doubt be rounded up.

The Sun.

It is computed that the temperature of the sun would be expressed by 18,000 degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer, or about ninety times the temperature of boiling water. This is about five times the temperature that man is able to produce by artificial means. The light given off from the surface of the sun is reckoned as being 5,300 times more intense than that of the molten metal in a Bessemer converter, though that is of an almost blinding brilliancy, or, if we compare it with the oxyhydrogen flame, the sun sheds a light equal in brilliancy to 146 times the intensity of the limelight.

THE WEATHER.

Moderate winds, fine, with not much change in temperature today and on Wednesday.

DINIZULU RELEASED.

Zulu Chief to Be Given a Farm and $2,500 a Year.

At the first meeting of the South African Union Cabinet, the other day, it was decided to release Dinizulu, the son of the famous Zulu chief Cetewayo.

Dinizulu will be given a farm near Nylstroom, on which he will live with his wives and personal attendants, and enjoy reasonable liberty on an allowance of $2,500 per annum, subject to good behaviour.

As long ago as 1887 Dinizulu was arrested and tried for high treason, and sentenced to death. The sentence was commuted, however, to imprisonment for ten years at St. Helena, where he spent his time in learning English.

Zululand was annexed to Natal, and Dinizulu was released, in 1897. He had been deprived of the position of paramount chief, the colony binding itself to pay him a yearly salary of $2,500, "not to be withdrawn without the approval of the Secretary of State."

In 1905 and 1906 Natal was in a state of considerable alarm, owing to the disquiet among the Zulus, a strong expedition finally being sent to quell a serious rising. Dinizulu was arrested, and after months in custody was brought up for trial in November, 1908, on several counts. The trial lasted till March of last year, and cost the crown $50,000. Dinizulu was found guilty of harboring rebels, and sentenced to four years' imprisonment.

Czar of the Bulgarians.

Perhaps the most picturesque of the nine monarchs who attended King Edward's funeral was King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who was really a kinsman of the late monarch, being descended from the grandfather of Queen Victoria. He was merely a half-pay lieutenant of Hussars in the Austrian service when, in 1887, the Bulgarian National Assembly elected him to succeed Prince Alexander of Hesse, who had abdicated. In the trying and dangerous episodes through which Bulgaria has passed during the last few years he has proved himself an astute ruler, and gained much popularity.

People like him because he is unconventional and accomplished. He is fond of botanizing, keen about ornithology, and is [illegible] are books and prints. In his palace at Sofia the things one notices chiefly are his large collection of useful books and the manner in which he has ornamented his study and audience rooms with souvenirs dear to Bulgarian history. He is rather fond of engine-driving, and laughingly confesses that he keeps in practice because his ability to drive an engine might some day be the means of saving his life.

England's Best All-Round Sportsman.

So Lord Lonsdale, whose name has been much before the public lately in connection with the terrible disaster at the Whitehaven mines, which he owns, has been termed; and there is not much exaggeration in the description, for his lordship rides, shoots, yachts, motors ,and boxes, and is an expert slipper of grey hounds. His chief love, perhaps, is for horses. Back in the 'nineties Lord Lonsdale made a bet with Lord Shrewsbury that he would drive twenty miles in record time. In spite of the roads being covered with deep snow, Lord Lonsdale won. The road to be traversed was that between Reigate and Crawley. His lordship drove a four-in-hand the first five miles, a pair for another five, rode postillion of a pair for the next five, and made up the twenty by driving a single horse for the last stage, accomplishing the total distance in fifty-five and a half minutes.

Costliest Club in the World.

The home of luxury aptly describes the new Royal Automobile Club, in Pall Mall, which will be ready for occupation in January next.

The Grecian swimming-bath 90 feet long and 30 feet wide, will, together with the walls, be encased in white marble. Adjoining, there are to be found a Turkish bath, a fine gymnasium, and squash racquet courts. From the entrance hall, one proceeds to a magnificent vestibule with a glass-covered, domed roof. On one side is the general club-room—a compartment 100 feet by 40 feet. The lounge hall, which is 30 feet high, has a musicians' gallery at one end and a stage at the other. In all, there will be nine floors. The total cost of the building will be £230,000, and some £30,000 will be spent on furnishing.

Toronto, July 19.—These are features of the G. T. R. strike:

Total mileage affected, 4745.

States and provinces touched: Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Michigan, Illinois, Vermont, Maine.

Trainmen and yardmen on strike, 4500.

Shopmen affected, 5000.

Men demand standard scale. Company offers eighteen per cent. increase and more in 1913 when the Grand Trunk Pacific gets working

Total strike funds available for men, $1,350.000.

A JAM AT LONDON.

London, Ont., July 19. — Freight trains from all directions are jammed in the yards here, and Grand Trunk officials are experiencing the greatest difficulty in keeping anything moving.

Supt. Bowyer and all experienced officials are turning in as conductors.. Even Chief Despatcher Charles White is being requisitioned to take the New York express through to Niagara Falls.

Manufacturers are suffering severely from the freight tie-ups, some of them having to shut down this morning on account of lack of material.

At the shops in Stratford the Master Mechanic addressed the employees, urging them to remain in the city, as the strike could not last more than a few days, he said.

The car works closed this morning and a notice requests the men to take positions temporarily as train men. Many of them are doing it.

Officials and men are equally confident that they will win in a week.

Toronto, July 19. — Stratford, Belleville and other important divisional points which depend entirely on the Grand Trunk for their transportation in and out are in a serious predicament to-day.

TROUBLE IS LOOKED FOR AT HAMILTON.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Hamilton, July 19. — The Grand Trunk is bringing in strike breakers, but traffic here is really at a standstill The Railway officials and authorities seem to fear trouble, and police reserves are in readiness and special constables sworn in.

HON. MACKENZIE KING SAYS "NOTHING DOING."

(Intelligencer Special)

Ottawa, Ont., July 19. — Hon. MacKenzie King, Minister of Labor, when appealed to this morning, said that while he was anxious to do everything to bring the Grand Trunk troubles to a settlement, it was not within his power to act further unless appealed to by both parties.

PART OF WABASH IS ALSO TIED UP.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Buffalo, N. Y., July 19. — That part of the Wabash road which goes through Canada from Buffalo to Detroit is also tied up on account of the Grand Trunk strike.

GRAND TRUNK BUSINESS GOES TO OTHER ROADS.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 19. — Grand Trunk trains are going out of the Union Station with more or less regularity, being in charge of officials from the offices, acting as conductors and brakemen, with new men as baggagemen.

Superintendents and head clerks are acting as switchmen and the passenger service is kept going in some way.

Freight business is tied up. The Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern are handling the bulk of the tourist passengers and freight business.

STRIKE THROWS 2000 MEN OUT OF WORK AT OTTAWA.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Ottawa, July 19. — One immediate effect of the Grand Trunk strike was the closing this morning of Booth's big lumber and paper mills, throwing two thousand men out of work.

There were no empty cars in the yards to take the products away.

ALL RIGHT IN DAY OR TWO, SAYS SUPT. BROWNLEE

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 19. — This afternoon, Supt. Brownlee, of the Grand Trunk, made the statement that with few exceptions trains were running in Central and Western Ontario as usual. He said old pensioners had rallied to the service of the company and with some more or less experienced juniors things were moving and would be all right in a day or two..

SWAMBA WINS RACE FOR THE GEORGE CUP

(Intelligencer Special.)

Kingston, Ont., July 19. — Swamba, sailed by Bill Jarvis, aged 18, son of Aemelius Jarvis, is leading by half a mile in the twenty-footers' race for the George Cup today. Her United States competitors are away in the rear.

Later—The Swamba won by a mile.

An elaborate description of the airship of 1915 is given, and it is believed that within five years such an airliner will be capable of travelling 75 miles an hour ordinarily, and often 120 miles in the upper levels. Two miles above the Equator a planetary current encircles the globe at tremendous speed. The ashes of the eruption of Krakatoa were carried in this belt round the world in fourteen days. Ten years hence an airship driven fifty miles an hour may perchance make that trip in eight days, flying at a speed of 120 miles an hour, or 3,000 miles a day.

"Only Granny."

Sir Douglas Powell, one of the royal physicians-in-ordinary, tells a pretty story of how some years ago he was waiting in an ante-room to be summoned for an interview with Queen Victoria. Out of the royal apartment came tumbling two of King George's sons. "Why don't you go in?" inquired the elder prince. "Because," said Sir Douglas, "it might not be convenient." "Oh," was the cheerful response, "there's nobody there — only Granny."

An Unusual Attribute.

Little Johnnie, who cannot pronounce "s," has been frightened into keeping out of the attic by tales told him by his nurse of a dreadful ghost that lives in the dim recesses under the eaves. The other day he was overheard to say confidentially to a small friend:

"We've got an old gho't in our attic."

To which his friend, much interested, responded, "Do he butt?"

Sundials in China.

The Chinese have carried the art of sundials to perfection. One Chinese watchmaker has arranged his front porch in such a way the shadow of the posts tells the time by which to regulate the watches.

Duke's Interest In Horses.

The Duke of Teck, who is to be president of the forthcoming Richmond Horse Show, has been devoted all his life to horses. Horses in general attract him, and horses for polo-playing in particular. His Serene Highness has signalled his presidency of the Richmond Show by presenting a magnificent trophy, the Teck Cup, to be won outright in a jumping competition for officers in uniform. The duke has apartments in Henry III.'s tower, Windsor Castle, where is gathered one of the most interesting collections of curios ever gleaned from the corners of the globe. The duke was military attache in Vienna for some time, and has seen service in most foreign countries.

G. B. S.'s Suspicions.

Mr. G. B. Shaw has a way of his own, even on post cards. A second-hand book-seller secured, in the ordinary way of business, a manuscript of his story, "Love Among the Artists." The book-seller told Mr. Shaw that he held it, thinking, perhaps, that the author would be as keen a purchaser as anybody. "Excuse me, where did you get it? . . . Are you a book-seller by day and a burglar by night?" wrote "G.B.S." The book-seller is still asking one hundred guineas for his "find"; the post card he will not part with.

Kitchener Wanted to Know.

With "carpet-knights" Lord Kitchener, naturally, has little patience. He likes a soldier to be one of the good old sort, sleeping on an iron bed and with a severe taste in "domestic accoutrements." The Kaiser once remarked, "The Hohenzollerns don't wear dressing-gowns!" And Lord Kitchener, viewing with displeasure a young lieutenant of his who had purchased for himself a very elaborate gold-fitted suit-case, asked of him "What is your taste in hairpins?"

Daily Intelligencer.

Still Promising Millions.

BRIBERY RAMPANT

The Globe's Winnipeg correspondent of the 14th inst. says:—"Sir Wilfrid Laurier is winning his way into the hearts of the great cosmopolitan population of the west."

Why should he not? If promises of lavish expenditure of millions of money will secure the "winning of hearts" he will capture the whole west at the expense of the treasury of the Dominion.

On the 14th inst. when opening the lock on the Red River Canal, The Mail and Empire's correspondent reports Sir Wilfrid to have exclaimed:

"If God spares my life and the people continue me in my office, I will see that there is constructed a great navigable waterway, via the Saskatchewan River, from the foothills of the Rocky Mountains to the City of Winnipeg."

The Globe's correspondent of like date, gives further information as to this promise. He reports Sir Wilfrid to have added to the above plea for support the following:

"I have committed to Dr. Pugsley the great work of opening the Saskatchewan River to Edmonton and completing the navigation system. He is at work. Engineers are now in the field. If God spares me and the will of the people keeps me where I am, I hope to see a barge laden with coal at the foot of the Rockies come through to Winnipeg without breaking cargo anywhere. The word 'impossible' is not found in the language of the west. There were other fields to open up, the valley of the Peace River and the Great Slave district."

What does all this mean? It is a direct bid for the support of all the electors from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, a distance of some fifteen hundred miles.

A grand scheme! There is millions in it, and wealth for numerous grafters. All this expenditure, let it not be forgotten, is under the direction and manipulation of the Hon. William Pugsley, of sawdust wharf fame, and every one knows what that means.

Former Belleville Minister Very Ill.

Every one who knew the Rev. George Young, formerly pastor of Bridge street Methodist church, Belleville, now on the superannuated list,, will regret to hear that he has been confined to his bed for several weeks, suffering from a general decline, at his home, 15 Hazelton Avenue, Toronto. He is over 80 years of age. Dr. Young, is known as the father of Methodism in Manitoba and was the spiritual adviser of Thos. Scott, the victim of the Riel Rebellion.

Got What She Wanted.

"I can stand for some things, but not for everything," said the clerk as he watched a stylishly dressed young woman leave the store.

"What is the matter?" asked the proprietor, who had walked up unobserved.

"That woman who just left bustled up to the counter and asked to see men's shirts. I showed her every style and color we carry. After inspecting the entire stock she rose and thanked me sweetly, adding: 'I didn't wish to purchase any. You see, I am making my husband some shirts, and I wanted to be sure I was doing them right. My husband is very particular about the finish of his shirts.' And they say married women are so considerate."

The boss smiled and walked away.—Boston Traveler.

Work For His Sheep.

A resident of London with a taste for deviled kidneys found himself recently in a remote west of England village, where a sheep was killed about once a week. Not knowing that mutton was a luxury and kidneys, for obvious reasons, therefore, a rarity, he presented himself day after day at the village butcher's with the same request for his favorite breakfast dish. The butcher, looking upon his customer as a lunatic, bore it as long as he could, but on the fifth day said indignantly, "If you think, young man, that my sheep have nothing better to do than to lay kidneys for your breakfast you be mortal mistook."—London Saturday Review.

Famous Cricket Groundsman.

The Surrey (Eng.) Club have decided to devote the proceeds of one of the county matches at the Oval for the benefit of "Sam" Apted, who has been closely identified with the fortunes of Surrey cricket for many years. The benefit is well deserved, for Apted probably knows more about preparing a pitch than any other groundsman. He has prepared the wickets for all the Australian elevens that visited that country, and such is his care of the ground that it was once jokingly remarked that if a worm crawls over the pitch during the night it makes Apted turn in his sleep.

Bees in Warfare.

Certain Nigerian tribes find bees very useful in warfare. The villagers on retiring before an enemy excite the bees and set them free, and painful is the experience of the man who is attacked by them in the labyrinths of cactus which surround the villages,

BUYING A PUPPY.

Tots Were Short on Cash, But Mike Was Long on Human Feeling.

The children burst into their mother's room like a twin cyclone.

"Oh, mamma," the two shouted in one gasping breath, "what do you think? We can get a puppy for $1!" The mother did not seem particularly impressed with this bargain in dog-flesh.

"What on earth do you want with a puppy?" she asked. "And what sort of a puppy is it?"

"We want to play with it an' love it an' teach it to stand on its hind legs," elucidated the little girl.

"It's a yellow puppy!" exclaimed the little boy. "Mike McDonough down at the carpenter shop's got 'em. There's six."

"Well, ask your father," sighed the mother, turning again to her sewing. "If he says so I haven't anything to say."

The children withdrew for a conference. Here was a situation not to their liking. If mamma had promised her influence probably papa would have been easy. Since she put it up to them this way the purchase of that puppy was doubtful.

"How much money have you got?" asked the little boy. The two were seated gloomily upon the back steps.

"I've got 10 cents," said the little girl, "and mamma owes me a quarter for workin' in the garden."

"That ain't money," said her brother scornfully. "If I had all the money they owed me for workin' in the garden an' things I'd be rich."

"Have you got any?" asked the little girl. "Any at all?"

"I've got 43 cents in my bank," said her brother, "but we'd have to break the bank to get it out."

"That's half enough to buy a puppy!" exclaimed the little girl delightedly. "We'll get the rest sure."

The two went down to the carpenter shop again to look at the puppies.

"Going to buy one?" asked Mike McDonough, grinning.

"If we can get the money," said the little boy. "We've got 43 cents and 10 cents. That makes more'n half."

"Now, here," said Mike McDonough, for Mike McDonough was a kindly soul, "won't your pa buy you a pup?" The children shook their heads.

"We're afraid to ask him," they admitted, "but we got 53 cents, and pretty soon we'll have some more."

"Now, here," said Mike McDonough in a burst of human feeling, "I've got too many pups. There's a little one in the lot I haven't got room for. You can just take it home."

"For 53 cents?" gasped the children joyously.

"For 53 nothin'!" said Mike McDonough. I'm givin' you a pup. Come on here; let's get it."

And with a child clutching either hand the red-headed dog owner made his way toward the stable, and every step he took carried the little ones closer to an immediate heaven, peopled largely by little yellow pups.

Rosser, the Rough Rider.

Gen. Rosser, war hero of the Southern Confederacy, intimate with Lee and Stonewall Jackson, died recently in Virginia. What has that to do with Canada? The general was a considerable figure in the Dominion when the country was raw. In Manitoba a town perpetuates his name. How that came to be was because of his exploits in Canadian railroading. He helped throw the C.P.R. steel across the prairies; blazing the trail at the end of the route as engineer for the Smith-Stephen-Angus syndicate. This was after he had become a full-fledged general. Gen. Rosser was chief of the guerilla leaders in the Southern cause. The quick, irregular dashes of his mounted rifles and scouts were the terror of the north. Was Gen. Rosser, the original rough rider [illegible]

IN A CHINESE BANK.

The Way the Clerks Use the Abacus and Counting Boards.

The Chinese have a way of getting hold of the first principles of things, even though they may not have developed them into elaborate and scientific systems.

A foreigner, especially if he be of prepossessing appearance, is received with great civility at a Chinese bank. "Schroff!" shouts the head clerk. This word is not, as it sounds, German, but a corruption of Hindoo "sarraf," or banker's assistant. In response to this call a native cashier appears, noiseless and deferential, with a smooth shaven skull, a four foot pigtail and a spotless, flowing garment.

With great rapidity he will make an exchange of notes, doing his calculating on an abacus, a frame of wire and beads similar to those used in country schools everywhere years ago. His long, lithe fingers move over the beads more quickly than the eye can follow, but there's no mistake in the total.

Perhaps the visitor will want a large piece of money changed into small coin. Instead of going through the wearisome operation of counting out the 300 pieces included in this transaction a simple, ingenious device is employed. A flat wooden tray is produced containing a hundred recesses, each just big enough to lodge one coin and just shallow enough to prevent the possibility of two lurking together.

The pile of small coins is poured out on this tray, and with one jerk of the clerk's wrist the hundred recesses are filled and the surplus swept off.—Harper's Weekly.

WORK NEVER STOPS.

Methods of Four Big Banks in the Wall Street District.

Four big banks in the Wall street district resemble the great gold mines of the west in one striking feature. They have three eight-hour shifts of toilers, and the work never stops. One set takes up the routine where the other leaves off. All night long, Sundays and holidays, a staff of men in each of these banks is busy opening thousands of letters, sorting and listing innumerable checks and drafts that represent fabulous sums of money and getting them ready for the day force, which is the only one the public comes in contact with or ever hears about. If this work was not carried on incessantly the bank would soon be overwhelmed with a mountainous accumulation of detail.

Two shifts—the "scouting force," as they call themselves—work between 5 o'clock in the afternoon and 9 the next morning. Each bank has a big drawer in the general postoffice. Messengers clear this of its letters every hour all night long. Three thousand letters a day is the average mail of one of these large banks. Two-thirds of it comes in during the night. These letters in the case of one of the biggest of these banks contain from 35,000 to 40,000 checks and drafts. At times these inclosures represent as much as $30,000,000. Rarely does the total fa

Plant That Feigns Death.

In South America there is a plant, a species of mimosa, which resorts to death feigning, evidently for the purpose of preventing grass eating animals from eating it. In its natural state this plant has a vivid green hue, but directly it is touched by a human finger or by any living animal it collapses into a tangle of apparently dead and withered stems. Among British wild plants the most sensitive to touch is the insectivorous sundew, of English bogs.—London Globe.

WAS A TRUST BUSTER

J. W. CURRY, K.C., A VETERAN IN THE PUBLIC BEHALF.

Present Anti-Combine Movement Recalls a Fighter of a Few Years Ago Who Has Many a Trophy of the Chase After Law-Breaking Corporations—He Saw Strenuous Days In Toronto's Criminal Courts.

It seems to be one of the divine dispensations of this world that her strong men shall give up a part of their hey-day to the service of their fellows before they turn to the work of securing their own rewards for themselves and their families. It is quite a common thing to-day to find men when they have done very well by themselves turning to public service and philanthropic pursuits as a sort of hobby, but they never bring to it the enthusiasm and the energy that is the mark of the younger man. He is young, he is strong and the world lies before him. So we find him essaying big feats and putting them through against odds that would terrify the amateur public servitor. He does large things in a large way, his name is blazoned forth in the papers, and presently after a hard day's work well done he steps out for a recess while he puts his own affairs in order. And the public which realizes in a dim unrepentant sort of way that its public men are rarely paid as much as they can make working for themselves, takes off its hat for a moment and then proceeds to forget.

There are two saving graces, however, to the whole affair. One is the fact that the man himself does not much care. The other is that such a man is bound to keep cropping up by reason of the same force that put him where he was.

A case in point is that of James Walter Curry, K.C., of Toronto, formerly crown attorney of that city. It is interesting in these days of anti-gambling laws to rummage through newspaper files of a few years ago and read of his warfare against the pool-rooms which finally resulted in the abolition of that form of amusement in Toronto. Combines, too, were on his list of enemies and in several severe battles he administered defeats that still tend to keep certain lines of business men from combining to restrain trade.

J. W. CURRY, K.C.

J. W. Curry was born in Port Hope in 1858. He was educated in the public and high schools of that town, and in 1874 he entered Queen's University from which institution he graduated in 1878. Three years at Osgoode Hall, and in 1881 he was called to the Bar. His first pleading was done in Port Hope and there, and in Millbrook, he spent the next eight years. They were years profitably spent for in 1889 when he went to Toronto he was at once made acting crown attorney, and filled that post with such success and such profit to the city that in 1893 when the office became vacant he was named to fill it.

Those were great days in the Toronto criminal courts. It was the era of the giants when Bigelow and Murdoch and Nicholas Murphy and J. G. Holmes flourished in their might and the court rooms in which they fought out their cases were gladiatorial arenas where legal strategy replaced net and trident and thundered rhetoric did instead of clash of steel. Tom Robinette and Harry Drayton were later comers into that group, and Hartley Dewart eventually came in as county crown attorney. Strangely enough, J. W. Curry is the only man of the early circle who remains to tell of the feats of arms that were pulled off before Col. Denison and the county judges in the nineties. Bigelow, Murdoch, Murphy, and Holmes are all dead.

From the time that he took over the crown attorneyship, Mr. Curry started on a strenuous career. He prosecuted in the pool-room cases in '94 and '96 and ended by putting that alluring long-distance method of playing the ponies out of business for good and all. Then the loan men came in for it. They are a hard class to deal with permanently, but Mr. Curry smote them manfully in his regime and it was a long time before the "hundred per cent." traders throve again in Toronto. Then the fake building associations. They went the way of all flesh under a rain of summonses and made way for a crusade against the bucket shops, a hardy perennial nuisance that need frequent treatment. Presently the famous tack combine required attention, and Mr. Curry attended to it with telling effect.

Later on he had the plumbers and plumbers' supply houses in the dock for conspiracy, and despite the inadequate legal machinery provided in those days to deal with such organizations, he dealt them a staggering blow.

Scattered along among these were the multitude of criminal cases against individuals that are the work of a crown attorney in a big city. Some of them are historic. Mr. Curry prepared the prosecution in the Varcoe murder case, in the famous Hyams' case. His work, too, was the civic corruption investigation, as a result of which several men went to Central Prison for stuffing ballot boxes.

When at last he decided to step out and do a little work for J. W. Curry just by way of a change, after seventeen years in the public employ, he received testimonials from his associates such as might make a man well satisfied with his record.

"You have been the most efficient crown attorney we have ever had in the city of Toronto," said Col. Denison, on the farewell day and the "cadi's" remarks prefaced the presentation of a handsome watch and chain, a set of silverware, and a gold stick pin on behalf of the officials of the court and police department. All of which goes to show that now and again people say nice things about a man without waiting until he dies.

Mr. Curry has the common weakness of lawyers, a leaning toward the game of politics. He started in 1873 in a bye-election in East Durham, and, omitting the term of his crown attorneyship, when he had to sit on the fence and eat his heart out watching other fellows fight, he has never missed a campaign. In 1908 he went up against Alex. McCowan as Liberal candidate for the Legislature, but the Whitney wave was too great for him, and he finished next.

And this, by the way, is the only chance. He could never be lured back into prosecuting in behalf of the crown. He has had his share of that and has come well by his laurels. But maybe—just maybe—after he has assured himself against visits from the wolf, a fighting chance for a law-maker's berth will lure him back into the public service. Law-maker's seats are deadly bait for men of law.

The German military authorities will use the services of 120 civilian motor cyclists in the army manoeuvres in September.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,308 square miles.

"COUNTESS OF DUFFERIN."

Manitoba's First Locomotive to Adorn Park.

The locomotive, "Countess of Dufferin" famed as being the first locomotive ever seen in Manitoba arrived in the Winnipeg early in May from Golden, B.C. It was expected that the engine would be brought from Golden on its own wheelbase but this was found to be impracticable. It was therefore raised on to a flat car which was duly billed to General Manager George J. Bury, at Winnipeg. The car arrived in the local freight sheds in due time and it was unloaded in the yards and removed to the Winnipeg shops. Here it will undergo a thorough overhauling and will be put in as good condition as its age permits. It will be re-painted and made attractive in appearance and then in all probability will this summer find a last resting-place in the park facing the Canadian Pacific depot on Higgins avenue, Winnipeg. It will call up many an old reminiscence to the pioneers who were opening up the West when this old-timer appeared on the scene to make transportation easier. Its coming marked a new era, the passing of the old ox-cart and the advent of railroads. Supt. John McLellan, in speaking of the Countess of Dufferin said that he saw the old locomotive first in 1878. It had been brought to Winnipeg two years before, in 1876. It was brought down the Red River on a barge as at that time there was no rail leading into the city. The locomotive was intended for use in construction work on the line running from St. Boniface to Selkirk, Mr. McLellan added that the locomotive was built in 1871 and although it is much smaller than the huge locomotives of to-day it was of a fair size and did excellent service.

For a number of years the locomotive was used at the lumber plant of Mackenzie and Mann at Golden, B.C., but latterly it has been comparatively little used and last year it was not used at all.

Ontario Gets Most.

Western Canada naturally attracts most immigrants. Free land is the lodestone, as is evidenced by the fact that in the fiscal year 1910 58 per cent. of our total immigration settled here. The propaganda carried on by the Government is not, however, confined to settling the West. The exodus of farmers and farmers' sons from Eastern Canada to the West—last fiscal year, 11,600 homesteads being granted to Canadians alone — leaves tremendous gaps in the East, and the success of the effort to fill these gaps is clearly shown by the fact that 58 per cent. of the British arrivals—the best agricultural class of immigrants—remain in Eastern Canada. Of the Western Provinces Alberta seems to be the favorite, gaining 42,509 settlers; British Columbia, 30,532; and Saskatchewan third, 29,218, which was more than Quebec secured. Ontario received the largest number of any individual province, East or West.

Canada's Population.

Optimists estimate that the population of Canada will reach eight millions when the census is taken next year. The Census Bureau estimated our population at 7,184,744 on March 31, 1909, and of this number, 1,430,000 are in the West. Last year, 209,000 immigrants reached our shores, and, assuming that practically all of these are now west of the Great Lakes, the population there would equal 1,639,000. The effect of the upbuilding of the West is shown nowhere more strikingly than in the representation of the House of Commons. In 1867 the House numbered 181 members, all Easterners; in 1875, there were 196 Eastern representatives and 10 Western; in 1895 the proportions were 196 and 17 respectively, and at present they stand 186 to 35.

Ready For the Worst.

"A woman in a parish where I lived," said an English clergyman, "used each day to prepare herself for the worst. I was complimenting her one day on the extreme tidiness of the house even early in the morning.

"'Yes,' she said, 'I always likes to 'ave my bedrooms done hearly, for, as I allus sez, you never knows what may 'appen, 'ow soon one of the children may be brought 'ome in a fit or with a broken leg, and, as I allus sez, it don't matter what 'appens, so long as you've got a bedroom to put 'em into'."

A mummy found in Egypt and presented to the English Royal College of Surgeons in 1892 recently was decided by experts to be the oldest known, dating from about 3000 B. C.

"FUN" WITH THE CARDS.

How an Evening In the Parlor May Be Sacrificed.

Is there anything in the world so pathetic as the spectacle of a young man showing his favorite card trick to a bunch of girls? The slaughter goes like this—man speaks first:

"I used to know a clever trick with cards. Miss Ellen, choose a card from this pack."

"I am to choose? Which one?"

"Any one you like."

"But how can I tell when you show me only the backs and the backs are all exactly alike?"

"Just take one at random."

"Oh, is that fair? Well, here—I've got the queen of diamonds."

"Oh, you mustn't tell me what you have. I'm to tell you that, you know. Put it back and take another."

"Why can't I keep this one? I can remember it better."

"There wouldn't be any trick. You see, you are to take a card that I don't see, and then I'm to find out the one you looked at."

"Oh! Why, I don't believe you can do it! All right; I've another one."

"Look at it and put it back in the pack."

"What part of the pack shall I put it in?"

"Anywhere you wish."

"But I should think you'd want to know, so you could tell which card it is. Well—there!"

"Now I shuffle them, so. Presto! Is this the card you chose?"

"Oh, I don't know. I forgot to look and see what one I took. Oh! Here's May. Now there are enough to play bridge. May, you should have been here sooner. Mr. Jones has been showing us the most wonderful card tricks!"—Cleveland Leader.

She Made Rapid Progress.

The feminine will out even in the case of children. This was amusingly shown not long ago when little Caroline, seven years old, and her brother, six years old, were sent to school on the same day.

For a week they attended regularly, and on Saturday night the proud father called them to him. With one on each knee, he asked what they had learned in school.

"Well," said the boy, "I learned dat de worl' is round. I can count up to five and say my alferbet."

His father beamed and by careful questioning got quite a remarkable amount of knowledge out of his small son.

"I'm proud of you, Freddie," he said, smiling. "Now, Caroline, have you learned lots too?"

"Uh, huh," answered Caroline shyly.

"Well," encouraged her father, "tell us what you have learned."

"I learned the names of all the boys in Freddie's class," she answered, proudly and wept when her father laughed.—Philadelphia Times.

The Firstborn.

Young Father—I am amazed, shocked, my dear, to hear you say you intend to give the baby some paregoric. Don't you know paregoric is opium, and opium stunts the growth, enfeebles the constitution, weakens the brain, destroys the nerves and produces rickets, marasmus, consumption, insanity and death?

Young Mother—Horrors! I never heard a word about that. I won't give the little ducky darling a drop, no indeedy. But something must be done to stop his yelling. You carry him awhile.

Father (after an hour's steady stamping with the squalling infant)—Where in thunder is that paregoric?—New York Weekly.

Glances.

He would have been glad to exchange glances with her.

But a fair exchange were no robbery.

And she chose rather to steal a glance when she thought he wasn't looking.

"Oh, woman, woman!" he murmured, but dared not reproach her openly.—Puck.

Brutal.

The Wife—I've been to a bridge party, and I have a splitting headache.

The Brute—Well, I don't understand it. Your tongue might ache or your stomach, but why your head?—Cleveland Leader.

Vassar Girl—Why do they call that man the pitcher? Carafe would be much nicer.

Coach—There is no bottle holder in this game. You're thinking of a prizefight.

When the Devil Baits the Hook.

Watch out, Mr. Fisherman!
Keep yo' eyes an' look!
Mind de fish you ketchin'
W'en de devil baits de hook!

Dar's trouble in de ocean,
Dar's trouble in de brook—
W'en a feller goes a-fishin'
An' de devil baits de hook.

You kin see it on de skyline,
You kin read it in de brook—
De fish is full er trouble
W'en de devil baits de hook.

The French military authorities in Africa are bending every effort to increase the number of a species of camel which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of commerce.

DIGGING THE BIG DITCH.

How the Steam Shovels Make the Dirt Fly at Panama.

The steam shovels stand on terraced levels and in fifty minutes load a train of eighteen flat cars, which are unloaded in fifteen minutes more amid a shower of dust. The line of cars is followed by "spreaders." All through the cut puffs of steam here and there indicate where the shovels are burrowing their way and pushing the work forward. Watching shovel 221, I stood on engine No. 298 when she was at work. Engineer Harrison, his hand on the lever, was pushing the cars up in due course as the steam shovels filled them, while the conductor, raising and lowering a flag, directed a "shove-up," so that even while loading it is sometimes necessary for an engineer to keep his hand on the throttle. One shovel accomplished probably as much work in a day as could be done by 600 men, and there is a great deal of rivalry among the operators to make the best record.

The record of steam shovel 223 for one hot day shows how the dirt flies on the isthmus. Three hundred and thirteen cars were loaded in 470 minutes. In the language of Larry O'Grady, this was "going some," almost an average of a car a minute, with eleven seconds grace, or a rate of a cubic yard of earth every seven seconds. A remark was made by a sad eyed man of unknown nationality. "It looks as though the dirt had wings, doesn't it?" Over 50,933 cubic yards of rock have been taked out in twenty-five working days by one shovel, and a completed tunnel through the cut is excavated within every month.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

A FOREST GIANT.

Monster Tree Trunk That Rivals the Famous Fallen Monarch.

A rival of the giant tree, the Fallen Monarch, familiar in pictures with a stagecoach on top of its trunk, has been found on the slopes of Bald mountain, in northern Tulare county.

It is in a region little visited and was first noted by R. H. Gallagher, an old Yosemite stage driver, two years ago. When Gallagher tried to return to it he lost the trail and did not find the great tree again for months.

The great trunk lies in the forest, the lower two or three feet of it buried in the soil which has been accumulating for ages. It is believed that hundreds of years have passed since the great tree fell, and the fires of ages have rolled over it through the forest. Much of the bark has been burned away, yet originally it was from twenty to forty inches thick. The trunk now is more than 100 feet in circumference, and it is a hard climb to get on top of it.

Bald peak is midway between the Sequoia National park and the General Grant National park. Near by is Redwood mountain, on which there are said to be 10,000 giant trees. The region, which is northeast of Visalia, is reached by stage to Eshom valley, twenty-one miles, where Gallagher has a camp called Juanita camp.—Los Angeles Express.

German Acuteness.

The egg cups imported into India at one time all came from Great Britain. The Indian eggs are, however, very small, and the egg cups did not fit. A German traveler noticed this small item and got his firm to make smaller egg cups and export them there. All the trade is now in German hands. In Africa the scissors imported from Sheffield were found to be rather dangerous weapons to place in the hands of the natives, owing to their sharp points. The Solingen Steel works sent a lot of round pointed scissors out, which found favor, and now Germany has captured the whole market.—From "Germany of the Germans."

Saving the Edelweiss.

The edelweiss, responsible for so many deaths, is becoming rare. The plant when it is culled is not of particular beauty, but the fascination of picking it is in an inverse ratio. Natives of the poorer class gather the flower, and tourists buy it for the same reason as certain anglers buy trout. The Bavarian government is so alarmed at the threatened destruction of the mountain "orchid" that a law has been passed to penalize the gathering without a permit. The measure is somewhat drastic, for even a proprietor who wishes to gather the flower must first obtain a permit.—London Globe.

Bacteria.

Modern investigations as to the origin of diseases have brought the little organisms called bacteria into so much prominence that search has been made to ascertain whether they existed during the early geological periods. Not long since the fact was announced that Regnault had discovered bacteria in coal. Continuing his researches, he found evidence that bacteria were probably coeval with the first appearance of organic life on the earth. They attacked vegetable tissues as well as the bones and teeth of animals; but, as a rule, they belonged to species distinct from those of today.

A Romantic Career.

Caid Belton, the young English officer who, at the age of twenty-six, became commander in chief to Mulai Hafid and helped him win the throne of Morocco, has had a stranger than fiction career. At nineteen he received his commission for bravery in South Africa, soon after achieved his captaincy in Somaliland, entered Mulai Hafid's service in 1908, and now everybody in Morocco calls him "the kingmaker."

So perfect an insulator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap of an inch.

If Canada's wheat crop last year had been shipped by rail, each car holding 15 tons, it would have made a continuous train 1365 miles long.

Not Her Fault.

Mrs. Lapsling was expressing her regret that she had been unable on account of illness to be present at the funeral of a neighbor.

"I always feel," she said, "that I ought to attend the obloquies of a friend, but I just couldn't go."—Chicago Tribune.

Inherited.

"And now," said Professor Longhunter as he greeted Henry Peck, "what shall we make of your little boy—a lecturer? He has a sincere taste for it."

"I know he has," replied the male parent. "He inherits it from his mother."

Dividing Her Weight.

"Don't stand on that delicate table to hang the picture, Martha. It'll break. You're too heavy."

"Oh, no, I'm not, mum. It'll bear me. I'm standing only on one foot."

We are inclined to believe in those whom we do not know because they have never deceived us.—Johnson.

ARAB MANNERS.

Life in the Tents of the Roving and Eloquent Bedouins.

"By living with the Arabs, doing as they did and moving with them in their migrations," writes Douglas Carruthers in the Geographical Journal, "I obtained an insight into their mode of life and customs. Things move slowly in the east, and I spent fourteen days in buying three camels. But the time was not wasted. I studied Arab manners, learned more or less how to eat with my hands, how to wear the Arab costume with some comfort, how to drink coffee a la Arab, and, most difficult of all, how to sit still all day long doing nothing. I found this last most trying, more especially because it was cold. A Bedouin tent is a drafty place at the best, but in midwinter it is almost unbearable. On two occasions there was snow on the desert.

"We used to feed out of a huge round dish, ten of us at a time. The fare was camels' milk and bread in the morning, and in the evening we generally had meat and rice cooked with an enormous amount of fat. During the day we appeased our hunger by sipping strong black coffee. At night there was always a large group of men in the tent of the sheik, and the talk was carried on far into the night.

"Eloquence is a highly prized talent among the Bedouins, and not only would they recount their stories in the most beautiful manner, but on occasion, to the tune of a single stringed violin, they would sing extempore songs for hours on end."

KEEPING HIS RECORDS.

Unusual Business Methods of a Merchant In Western Canada.

In the Bookkeeper is recorded a case which clearly comes under the head of "unusual business methods." In a thickly settled prairie district in western Canada, not far from Moose Jaw, a few Canadians had opened up a coal mine, the product of which they sold to the surrounding farmers. Settlers would come in wagons and sleighs and load their own winter's fuel, which cost them from $1 to $2 a ton, according to the run. It was early winter when I first made the acquaintance of this mine and its remarkable "superintendent," and my first reception from this individual was a fierce yell on his part, with the frantic brandishing of a long stick and the words: "What the devil are you doing? Can't you see? Are you stone blind?"

I was literally walking through his books! Since morning—and this was at 3 o'clock in the afternoon—he had been keeping a record of outgoing sleighs and wagons of coal in the snow. About twenty farmers were drawing that day. With his stick he had written the initials of each in a clean spot in the snow and with that same stick had registered the number of tons they had taken away. I had spoiled one-half of his "books," and it was an hour before he became at all affable. I was still more astonished when I entered the "superintendent's" little board office. The walls were black with pencil marks, figures and names. A fire would have burned down his "book" of two years past.

Where Microbes Thrive.

The alimentary canal is the most perfect culture tube known to bacteriological science. No part of the body is so densely populated with micro-organisms. It is estimated that in the alimentary canal of the average adult about 126,000,000,000 microbes come into existence every day. They crowd this region so densely that scientists originally believed that they were indispensable to human life. According to a writer in McClure's, Pasteur, who first discovered them, maintained this view, but recent investigations have rather disproved it. There are many animals that exist in perfect health without any intestinal bacteria at all. Polar bears, seals, penguins, eider ducks, arctic reindeer—these and other creatures in the arctic zone have few traces of these organisms.

Not to Be Fooled.

A certain magazine once took to advertising by means of personal letters. A critic got this letter:

> Dear Brown—Have you seen article in this month's Trash Magazine? Heavens, can it be true? X.

But the critic, not to be fooled, sent to the editor of the Trash—in an unstamped envelope, so that double postage would be charged—this answer:

> Dear X.—I have seen one previous number of the Trash Magazine, and with heart and soul I hope never to see another. This is quite true. BROWN.

Progress.

"How is your boy getting on at school?"

"First rate," answered Farmer Corntossel. "He's goin' to be a great help on the farm. He knows the botanical names for cabbage an' beans already, an' all he has to do now is to learn to raise 'em."—Washington Star.

Too Much of a Target.

Brown—How did you feel, Jones, when the burglar had you covered with his revolver—pretty small, eh? Jones—Small! Great Scott, no! I felt as big as the side of a house.—Boston Transcript.

A Necessity.

Judge—Why did you burn your barn down just after getting it insured? Farmer—Your honor, a poor man like me can't afford to have a barn and insurance too.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

To live long it is necessary to live slowly.—Cicero.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

SIM SIMPKINS.

Sim Simpkins don't believe in things;
His fancy never spreads its wings.
He says that "two an' two is four
An' so shill be forevermore."
When Morse got up the telegraph
Old Sim read of it with a laugh,
And then says he:
"Huh! Needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

And when 'twas said electric lights
Should gleam and glimmer through the nights
Old Sim said: "Shucks! How'll you send fire
A-scootin' through a solid wire?"
He proved that it could not be done
By argument that weighed a ton
When "Humph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

When Bell announced the telephone
Old Sim read of it with a groan
And wiped his specs and slowly said:
"Th' feller's plainly off his head.
Th' idy! Talk an' I could hear
Ten miles away all plain an' clear!
Huh! No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

The wireless telegraph made Sim
Deny its truth with language grim.
"It's nothin' but a pesky sham.
Now, who could breathe a tellygram?"
And when the Wrights got up and flew
Old Sim just took another chew,
And "Umph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

Don't think this shaft is aimed at Sim
And that there's only one of him.
Oh, gentle reader, you and I
Learn of some truths, but do not try
To make them true, but wisely frown,
And arguments we try to drown
With "No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

—Chicago Post.

In Doubt.

"Charles, you would better walk down to papa's office and see him about our engagement."

"Clara, I can walk to your papa's office, but I may need some help to get back."

His Money.

A poor beggar received a monthly allowance of $5 from a rich man. The money used to be paid to him regularly by the bookkeeper. On one occasion when the poor man came around the bookkeeper handed him only $3. The poor man remained standing quietly until the bookkeeper asked whether there was anything else he wished.

"You must have made a mistake," he said. "I always get $5."

"Yes," replied the bookkeper; "that has now been changed."

"Changed? Why?"

"You see, the boss recently married off his eldest daughter, and he had a great deal of expense, as you may imagine—the dowry and so forth. You can easily understand"—

"Yes, yes!" grumbled the beggar. "Give your employer my best wishes and tell him that if he ever marries off another daughter he may do it with his own money, not with mine."—Maccabean.

His Error.

The young man who loved the daughter of the widow had called to get the mother's consent to lead the fair girl to the altar, but he blundered at the very outset.

"I have come, madam," he began in a voice that was agitated and beseeching, "to ask you for the blessed privilege of working for your dear daughter, taking care of her, giving her a home and"—

He got no further. The widow, with indescribable eagerness, threw herself into his arms. "I gladly give you the privilege," she cried. "You don't know how I have hoped and longed for a model man like you to be my darling daughter's father!"—Chicago News.

Why He Was Gallant.

A stout woman entered a crowded car and took hold of a strap directly in front of a man seated in the corner. As the car started she lunged against his newspaper and trod heavily on his toes. As soon as he could extricate himself he arose and offered her his seat.

"You are very kind, sir," she said, panting for breath.

"Not at all, madam," he replied. "It's not kindness; it's simply self defense."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Reason.

"Talking about women," observed the peach to the potato, "I can't bear these so called notable housewives with their energy in providing for their families."

"Why not? What effect do they produce on you?" asked the potato.

"They jar me," answered the peach.—Baltimore American.

A Proper Name.

"You have christened your baby Halley's Comet?"

"Yes. It's unusual, but appropriate. He's a bright spot in one existence that gets us up at all sorts of unearthly hours."—Washington Star.

The Real Job.

Him—I—I don't know how to tell you how I love you.

Her—Don't worry about that. I'll take it as it comes. What you want to get nervous about is how to tell papa about it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

To make it possible to reach the bottom of a trunk without stooping over, an Illinois man has patented a trunk with metal legs which slide in guideways on the corners to raise it.

EDWARD AS MOTORIST.

He Was an Enthusiast and Patron of the Toot-Toot Art.

By the death of King Edward, motoring in common with many other forms of sport has lost a munificent patron. His Majesty was the proud possessor of a baker's dozen of motorcars, most of which represent the last word in the automobile world.

The King was immune from the tyranny of the number-plate, and his cars were therefore innocent of the symbolism which appeals so strongly to the executive of the police-trap.

A detailed description of all the King's cars was issued to the police throughout the Kingdom together with instructions that "all facilities" were to be given for their progress on the road. But this concern at headquarters was not sufficient to prevent mistakes. More than once the royal cars were held up owing to the interference of some officious constable, who was disappointed in his search for a number, and a considerable amount of time and breath has been wasted before he has been convinced that "the King can do no wrong."

Unlike his brother, the Duke of Connaught, the King was remarkably free from anything in the nature of a serious accident. He had breakdowns in legion—no motorist is free from these little unpreventable inconveniences — but he always proved himself equal to the emergency by availing himself of the first handy vehicle and so avoiding becoming an object of interest to all and sundry.

A short while ago his car came to a sudden stop in Richmond Park. In a moment a vast crowd appeared, apparently from nowhere, and enjoyed the spectacle of the King of England instructing his chauffeur in the true inwardness of the breakdown, showing him the best method of remedying the fault, and exhibiting in a number of ways his intimate knowledge of motor-car mechanism. He owed this knowledge to Mr. Oliver Stanton, who, years ago, taught His Majesty cycling, and more recently made him a thorough master of the automobile.

King Edward's chauffeurs were all picked men. Most of them served in Scotland Yard, and have, at some time or other, driven the official motor-cars of the police. How this idea of the King's was carried out is interesting. One day a chauffeur in the employ of the Commissioner of Police was told off to perform some service for the King, and the fine physique and bearing of the man attracted His Majesty's attention. While this man was in attendance at Buckingham Palace something went wrong with a royal motor-car, which seemed to puzzle the King's own chauffeur, and resist all his attempts at remedy.

At last the man from Scotland Yard stepped forward, and in a few minutes found a remedy. The King was so pleased that he asked the man to take service with him, and, the permission of the Commissioner being secured, the corps of policemen-chauffeurs was inaugurated. As it was necessary for policemen to accompany the King almost everywhere he went, the men performed dual service.

Although the King was extremely free from accidents, he had foresight enough to know that he was not infallible, so he had a complete first-aid outfit attached to each of his cars. This miniature surgery weighs about six pounds, and includes an India rubber tourniquet to stop bleeding, several pairs of scissors and forceps, antiseptic swabs, gauze, bandages, a variety of unguents and dressings, a selection of stimulative drugs, and a bottle of brandy. These contents are arranged in the order of their use in the eight different compartments of a silver box which fits into a royal blue morocco case.

On the lid of each case are detailed instructions, while on the front of each silver box is the inscription: "A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

The Names of the Mighty.

Talking of family names, the new issue of the London directory provides some curiosities. Sebastian Bach is a horse dealer, Robert Bruce and John Bunyan are green grocers, John Milton is a chandler and James Boswell a mason.

William Shakespeare is the name of a barrister, tailor and a van builder. There is a Crusoe and also a Gulliver. Julius Caesar is a chemist; Livy keeps apartments. Homer is a lighterman, Pindar an electrical engineer, Mars, retails beer, and Venus, not inappropriately, sugars, candles. Frances Bacon is an architect and Bayard a dairyman. And what could be better for the name of a saddler than Whippy?

From Sailor to Royal Academician.

Mr. C. Napier Hemy, one of the newly-elected Royal Academicians, has had an extremely eventful career. Born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, he was taken by his parents to Australia, where in his early days he worked hard as a miner in the bush. The call of art was strong upon him, however, and he abandoned everything to study painting in Antwerp. Returning to England in 1870 his success with the brush was soon assured, and, elected an Associate in 1898, he has now deservedly achieved the highest honor the art world has to offer.

Healy on Redmond.

The Irish politician takes his business seriously and when he strikes an opponent he strikes to kill. The other day at a mass meeting in Cork, Mr. M. Healy, M.P., said that Mr. John Redmond and his party, in voting for the Budget, had committed the greatest act of betrayal of Irish interests since that memorable act of treachery in Ireland's history when, 110 years ago, other Irishmen put their hand and seal to the Act of Union.

Exporting Cabinet Ministers.

In proposing "Scotland and her Industries" at a Glasgow corporation dinner recently an Englishman remarked that the two chief industries of the northern land were the manufacture of marmalade and Cabinet Ministers. Sir Samuel Chisholm, who replied, suggested that they had a good-going business in the output of Prime Ministers—for export as well as for home consumption.

Ever since he was a boy at school Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, who recently celebrated his seventy-second birthday, has had a tough time, and often has been called "Hard Wood." At the age of ten he went to Marlborough Grammar School, and then to the college in the same town. Here he received his baptism of "war." It was a riot among the boys, brought about by the prohibition of pyrotechnic displays on the Fifth of November. The culmination was a month of mutiny, during which the head master's desk was burned and great damage done to the premises. Young Wood was flogged, fined $10, and given 300 lines of Latin to learn by heart.

Gladstone Talks Dutch.

Lord Gladstone, the first Governor-General of South Africa, left London recently to take up his new duties. The large party which gave him a rousing send-off, included a number of Dutchmen. So much progress has Lord Gladstone made in learning Dutch that he was able to converse with them in their own tongue and to promise of his policy in South Africa that "Alles zal recht kommen" (the Dutch proverb, "All shall come right").

A Moist Show.

A catchy unrehearsed act took place at a London music hall the other night. When the fireproof curtain was about to be lowered, a stage hand new to the work pulled the wrong handle, with the result that the water sprinkler was set in motion. The stage was swamped, the orchestra receiving a shower bath, to the considerable amusement of the audience.

Pursuer Shoots Friend.

Extraordinary excitement prevailed over the pursuit of the escaped prisoner Powellka, who has been terrorizing the Manawatu district of New Zealand. Scores of armed men were out in pursuit of the robber. One of the searchers, by an unfortunate accident, shot another member of the pursuing party, who died of the injuries received.

The Chinese Doctor's Methods Were Severe, But Efficacious.

This is the Chinese medical treatment which a missionary underwent: Having been thrown from his horse and left fainting in the street, he was carried into a house, where a doctor soon visited him. "He made me sit up in bed, placing near me a large basin filled with water, in which he put a thick piece of ice to reduce it to freezing point. Then, stripping me to the waist, he made me stretch my neck over the basin while he continued to pour the water on my neck with a cup. The pain caused by those nerves which take their rise from the 'pia mater' was so great and insufferable that it seemed to me unequaled, but he said it would stanch the blood and restore me to my senses, which was actually the case, for in a short time my sight became clear and my mind resumed its powers. He next bound my head with a band drawn tight by two men, who held the ends while he struck the immediate parts vigorously with a piece of wood, which shook my head violently and gave me dreadful pain. This, he said, was to settle the brain, which he supposed had been displaced, and it is true that after the second operation my head felt more free.

"A third operation was now performed, during which he made me, still stripped to the waist, walk in the open air supported by two persons, and while thus walking he unexpectedly threw a basin of freezing cold water over my breast. As this caused me to draw my breath with great vehemence and as my chest had been injured by the fall, it may easily be imagined what were my sufferings under this affliction, but I was consoled by the information that if any rib had been dislocated this sudden and hard breathing would restore it to its natural position. The next proceeding was not less painful and extravagant. The operator made me sit on the ground and, assisted by two men, held a cloth upon my mouth and nose till I was almost suffocated. 'This,' said the Chinese Aesculapius, 'by causing a violent heaving of the chest will force back any rib that may have been dislocated.' The wound in my head not being deep, he healed it by stuffing it with burned cotton. He then ordered that I should continue to walk much, supported by two persons; that I should not sit long or be allowed to sleep till 10 o'clock at night, at which time I should eat a little thin rice soup. He assured me that these walks in the open air while fasting would prevent the blood from settling upon the chest, where it might corrupt. These remedies, though barbarous and excruciating, cured me so completely that in seven days I was able to resume my journey."—London Lancet.

Odd Use For a Piano Stool.

"We have requests for all kinds of odd pieces of furniture," said a dealer the other day, "but I was somewhat surprised when a customer asked for an odd piano stool. There was nothing particularly unusual in the request itself, but I was rather surprised to find that neither style, color nor kind of wood seemed to have much influence on the mind of the would be buyer.

"'What is your piano like?' I finally asked curiously. 'Oh, I haven't any piano!' was the reply. 'You see, I have just joined a swimming class, and we all have to have a piano stool to practice the different motions on. There is nothing so good to learn on, our teacher says, unless one can actually go into the water itself every day'."

THE QUEEN CONSORT.

Peculiarities of the Position of King George's Wife.

Great as are the powers of the King, the Queen Consort shares but few of them. In some respects, thanks largely to King Edward, who set up many precedents during his short but memorable reign, her privileges are greater than they were, but her perquisities are fewer. Before the time of the late King the Queen never rode in the great coach of state beside her husband, for in law she is not equal to him, being merely his subject.

At one time the sovereign allowed his consort one-tenth of the revenue from the crown lands and other sources of income, which was known as the Queen's Gold, but since the days of William IV. she has had a separate grant. To manage her own affairs the Queen has her own household, which comprises a lord chamberlain, vice-chamberlain, treasurer, private secretary, mistress of the robes, five ladies of the bedchamber, four bedchamber women, and four maids of honor. The Archbishop of York is her chaplain in perpetuity, and she can also appoint her own attorney-general and solicitor-general to represent her in the courts, but this privilege has not been exercised within recent years.

It is high treason to conspire against the Queen Consort during the reign of her husband, but should she survive him anyone doing her an injury can only be proceeded against by the common law as if she were a private person. Should she herself be guilty of crime she can only be tried by the House of Peers, but she can be sued in the ordinary way.

Thus, a subject cannot sue the King for debt, but the Queen can be compelled to pay her bills like any ordinary citizen, one of the curiosities of her position being that by law she is only a single woman, and therefore cannot shelter herself behind the Married Women's Property Act, as can the wife of plain John Smith. The idea is that the King is so occupied by affairs of state that he has no time to devote to his purely domestic concerns, so that his wife must look after her own business and be solely responsible for any debts incurred by her.

As the Queen Consort is liable to be sued in the civil courts she can also proceed against anyone, while should she so desire it she can compete with certain peeresses by going into business as a milliner, or opening any other shop that takes her fancy. However, when signing the lease or other legal document she must always be careful to add the words "Queen of England" to her signature. One of her privileges is that of riding in an unnumbered motor-car.

Although she takes no part in the government of the country and cannot sign a state document, the King can appoint her as his proxy in the event of his being ill or away from England during a grave national crisis. This actually occurred a few years ago, when the Ministers held a consultation with Queen Alexandra, with the happiest results.

But as soon as she becomes Queen-Dowager most of her rights cease. She is simply an ordinary private citizen and cannot even remarry without the consent of the reigning monarch, but she is always allowed an annuity of between $250,000 and $500,000 to maintain her station with becoming dignity.

The Grand Trunk Strike—Will It Affect Belleville?

PASSENGER TRAINS SO FAR ARE RUNNING REGULARLY, BUT FREIGHT IS PRACTICALLY TIED UP — STATION OFFICIALS PRESSED INTO SERVICE—WILL THE STRIKE AFFECT THE ATTENDANCE AT THE MASONIC GRAND LODGE AND THE OLD BOYS' REUNION.

There's mischief in the air, as the poet says.

How will the Grand Trunk strike affect Belleville?

The chief topic of conversation in the city to-day was the strike of the trainmen in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway, and its effect upon local conditions. Up to the time of going to press passenger trains were arriving and departing from the station here nearly on time, but were in charge of railway employees who were by no means regular train hands.

At the station here, the station Agent, Mr. T. H. Coppin; Mr. Coleman, one of the head despatchers, Mr. E. Orr, a despatcher, Chief Train Despatcher Cushing and others were pressed into service as conductors, etc. Mr. Coppin went west on the early morning train, Mr. Coleman came in from the west and Mr. Orr was in charge of the Brockville local, which left here at 7 o'clock, eastward bound. Mr. Cushing, it was said, went north in charge of a train.

We are informed that a former Grand Trunk employee who resides near the Station was called upon and asked to take charge of a train but absolutely refused.

At an early hour this morning some members of the local police force were requested to be at the Station here in case of any trouble, but fortunately there was none, as the trains came in and went out again if nothing out of the ordinary was happening.

Up to noon to-day only one freight had left the local station since last night.

There can be no denying the fact that Belleville citizens looked glum when the news of the strike reached their ears. With the big Masonic convention almost opened, and the Old Boys' Reunion due to start in three more days it begins to look as though Belleville may be "up against it." Will the strike have any effect on the attendance at the above-mentioned functions? Hard to say, definitely, perhaps, but many people shake their heads ominously.

Even if the trains run regularly, they say, ladies and timid people would hesitate to ride on a railroad in which a strike was in progress.

There is no denying that things have a cerulean outlook.

But cheer up. The strike may soon be settled

Let us hope so.

A conservative estimate of the number of men out on strike in this division, whose headquarters is at Belleville, is at least 200. Everybody is out except the engineers, firemen and switchmen.

One of the promoters of a local hotel this morning received telegrams from Masons who had engaged rooms, cancelling the same, as they were unable to reach here owing to the G. T. R. strike.

A large excursion was billed to arrive here to-day from Port Hope and take steamers to Massassaga Park, where a picnic was to be held. Owing to the strike the excursion was not held

ENGINEERS AN FIREMEN DON'T LIKE STRIKE

In conversation with some G. T. R. engineers and firemen it was ascertained that those bodies were by no means any too friendly towards the strikers, some even stating that they considered the strike was ill-advised and unnecessary.

The Globe of o-day, discussing conditions in Toronto, said:

There were many interesting incidents while the officials were using their utmost endeavor to get these two trains out for the runs east and west. Passengers were ordered out of one car into another of the Montreal train,, and when the flyer finally pulled out it did not present the perfection of make-up usually so noticeable. On this train, too, a number of delegates to the Masonic Grand Lodge at Belleville were passengers, and many of these waxed impatient because of the long delay.

"Valema", the musical Italian, simply delighted "Palace" patrons last night. He's a wonder and no mistake. His one number from "Il Travatore" on the accordion was worth five times price of admission. Masons Are Coming On Every Train.

BUT BIG INFLUX IS LOOKED FOR THIS EVENING — ALL COMMITTEE WORK DONE SO FAR —DELEGATES THINK THE ARMORIES AN IDEAL PLACE FOR GRAND LODGE'S SESSIONS

The Masons are Coming, Hurrah! Hurrah!

Delegates to the Masonic Grand Lodge are coming in on every train, and by 10 a.m. to-morrow, when the Grand Lodge proper opens, it is estimated that from 800 to 1000 delegates will be in the city.

Many prominent members of the craft are already here, among them the following:

Grand Master—Judge MacWatt, of Sarnia..

Past Grand Masters — Judge Harding, of Lindsay, A. T. Freed, Esq., of Hamilton; J. H. Burnett, K. C., of Pembroke.

Aubrey White, Esq., D. G. M., of Toronto,

Chairman of Committees — Messrs. Geo. S. May, Ottawa; A. J. Young, North Bay; W D. McPherson, M. P. P., Toronto; F. W. Harcourt, K. C., Toronto; W. George Eakins, Toronto.

The Board of General Purposes was in session to-day, and this afternoon the members of this Board, the Chairmen of Committees and other prominent gentlemen will be taken for a sail down the bay on the Varuna.

The members of the local Reception Committee, ornamented with handsome yellow badges, are as busy as bees. They are meeting all trains, and generally looking after the welfare of the visitors.

The visitors who have so far arrived are loud in their praises of the Armories as a place of meeting for the Grand Lodge. Never had such an ideal meeting place they say.

The rotunda of Hotel Quinte was this morning thronged with the visiting "big guns" of Free Masonry, most of whom filled their arm chairs comfortably and appeared to be at peace with the world. Whatever cares they had did not appear to sit very heavily on them.

"Getting pretty well filled up, Mr. Jenkins?" said The Intelligencer to the genial proprietor of our leading hostelry.

"O," said the popular Boniface, "The Quinte is like an omnibus, you know, always room for a few more."

Walker-Vandewater.

The Winnipeg Free Press, in its issue of the 11th inst., has the following announcement of the wedding of a former well-known young lady of this city:

"A pretty wedding was solemnized at 6 o,clock Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Vandewater, No. 1 University Place, when their daughter, Miss Anna E., was united in marriage to Mr. Rolla E. Walker, Rev. Mr. Johnstone officiating. Mr. C. Laylor presided at the piano. The bride, who was unattended, wore a travelling suit of gray diagonal cloth, with coat opening over an elegant net blouse. She carried a large bouquet of white carnations. After the wedding ceremony the guests partook of the wedding supper. The happy couple will reside at Vancouver."

A new machine separates the whites and yolks of opened eggs by allowing the former to pass through a sieve and automatically ejects bad eggs, which will not separate, their weight tripping a tray.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 18.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, receipts last week were 2300 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 800 calves, while offerings this morning were 1100 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 300 calves. A weaker feeling developed for cattle and prices show a decline of 25c to 35c, as the supply was about 50 per cent. larger than this day week, and the average quality was only medium, as a large percentage of the stock consisted of old cows and half-finished grassers. There were also about ten carloads of northwest ranchers on the market, the first large shipment to arrive this season of the wild sort, and the prospects are that the receipts of such now on will increase. There was an improved demand from local butchers, but really choice steers were scarce. There was some enquiry for export account, but there was nothing available for this trade. A few choice steers sold at $6.75 to $6.90; good, at $6.25 to $6.50; fairly good, at $5.75 to $6; fair, at $5.25 to $5.50, and common, at $4.50 to $5 per cwt. Good to choice cows brought from $4.50 to $5, and common, $3.75 to $4.25, while bulls sold at from $4 to $5 per cwt. Hog prices scored a further advance of 20c to 25c, due to small supplies and keener demand from packers. An active trade was done and sales of selected lots were made at $10 to $10.20 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and a deck load of heavyweights, averaging 270 lbs. each, sold for $9 per cwt. The foreign markets for Canadian bacon continue strong and prices are steadily tending towards a higher level. The trade in small meats was quiet on account of the limited supplies, and the undertone firmer. Yearling sheep sold at 3½c to 3¾c per lb.; spring lambs, at $4 to $6 each, and calves at 5½c to 6c per lb. for choice, and at $3 to $6 each for common.

Because the native two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1914.

PREMIER AT BRANDON

Sir Wilfrid Hears Proposals of the Grain Growers.

Promises to Attend to the Request For Terminal Elevators, But Balks at Idea of Having Government Ownership — Frowns Upon Abattoir Scheme and Is Silent on Subject of Public Ownership of H. B. R.

Brandon, Man., July 19.—Sir Wilfrid put in one of the busiest days of his trip in the wheat city. In the morning he received a civic welcome. In the afternoon he had an extended conference with over two hundred delegates of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association and later met a deputation from the Board of Trade, who asked that a branch line from the Grand Trunk Pacific, some fourteen miles away, be built. The most important meeting of the day was the Prime Minister's conference with the grain growers who presented four memorials:

1. Asking for the abolition of the duty on agricultural implements and a readjustment of the tariff for revenue only. 2. Government ownership of terminal elevators. 3. The establishment by the Government and operation under independent commission of abbatoirs. 4. A chilled meat train service, the immediate building of the Hudson Bay Railway by the Government and its operation under a commission.

To the terminal elevator proposition Sir Wilfrid promised immediate attention. He was not prepared then to go the whole way towards public ownership, but that was the only remedy. He saw no "serious difficulty" in the way. At the outset the Prime Minister discouraged the abatoir scheme, and both he and Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, were silent upon the Government ownership and operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. From the Premier's reply, there appears to be no immediate indication that Brandon will be connected with the Grand Trunk Pacific, although his remarks were intended to convey the impression that at some time this would be done.

Another Italian Murder.

Jaffray, B.C., July 19.—L. Pellrinter, employed on a C.P.R. section gang here, was stabbed through the heart by another Italian, Frenztr Chilla, Saturday night, and died instantly. Chilla disappeared at once, and gave the police a lively chase for twenty-four hours. He was captured by Constable Boardman of Coal Creek and taken to the provincial jail at Fernie. It is reported that the murdered man's money had disappeared.

My Unknown Love.

I used to meet her in the park
Behind a prancing pair,
While this poor heart went pitapat
To see a form so fair.

I grew to know her lovely eyes,
Her cheeks that flush and pale.
But who can see a maiden's blush
Beneath an auto veil?

In winter she's an Eskimo
In heavy furs arrayed.
In summer she is nothing but
A goggled mummy maid.

And so my heart has ceased to throb
At sound of horn or bell.
It might be Angelina.
If it were I could not tell.

Mrs. G.-R.-J.-J.—He said that in view of my excellent record in the divorce courts an honorary decree should be conferred on me.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

The Young Men's Fancy.

O summer girl, sweet summer girl,
We're watching now for you!
We're waiting for you to arrive,
You and your peekaboo.
The winter girl is very sweet,
And she has many charms,
But now the summer girl we want
To greet with open arms.

O summer girl, sweet summer girl,
Come early as you can
And be, as you have always been,
A blessed boon to man!
We'll lavish on you all our love,
As we have done before,
And we'll agree to bow the knee
And worship and adore.
—Somerville Journal.

Courtesy.

I deemed it of good augury that the man to whom I presented the bill was courtesy itself.

"Surely," quoth I, "you will not let me go away under the impression that courtesy doesn't pay?"

He started, as though such general aspects of the business had not much engaged his attention.—Puck.

POWDER AND GUNS.

Evidence That They Were Used Long Before the Christian Era.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past.

The Hindoo code, compiled long before the Christian era, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns or any kind of firearms. Quintus Curtius informs us that Alexander the Great met with fire weapons in Asia, and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderbolts shot from the walls." Julius Africanus mentions shooting powder in the year 275. It was used in the siege of Constantinople in 668, by the Arabs in 690, at Thessalonica in 904, at the siege of Belgrade in 1073, by the Greeks in naval battle in 1008, by the Arabs against the Iberians in 1147 and at Toulouse in 1218.

It appears to have been generally known throughout civilized Europe as early as 1300, and soon thereafter it made its way into England, where it was manufactured during the reign of Elizabeth, and we learn that a few arms were possessed by the English in 1310 and that they were used at the battle of Crecy in 1346.—Cassier's Magazine.

SHERIDAN'S RUSE.

It Settled the Dramatist's Account With His Wine Merchant.

It is related of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist and statesman, that, always in debt, he had among his creditors the brothers Chalie, who were the partners in a wine firm in 1775.

One day when he was giving a dinner party to some distinguished people Sheridan sent for one of the brothers, told him he was now able to settle his account and invited him to the dinner party, asking him to come before the hour for some private conversation.

Chalie arrived early, and he was no sooner in the house than Sheridan sent off a servant with a note to the clerk, desiring him, as Mr. Chalie was favoring him with his company, to send as soon as possible three dozen of burgundy, two dozen of claret and two dozen of port, with a dozen of old hock.

The unsuspecting clerk sent the wine, with which the guests were so pleased that they asked where it came from. Sheridan, turning toward Chalie, said, "I am indebted to my friend here for all the wine you have tasted and am always proud to recommend him."

It was not until the following morning that Chalie realized the double meaning in Sheridan's words. The debt was canceled.

A Queer Fish.

A male fish which hatches the young of its mate is the Chromis paterfamilias. It is found in the Lake of Tiberias, Palestine. Strange to say, this industrious fish hatches its young in its mouth. When the female has spawned in the sand, the male approaches and draws the eggs into his gills, where they remain until hatched, when they struggle out of their confinement into the parent's mouth. As many as 200 perfect young are sometimes found in the mouth of an adult male. How the fish manages to feed itself without swallowing the young is a mystery. The grown fish is about seven inches long and one and three-quarters wide. Its back is olive green, shot with blue, and the belly is silver white, marked with green and blue. Near ancient Capernaum some hot springs form a small stream which runs into the lake, and it is in these warm waters that the chromis abounds.

Gentleman (to dog dealer)—I gave you a high price for this dog last week because you warranted it to be a good house dog. My house was broken into last night, and the dog never even barked.

If you was out with this 'ere dog and was to meet 'em burglars he'd know 'em in a minute. He ain't no common barkin' dog; he's a reg'ler 'tective an' worth 'is weight in gold, he is.—London Answers.

Hay's Hair Health

Keeps the Hair from Falling Out

Falling hair is due to lack of nourishment at the Hair Roots and often to an excess of dandruff on the scalp.

Hay's Hair Health Used regularly, invigorates Hairroots, cleanses the scalp of dandruff, and in this way stops falling hair and stimulates a healthy growth.

"I thought of writing you some time ago about the truly remarkable results I have obtained from the liberal use of Hay's Hair Health. I have only words of praise for such a wonderful remedy. My hair began to fall out at a very early age. Hay's Hair Health, in a very short time, covered my scalp with a splendid growth of hair.

(Intelligence. Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 20.—From all parts of Ontario comes the report this morning that through passenger service on the Grand Trunk lines is moving fairly well, with the assistance of all hands from superintendents down, acting as trainmen.

On the other hand, suburban and freight traffic is all tied up.

In many cases the freight and suburban traffic however, is the life of the smaller cities and towns. Wagons and stage coaches that have been discarded for years are being pressed into service.

People fortunate enough to own automobiles are in line to make lots of money.

UNIONISTS SCORE A GREAT VICTORY.

(Intelligencer Special)

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 2.—The great works of the Buck Stove Co., where a strike some years ago caused the imprisonment of Samuel Gompers and other labor leaders, has become a union closed shop and the long contested legal proceedings against Gompers will be dropped.

This change is regarded by unionists as the greatest victory of the century. For years labor men have fought tooth and nail to make it a union shop. Thousands of dollars have been spent in damages and legal costs in the battle The death of President Vancleave, of the Bucks Co., archenemy of unionism, made the settlement possible.

NEGRO PREACHER HAD WHITE GIRL VICTIMS.

(Intelligencer Special)

Washington, July 20.—Jonah Sturdivant, negro preacher and apostle of some new polygamous faith, is in prison convicted of bigamy, and of his three white girl victims, two are in hospitals here, dying of fearful diseases brought about, the doctors say, by their devotion to the negro and the practice of his incantations. The third is in an insane asylum, praying continuously for the Apostle Peter to unlock the prison door and let Sturdivant out.

The discovery of the crime was brought about by the investigations of one of the victim's sister, who came all the way from Sweden to find her. The revelations have created an intense feeling against the colored quarter here.

RAILROAD PRESIDENT SHOT BY A BURGLAR.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Chicago, July 20.—Ira Rawn, the popular president of the Mono railroad was shot dead by a burglar at his home in Winnettka, Ill., a suburb of this city, early this morning. Rawn was 55 years old and started as a telegraph operator. The whole countryside and hundreds of police are looking for the murderer.

"A Girl of the Gutter."

In private life Miss Gertrude Elliott, who has made such a hit in the part of Glad, a girl of the gutter, in Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's new three-act comedy, "The Dawn of a To-morrow," at the Garrick, is Mrs. J. Forbes-Robertson. She was married to that famous actor in 1900, three months after joining him as his leading lady. Mr. Forbes-Robertson and his wife have two daughters, the elder being called "Blossom," although her real name is Maxime. "I am never so happy," once said Mrs. Forbes-Robertson, "as when I can forget I am an actress and attend to household affairs. I never find housekeeping a worry. Should actresses marry actors? Certainly; if they can find Mr. Right. He will help them to far greater success than they might otherwise cahieve."

"O.U. Duck."

Sir Robert Anderson, in his reminiscences published in Blackwood, tells an amusing story of an encounter with a nursemaid while walking to his office. "I picked up a brooch, and I took it for granted it had been dropped by a nursemaid who was walking ahead of me. The trinket was what is called an 'O.U. duck' brooch, the vowels being intertwined in a cipher, with a little duck underneath. When I overtook the girl and asked if she had dropped a brooch, she answered as promptly, 'I think so, sir; what kind is it?' With a stolid face I replied, 'O.U. duck.' 'Oh, you go along,' she exclaimed with a toss of her head, as she jerked herself away."

WAITED TEN YEARS.

Wedded After Lover Had Come Back From Transportation.

Among aged folk who remember the Young Ireland movement of 1848 memories of a romance of the time will be awakened when they read of the death in Brisbane, Queensland, of Mrs. Kevin Izod O'Doherty, who at that troublous period was popular by reason of her poetic contributions under the pseudonym of "Eva" to Gavan Duffy's "Nation."

Mrs. O'Doherty, who was then Miss Eva Mary Kelly, had as a fellow contributor "Speranza," the title chosen by Lady Wilde, mother of the late Oscar Wilde.

Among the admirers of "Eva's" poetry was Kevin Izod O'Doherty, a young medical student who was also engaged in the patriotic movement. From a literary admirer, O'Doherty advanced to the position of "Eva's" lover.

As registered proprietor of the "Tribune," another Dublin paper of rebellious tendencies, he was arrested for seditious writing, and had as his prison companion the late Sir Charles Gavan Duffy. The jury disagreed twice, and on the eve of his third trial he was offered what was virtually a pardon if he pleaded guilty—he had certainly written the article which was the basis of the charge. He then sent for "Eva."

"I don't like this idea of pleading guilty," O'Doherty said; "what shall I do?"

"Do?" asked "Eva"; "why be a man and face the worst; I'll wait for you, however long the sentence may be."

The third trial day came off; O'Doherty was found guilty, and was sentenced to ten years' transportation. Before his deportation to Australia "Eva" was allowed to see him in his cell.

"Be you faithful," she said to O'Doherty; "I'll wait."

O'Doherty was transported, but, being allowed out on parole in Australia, he was able to finish his medical studies and take out his degree. Years passed, and he returned to Ireland, where "Eva," true to her word in the prison cell, awaited him. Two days after his return to Dublin they were married, and O'Doherty, with his bride, returned to Australia as a voluntary exile.

In 1885 O'Doherty came back and entered the British House of Commons as member for North Meath. He quickly tired of Parliamentary life, however, and once more returned to Australia, where he died a few years ago.

Romantic Story of Peer.

The death at Llandaff House, Weybridge, Wales, recently, of the Earl of Stamford recalls one of the most romantic histories of the peerage.

The family is a very old one, dating from the time of Richard Coeur de Lion. Lady Jane Grey, who occupied the throne of England for a few days, was perhaps its most notable member.

Lord Stamford's earldom was created for a Grey who led a Roundhead host in the field against his sovereign. Royalist historians write him down as a bad general and a cowardly soldier, while his Puritan companions found his life scandalous and unseemly. But when the tide turned he had the sense to tack about, and so, in spite of the doings of a son whose name is on King Charles' death warrant, the new earldom was saved to his descendants.

The seventh earl died in 1883, and his heir was discovered in South Africa, an unfrocked missionary, who, after two marriages in humble life, had lately legalized his union with a half-breed Kaffir woman, the sister of a Dutch wine-grower's slave boy. English society did not call back the new earl. He was content to live on in his corrugated iron shanty at Wynberg, adding to his seats a stone-built house, which he called "Stamford Hall."

He lived happily with his colored wife for several years, and had one daughter, who married Mr. Pieter Pieterse, of the Transvaal. There were no children of the two previous marriages.

When the late earl succeeded to the peerage he was professor of Classics and Philosophy at Codrington College, Barbados.

Rameses I.

Rameses I. was the first king of the nineteenth dynasty in Egypt and ruled for a brief period about B. C. 1355. Beyond the fact that he waged war in Nubia, where he left an inscription and constructed some of the buildings of the Karnak, little is known of his reign. His mummy was found in 1881 at Deir-el-Bahri. His son, Seti I., built the Memnonium at Kurnah in honor of his father's memory.

Ireland's Blue.

Strange to say, the national color of Ireland is and always has been blue (that is, heraldic blue, ultramarine—not, as some people have thought, sky blue). Green never was the national color of Ireland. The national color is taken from the ground of the arms. In the case of Ireland it is azure, a harp or stringed argent—thus blue is the color for Ireland.—Argonaut.

THE ANIMAL DERBY.

It Would Be Ostrich 1st, Greyhound 2nd, Kangaroo Also Ran.

Most people have heard of those animal races which are a popular feature of gymkhana meetings, but it may be explained that for an animal race the competitor enters any sort of animal he likes, except a horse or a dog, and drives or guides his champion to the winning-post.

Now, we will turn the Derby into an animal race, open to the whole animal kingdom. We will suppose that each animal runs throughout at the greatest speed of which it is capable, and that they don't interfere with each other.

First of all the field. Some animals—such as cattle—are, obviously, too slow to stand a ghost of a chance, and so we will line up the following ten starters: Hare, lion, roebuck, greyhound, horse, giraffe, elephant, kangaroo, dromedary, and ostrich—the last-named because, although a bird, he runs, and runs mighty fast, too.

Indeed, here it may as well be said that, if you want to win money on an animal race, you back the ostrich every time, for he is the fastest thing on land, and only one bird can beat him—namely, the swallow. The ostrich, then, would win our animal Derby with the greatest possible ease, for he would cover the 1 mile 4 furlongs and 29 yards of the Derby course at the amazing speed of 109 miles an hour—that is, nearly three times as fast as any horse ever foaled could do it, and, roughly, twice as fast as any other competitor among those named.

The record time for the Derby was made in 1906, when Major Loder's Spearmint won in 2 minutes 36 4-5th seconds. The ostrich would take, roughly, 53 seconds.

But who would be second? Probably the kangaroo will have a good many adherents, for, outside Australia, people have the idea that the kangaroo hops along at a tremendous pace. But the kangaroo would finish "down the course," absolute last!

A kangaroo is a slow animal, 7 1-2 miles an hour being his best speed. For second place, it would be a fairly close fight between the greyhound and the roebuck. A greyhound can go nearly a mile a minute—54 miles an hour, to be exact—and this would just bring him home ahead of the roebuck, whose best speed is a trifle over 50 miles an hour.

Now, for fourth place. The hare seems a likely choice; but again you would be wrong. A lion can give a hare a start and a beating. A lion is capable of 45 miles an hour, but the hare is fully extended at 4 miles an hour less.

What about the horse? Well, 38 miles an hour is the thoroughbred's limit, and that brings him into sixth place. Spearmint won his Derby at the rate of, roughly, 35 miles an hour, but a horse is capable of 38 miles an hour over a short distance.

Not far behind the thoroughbred would come the giraffe, who gets along at the "useful" gait of 34 miles an hour.

Then would come a big gap, closed at the other end by the elephant, who would come trumpeting along at a sedate 12 miles an hour.

The dromedary's speed, too, is a myth. Mr. G. E. Larner, the amateur walking champion, would make the dromedary step out, for the beast is not up to more than about 9 miles an hour, and Mr. Larner has walked 9 miles in 67 minutes 37 4-5 seconds.

And so the final placings of our animal Derby would be—ostrich, greyhound, roebuck, lion, hare, horse, giraffe, elephant, dromedary, kangaroo.

Use of Royal Highness.

The London Express learns that the style of Royal Highness will shortly be conferred on the brothers of Queen Mary—the Duke of Teck, Prince Francis of Teck, and Prince Alexander of Teck. At present their style is Serene Highness. The late Duke of Teck was granted the style of Highness in 1887.

The Teck family belongs to the Royal House of Wurtemberg, and the present Duke of Teck would be King of Wurtemberg now but for the morgantic marriage contracted by his grandfather, Alexander Duke of Wurtemberg, who married, in 1835, Claudius Countess de Rhedey, a member of the Polish nobility.

The Duke of Teck, Queen Mary's eldest brother, is married to Lady Margaret Grosvenor, a sister of the Duke of Westminster.

Prince Frances of Teck, her second brother, who is one of the best-known men in London, is unmarried. Prince Alexander, the third brother, is married to a daughter of the Duchess of Albany.

Her Markswomanship.

The militia boys were going away to camp on the morrow, and as Lieutenant Wellington Grant Smith parted with his sweetheart on the piazza she said, "I shall stand here tomorrow as you march past and throw a kiss at you."

But her soldier lover said, "No, don't do that."

"Why not?" she asked.

"Because," laughed he, "ten to one you'd hit the captain."—Judge.

Tales of a Tail.

I've taken with a grain of salt
The wondrous things men do.
The speed they've made, the tales they've spun,
Have knocked me all askew,
But for the swiftest things afloat
That never seem to fail
Without exception are the yarns
About that comet's tail!

WELCOME TO THE MASONS

Bellevillians one and all extend the Glad Hand to the visiting Masons, hoping their stay may be pleasant and their work profitable.

This city is honored by their presence.

Embracing, as it does, wisdom and antiquity reaching into the dim and misty past, the Society of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons can justly lay claim to being the leading fraternal organization of the world.

It is no small feather in Belleville's cap that this city has been chosen as the meeting place of Grand Lodge and the honor is appreciated.

While regretting that the unfortunate G. T. R. strike has curtailed the attendance, Belleville extends a warm welcome to the hundreds of delegates who are here, hopes that they may derive benefit and recreation from their visit, and, some day, call again.

◆ ◆ ◆

G. T. R. strikers are quoted as saying that they will fight to the bitter end. Well, there never was a strike yet that the end was not bitter enough for somebody.

◆ ◆ ◆

The striking railroaders ought to be able to tell some pretty fair fish stories in a day or two.

◆ ◆ ◆

Grand Master MacWatt, in his address to the Grand Masonic lodge to-day, made some pungent remarks. His reference to after-dinner orators who make an hour's speech in moving a toast, when three minutes would be long enough will be appreciated by some people, who, perhaps, are not Masons.

◆ ◆ ◆

The Northwest wheat belt seems to have been taken up a few holes.

If the merchants would leave their store window lights burning until the morning of the 28th inst., it would make Front and Bridge streets look much brighter. Most of the store window light service is on a flat rate and where's the harm? Burning out a globe or two won't cost much. Boost Belleville. Make for "A Bigger and Better Belleville!"

◆ ◆ ◆

Interviewers in the West are treating Sir Wilfrid cruelly. At Brandon the representatives of the Manitoba Grain Association denounced the protective tariff, and called attention to his declaration in Winnipeg in 1894, when, in addressing the electors in that city, he exclaimed, "I denounce the policy of protection as bondage and the people are toiling for a master who takes away a large portion of the earnings for which they sweat and toil." What his sunny smile reply was the report does not say.

◆ ◆ ◆

People in Toronto are protesting vigorously against the erection of unsightly telegraph poles, in the most beautiful and attractive residential portions of the city. The News says "The poles have now become so numerous that, standing at the head of the street it is impossible to see more than a mere outline of some of the buildings behind. Lawns where two poles come closely together have been made unsightly. This has occurred on a splendid street where property values range from $80,000 to $100,000 a block, and other localities are affected." Toronto is not alone in this respect. Belleville has been treated in the same way. Not only have unsightly poles been erected, but shade trees have been mutilated wherever they stood in the way, in such a way as to give them an unsightly appearance, and that, too, with the tacit approval of the authorities. It is time this vandalism was put a stop to.

Ernest Little in A Serious Plight.

CHARGED WITH ILLEGALLY MARRYING A GIRL UNDER THE LEGAL AGE, WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF HER PARENTS.

Ernest Little of this city, who is about 20 years of age, was last night arrested by Sergt. Harmon upon a warrant which charges that "he, Ernest Little, did unlawfully, with intent to marry, or carnally know, one Ethel Povey, a girl under the age of twenty-one years and fraudulently allure and take away out of the possession and against the will of her parents, then having the lawful charge of her, the said Ethel Povey, contrary to the Criminal Code."

It appears that, on Saturday last, Little secured a marriage license and drove to Canifton where he and Ethel Povey were married by the Rev. Mr. Kemp.

Little in procuring the license, took his affidavit that the girl was 18 years of age, whereas she is but 16.

The consent of the parents was not obtained, and in fact, they were not aware that their daughter was married or about to be married until after the ceremony. Learning of the marriage they caused the information to be laid, which placed Little behind the bars.

Owing to Magistrate Masson being out of the city today, Little was remanded to jail.

The witnesses to the marriage ceremony were Elizabeth and Willie Keller.

Local Conditions Re G. T. R. Strike.

Locally, the G. T. R. strike situation to-day was about the same as yesterday. Considerable inconvenience was experienced by some shippers here, owing to the fact that no freight trains were moving, and should the strike continue for any length of time, this will be a serious matter.

As a result of the strike there were no passenger trains yesterday on the Madoc division of the Midland route. This was owing to the fact that there were no persons available to take charge of the trains. The Peterboro train left yesterday, somewhat late, and returned last evening. All passenger trains, both from east and west, were somewhat behind time.

Yesterday was the day selected for a large excursion train to run to St. Anne's, but it had to be cancelled.

Through passenger trains were to-day running fairly on time, being manned by officials and other employees of the road

The trains arriving from the west during the night were a little late, but not to any great extent.

The train from Madoc, on the line of the Grand Junction, arrived here this morning a few minutes late.

In consequence of the strike the stage from Ivanhoe, on the line of C. P. R., this morning was heavily laden with freight. The driver stated that there was a rumor at Ivanhoe that the C. P. R. trainmen were contemplating striking, but it was apparently only a rumor.

All was quiet about the yard here to-day, and in fact has been since the strike commenced.

It was stated this afternoon that Masonic delegates had received a telegram stating that there would be no more G. T. R. trains leave Toronto to-day after 11 a.m.

Graceful Tribute To a Worthy Man.

The Picton Times of the 14th July, contains the following:

"Prince Edward County is fortunate in possessing so philanthropic a citizen as Mr. Wellington Boulter. At many times has Mr. Boulter's civic loyalty as well as loyalty to the Empire been expressed in deeds more impressive than words. His latest munificent benefactions are assuming half the cost of the new Demorestville church and the installation of a splendid system of waterworks in Glenwood Cemetery, Picton, that beautiful silent city in which mingle the remains of so many of the county's pioneers. Mr. Boulter is exceedingly judicious in the direction of his philanthropy and his latest contributions to the welfare of humanity will prove enduring monuments to his public-spirited characteristics. Socialistic ideas would find small place in the political world if the country's men of wealth used their means for the public benefit in the proportion in which Mr. Boulter distributes the fruits of his industry. The Times in hoping that Mr. Boulter may long live to enjoy with his contemporaries the benefits he so generously bestows, expresses a universal wish."

The Intelligencer joins the Times in congratulating the County of Prince Edward in having such a citizen as Mr. Boulter. Would that there were more of such men in our midst.

The Deadly House Fly.

The housewife in Canada is not so careful about screening her doors and windows as are the women in the United States, remarks the Kingston Standard. There, in most places, the screen doors and windows are as much a part of the ordinary house as are the wooden doors and window glass, and a stray fly that manages to get inside is hunted as if it were a murderer, for it is not only a filthy insect but a most dangerous one, carrying, as it does, disease germs by the thousands on its legs and wings. The following printed rules have been issued to household holders in New York City and we commend them to Canadian women.

Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those ill with contagious diseases. Kill every fly that strays into the sick room. His body is covered with disease germs.

Do not allow decaying material of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

All refuse which ends in any way to fermentation, such as bedding straw, paper waste and vegetable matter, should be disposed of or covered with lime or kerosene oil.

Screen all food.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

Keep all stable manure in vault or pit, screened or sprinkled with lime, oil or other cheap preparation.

See that your sewage system is in good order; that it does not leak, is up to date and is not exposed to flies.

Pour kerosene into the drains.

Cover food after a meal; burn or bury all table refuse.

Screen all food exposed for sale.

Screen all windows and doors, especially the kitchen and dining room.

Burn pyrethrum powder in the house to kill flies.

Don't forget if you see flies, their breeding place is in nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table or in the cuspidor.

If there are no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

If there is a nuisance in the neighborhood, write at once to the health department.

"CHAINS" VS. EMPIRE

REMARKABLE PLAY IS NOW RUNNING IN LONDON.

The Hard Lot of the English Clerk Is Ably Depicted In Miss Elizabeth Baker's Drama—Conservatism of the Clerking Class Keeps Valuable Men From the Colonies—Afraid to Try Anything Else.

A Canadian once said to me: What I cannot understand in England is the flood of able-bodied young men which pours out of every station in London every morning and hides itself away in stuffy offices, sitting all day over ledgers, doing uninteresting work, without prospect of anything better, selling life, with all its splendid possibilities, for a wretched pittance. Why do they do it?

"Most of them do it," I explained, "because they are afraid to try anything else. They do it because their education has taught them nothing about those 'splendid possibilities,' nor encouraged them to be curious, adventurous, enterprising. They cling to their work in offices as drowning men cling to hencoops; they are convinced that, if they loosed their hold, they would go under."

"I once heard of a man," said my Canadian friend reflectively, "who had been left a fortune without knowing anything about it. He was drawing a pound a week for a job he detested, living pretty rough and short, and all the while there were thousands waiting for him in the bank. I reckon there are many of you English like that man. You don't know how well off you are. You haven't realized yet that you've ceased to be islanders, that you belong to a country which is the biggest and is only waiting to be made the richest in the whole world."

I thought the other evening of that talk which I had with the man from Calgary in the train running through the magnificent mountain scenery of the Canadian Rockies. I was reminded of it by a play. It is not often that the theatre in England sets one thinking; still less often does it open up an Imperial horizon. But the play called "Chains," at the Repertory Theatre, does both. Whether Miss Elizabeth Baker, who wrote it, had any idea of sounding the Imperial note I do not know. I should rather think not. Her object, I fancy, was around her. But artists who are moved by a genuine impulse to record their observations always build better than they know. "Chains" supplies, whether intentionally or not, a striking comment upon the blindness of the people of this country to their goodly heritage.

Fifty years ago there was some excuse for regarding "the Colonies" with doubt and distrust. They were then really "a long way off." Those who "went to the Colonies" were generally failures at home. An old, settled country naturally disliked the idea of new, raw societies upon the margin of the wilds. To-day there is no such excuse. The civilization of Canada and Australia is in many respects superior to our own. Fast and luxurious liners have drawn the Empire together. Yet, as "Chains" shows us, a large class of people still mostly persists in thinking that England means "these islands in the Western Sea," and not, in King George's stirring phrase, "an England which is spread over the whole surface of the globe."

The play concerns a clerk who is struggling to exist "respectably" on about $600 a year. His wife, a busy, cheerful little soul, does all her own housework. They are obliged to take a lodger, and when, on account of "bad times," salaries in the office are reduced, they have to talk about putting up two. Their friends are mostly clerks also. They find their work tedious and uninteresting. But to few of their imaginations has it ever occurred that this work could be anything but an unpleasant necessity.

Suddenly the lodger announces that he is going to "chuck it" and go to Australia. He is sick of the dull grind at the office. He wants a change. Most of the others call him a fool for "throwing up a safe job." What does he know about Australia, they ask contemptuously. Things are just as bad out there. They do not want clerks. "I'm not going to be a clerk," is his answer. "I'm going on to a farm." At which they cackle and crack feeble, obvious jokes—all except the clerk he lodges with. In his mind the idea stirs up a strange confusion. He sees a vision of a larger, cleaner, healthy life in the open. He sees himself developing, glorying in existence instead of grumbling at it, building up a future for himself and his family by "making things grow." He is young and strong, and he has still the instincts of a countryman—witness his pathetic effort to raise flowers in his sunless, cat-infested back garden.

As soon as he speaks of it, the typical class suspicion and dislike of "the Colonies" are unloosed. His wife weeps and uses the habitual English argument, "It would be so dreadful if you failed!" Her family attack him vehemently. It is "wicked" to think of giving up a certainty for a risk. Who is he to rebel against clerkdom? "What was good enough for his father ought to be good enough for him.

Charlie Wilson would go to Australia but for his wife's final appeal to him on the ground that she may soon be a mother. He had better have gone, anyway. It is the children who would be the Empire's best assets if they could grow up to a natural, healthy life, instead of amid the squalor and the sordid struggles of suburban "respectability" upon $600 a year. Among clerks there is splendid material for the emigration agent, and for any country which wants intelligent, hard-working settlers. They are a source as yet scarcely tapped at all. Let them be helped to throw off their "chains" and a trebly good result will follow. The standard of emigration will be raised; knowledge of the Empire will be extended at home; and, furthermore, the hardships of which clerks complain nowadays will, with reduced competition, tend to disappear.—H. Hamilton Fyfe in The London Daily Mail.

H.M.'S POULTICE WOLLOPERS.

Things Not Generally Known About the Army Doctors.

Known to the irreverent as the "Linseed Lancers" or the "Poultice Wallopers," the officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps have undergone a good many vicissitudes.

In the old days the army "sawbones" was attached to a regiment, followed it everywhere, and often spent his life with it.

Nowadays, however, with the exception of the Household troops, army medical officers are appointed, not to regiments, but to garrisons, and are constantly being moved from one garrison town to another.

The modern army doctor, therefore, has army rank, but, at the same time, his executive powers are limited. He can only command men of his own corps.

Candidates must be between twenty-one and twenty-eight years of age, and at the time of appointment must be registered under the medical acts in force in the United Kingdom.

They have to undergo an entrance examination on purely medical subjects, and their character, health, etc., being satisfactory, they are appointed on probation.

While on probation, the officer undergoes a two months' course at the Royal Army Medical College on hygiene, pathology, tropical medicine, military surgery, and military medical administration. Then he goes to the Royal Army Medical Corps' School of Instruction at Aldershot for a two months' course in the technical duties of his corps, in each case having to pass an examination at the end of the course.

All being well, his probationary period now expires, and he becomes a full-fledged officer of the R.A.M.C.

The army doctor's pay is fairly good, certainly very good compared with that of a regimental officer. As a lieutenant he gets 14s. a day, as against the 6s. 6d. per diem of the ordinary subaltern; but then he is usually an older man.

As a captain, the army doctor gets only 15s. 6d. a day; but then he can become a captain in about three years, as against the six to nine years that it takes the regimental officer to "get his company." Moreover, after seven years' total service, the army doctor gets 17s. a day, and after ten years' total service he waxes fat on a guinea a day.

A major gets from £1 3s. 6d. to £1 6s. a day, according to length of service, a lieutenant-colonel from £1 10s. to £1 15s., a colonel £2 5s., and a surgeon-general £3 a day; while, if he become a deputy-director-general, our military "Bob Sawyer" will get £1,500 a year, and if he reach the top of the tree and becomes director-general of the Army Medical Service, £2,000 per annum will be his reward.

These rates of pay are generally substantially increased by extra pay for holding certain appointments. For example, the medical officer in charge of a hospital gets from 2s. 6d. to 10s. a day extra, according to the number of beds; an officer holding an appointment as specialist gets 2s. 6d. a day extra; and in one way or another the army doctor can add to his income.

With average luck an army doctor, after ten years' service, should be making at least £500 a year—that is, at the age of from thirty-one to thirty-eight—and another ten years should see him drawing at least £1,000 a year.

He has a certainty, and when he retires—which he must do at fifty-five, unless he is a colonel—there is a pension waiting for him, ranging from £1 a day after twenty years' service to the £1,125 per annum of a retired director-general, with three years' service as such, and thirty years' service in all.

In the old days, Indian army doctors often made fortunes out of attending rajahs, who were only too delighted to hand over the equivalent of £10,000 for having an ingrowing toe-nail removed, or some other trifling operation performed.

But these days are gone, and civilian practice is only permitted under certain conditions.

The Home Secretary's Wit.

Mr. Winston Churchill was told by an acquaintance that a very dear friend was seriously ill with appendicitis. Mr. Churchill determined to write a note of sympathy at once. He was just sitting down to write the letter, when the word came that the illness was acute indigestion. His note was worded thus: "Dear ——, —I am very sorry to hear that you are ill, but am glad that the trouble is with the table of contents rather than with the appendix."

A Gipsy Funeral.

A procession of gypsy caravans followed the remains of Richard Smith, an aged Romany, to Cheshunt Cemetery recently and the interment took place in the presence of a large number of gipsies, many quaintly attired, who had come from the surrounding neighborhood. Smith died in a caravan while making a short stay in the parish. As the coffin was lowered into the grave several women gipsies stepped forward and threw bunches of flowers upon it.

Queer Clocks.

One Le Roullat of Limoges, in France, seems to have been able to make clocks from any material, however unsuitable. One clock he fashioned entirely from old newspapers converted into pulp, another from large and small sticks held together by wires, a third from discarded tobacco cans, and so on. Some of his clocks are, however, triumphs of workmanship.

Has Seen Six Rulers.

Mrs. Hamilton, Townend, Kirkcudbright, who recently celebrated her 106th birthday, has lived in the reigns of age when George III. died, and since then George IV., William IV., Queen Victoria, Edward VII., and George V. have occupied the throne.

Power of Microscopes.

The best microscopes magnify about 16,000 times and make a tiny pile of flour look like a pile of stones.

A refrigerating dish for dining tables invented by an Ohioan has a hollow lid, sufficiently large to hold two handfuls of broken ice.

Daily Intelligencer.

All Alike.

The Young Liberals in England are revolting. They do not understand why a party which is agitating the country against the House of Lords should be appointing its partizans members of that body. To them it appears inconsistent. The truth is, these youngsters have not yet fully grasped the policy of what is called Liberalism. They will ere long learn that the word Liberal is a synonym for "profession" versus "principle."

A telegram from London, England, says the Young Liberals "do not like the list of honors, which have been conferred upon a number of Englishmen." "They are unable to understand, says the report, why a Liberal Government that is supposed to want to reform or to abolish the House of Lords should have been so lavish in the distribution of titles, including seven peerages. Some of the insurgents wanted to ask awkward questions about the appointments in the House of Commons, but they were induced to desist.

To find men who profess to hold Liberal opinions and at the same time use all their political, social and financial influence to get a title disgusts progressive young Liberals. One of them has threatened to publish a pamphlet telling the horrid secrets of how the party chest, as the campaign fund is called here, is kept fattened with money and how the money is obtained by the party whips.

"If he does he will not create much of a sensation unless he names names for the public have a shrewd notion of how it is that certain wealthy men get titles for themselves. A radical newspaper bluntly says:—

"There is no longer any convincing attempt to deny that the most of modern honors are sold for hard cash or that while a baronetcy rewards those who spend £50,000 or so on party, a peerage will sometimes cost as much as a quarter of a million."

"There is no longer any convincing policy in Canada. $10,000 Senatorships in Ontario and Quebec; $10,000 Judgeships in Manitoba and £50,000 Baronetcies in England, is a plank of 1910 Liberalism.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

Mrs. Scott-Raff Was Surprised at Gift of Greek Theatre.

The story of the inception of the scheme which resulted in the building of the Margaret Eton School of Literature and Expression is of decided interest, but has rarely been told even about the hearth of the beautiful studio of the school. Yet, it is no close secret, and is worth knowing. It began at Muskoka, at the summer home of the late Mr. Timothy Eaton, and the time was the late weeks in August, 1905. Mrs. Scott Raff, then director of the physical culture department in connection with Victoria College, was a guest in the house. She had long been discouraged at the inadequate opportunities that offered to give effect to the spirit of her teaching and the need of a genuine temple dedicated to the cultivation of the ideas of "sweetness and light."

One day she was approached by Mrs. Eaton, who questioned her, and pressed her for a reply:

"You are not happy," she said. "Why? Tell me why?"

"I am not happy," Mrs. Raff admitted, "because I want what I cannot have, a school."

"A school," exclaimed Mrs. Eaton, then, and added, "That is not so difficult. I'll ask father."

"Oh, but I want a school no one on earth will ever give me," said Mrs. Raff. "I want a school like the Greek Parthenon—nothing else will do; a school like the Greek Parthenon! No one will ever give me that."

But Mrs. Eaton was not so sure.

"I'll ask father," she repeated, confidently.

The following day in her morning stroll in the depths of the forest, Mrs. Raff was hailed by her host, who was sitting alone on a stump.

"Raff!" he called, using the name as his mode of showing comradeship. "Raff! Come here; I want you." And then in an encouraging voice: "Mother tells me that you want a school?"

Mrs. Raff's heart beat high.

"Yes, Mr. Eaton," she answered. "But I want the impossible: a school no one will ever give me. I want a school like the Greek Parthenon."

There was a space of silence between the two.

Then the kind, quiet voice proceeded: "If I give you such a school as you want, will you promise me to stay with it—always?"

Another silence ensued, the merchant prince watching the new young priestess of beauty as she wrestled with the phantom of the future. Then solemnly she replied: "I will stay."

Mr. Eaton became all business energy.

"You are leaving for Owen Sound to-morrow?"

"Yes."

"Go home by way of Toronto. See Chancellor Burwash and if he approves of your scheme, go ahead; choose you land, engage an architect, on his advice get your plans—you may have your school."

The following day saw Mrs. Raff exploring the neighborhood of Victoria College with the chancellor, who warmly endorsed the project. They decided on the present site of the school before their return. On the back of a used envelope on the journey from Muskoka Mrs. Raff had sketched her dream. It only remained for Mr. Meade to hear her ideas to give them form. On Mrs. Raff's insistence, the new school devoted to aesthetics was named for her patroness, Margaret Eaton, who still modestly disclaims any merit for the outcome of "only speaking to father."

A Shrewd Scottish Lawyer.

The Right Hon. Sir Robert Bannatyne Finley, who presented the Canadian "case" in the fisheries matter to the Arbitration Tribunal at The Hague, is considered one of the shrewdest practitioners at the British Bar. While not considered to be an eloquent orator, he has the art of presenting his arguments, not merely logically, but convincingly, and he has a mind of a strongly developed analytical type. He is a Scotsman by birth and education, and speaks with a distinct burr. He was intended for the medical profession, and in fact graduated in medicine at Edinburgh University, but shortly afterwards took up the study of law and was called to the Bar in 1867. His father, Dr. Wm. Finley, who was a distinguished medical practitioner in Edinburgh, was said to be very much disappointed when his son abandoned his own beloved profession for the law; but the son argued him into giving his consent to the change eventually, although he has admitted it was one of the most difficult cases he ever had to plead. Sir Robert, who is a Bencher of the Middle Temple, was M.P. for Inverness from 1885 to 1892, and again from 1895 to 1900. He was Solicitor-General from 1895 to 1900, and Attorney-General from 1900 to 1906. He was knighted in 1896 and created a G.C.M.G. in 1904.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Bishop of New Westminster.

Rev. A. U. De Pencier, who has been chosen Bishop of the Anglican diocese of New Westminster, B.C., is an Eastern Ontario man and only went West three years ago. The Bishop-elect was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Depencier, of Burritt's Rapids, Ontario. He was born in 1866 and received his early training in Kemptville High School, and afterwards attended Trinity College, Toronto. After graduating he was stationed at Navan on the Ottawa River, between Montreal and Ottawa; later was curate of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, rector at Uxbridge, curate of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, rector at Brandon, and more recently rector of St. Paul's Church, Vancouver.

His new diocese is an extensive one and his episcopal work will necessitate much traveling by trail and stream.

Only the Frings Occupied.

GIGANTIC AMAZON

It Is the Greatest as Well as the Strangest of Rivers.

ITS UPPER PART A MYSTERY.

Shrouded In Impenetrable Forests and Vine Growths Through Which a Gleam of Sunlight Never Shows—A Curious Woodland Tangle.

While the Amazon is the world's greatest river, if not in length at least in the volume of water which flows through it, it is the world's strangest river as well.

The few travelers and explorers who have journeyed up this water course to its many sources in the glaciers of the South American mountains tell stories which are almost incredible about the literal maze of streams which unite to form it, each stream having its birth in one of the great ice masses. Yet a few hundred miles below, where they merge and create the river, the temperature is such that it works its way through a perfect labyrinth of tropical vegetation.

Only the mariner can tell the place where the Amazon really has its mouth, because the opening it has made on the eastern coast of South America is so wide that it extends over 100 miles. A long distance before one comes to the mouth of the river, however, one is really sailing on the waters of the Amazon, because they force their way so far out into the ocean. They say that 300 miles out at sea off the mouth of the Amazon you can hoist a bucketful of fresh water out of the ocean from the deck of a ship, such is the quantity of its water that flows from that gigantic basin.

Long after you have entered the actual river and have its banks north and south of you if you are in midstream you will still be out of sight of land, such is the breadth of the vast channel. The river stretches far into the ocean and far up the country. Take a map of South America and look up a place called Iquitos. It lies four-fifths of the way across the continent from east to west. Yet from Iquitos there is a fortnightly service of ocean going steamers to Europe which descend some 3,000 miles of the river before they reach the sea.

It is not only one branch of the Amazon, but many, that are thus to be regarded as the same as ocean highways. The southern branches of the Amazon are broken by rapids along a line where a low continental shelf exists. Above these rapids, however, there is again deep water. Thus beyond the falls of the Madeira there are over 10,000 miles of navigable water on that river and its branches.

Not only Sir Martin Conday, but other travelers who have ventured along the upper river and its tributaries, say that here a curious woodland tangle exists. To the surface of the water the sun's rays seldom reach, and one may go many miles along waterways where it is well nigh as dark as night because the sky is almost completely shut out by the mass of vines which interlace the trees and are so thick with leaves. Deprived of the sunlight, all is dark and rank. The damp air is laden with unhealthful vapor. The surface of the water in places where the current is too sluggish to carry it away is covered with scum and weed.

It requires no little courage to explore these fastnesses, for a man really takes his life in his hands, so unhealthy are they. Occasionally, however, one can see the upper portion of the forest where there is a little crevice in its roof of vines. Above this is really a scene of life and beauty. Birds and butterflies and other gorgeous insects are flying from place to place; flowers of hundreds of hues and shapes are blooming from the plants attached to tree, branch and trunk. While below all may be lifeless and silent, above the height where the mass of vines overshadow the river nature has created a world of brightness and animation; but, as already stated, it is almost entirely shut out from the human eye.

To attempt to break through this canopy of vines which hide it from the lower world is almost impossible because the vines grow so thickly, but some naturalists have penetrated it and say that the forests really have two surfaces, the one above this artificial roof and the one below. That which is above is barred from human entrance. Its inhabitants are mostly birds and insects that are radiant with beauty unequaled in the world.

Whatever grows in the Amazon mud strives with desperate internecine struggle to reach this sky exposed surface and there blossoms. Beneath, where man can walk or float, all is dark. Only here and there a fitful ray of sunlight struggles through. Orchids blossom within this shadowy region.

You can see these bright creatures fitfully in the cavern below, but not in all their glory, as they must behold one another above. Sometimes as they flit about beneath they will chance to cross a sunbeam slanting through a hole in the vegetation; then for an instant they flash into view like an explosion of burning color. It is thus that the great butterflies are seen to the best effect. No one can imagine what a picture they produce in their native haunts as their wings flash and close and flash again in the sunlight as they fly.

No; this upper world of the Amazon forests has been closed to human beings and promises to remain a perpetual mystery unless with the aid of some aerial craft one may be able to visit it.—Chambers' Journal.

The German military authorities will use the services of 120 civilian motor cyclists in the army manoeuvres in September.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,2[illegible] square miles.

THREE YOUNG MAGNATES.

Youthful Business Men Who Are Now Millionaires.

Every little while there is some little incident occurring that goes to show how fast some of the younger generation of Canadians have jumped, by their own efforts, into the millionaire class.

The other day, for instance, when the big ocean liner Lusitania pulled into New York from England it had among its passengers three young Canadians who about five years ago very few people ever expected would be in the millionaire class for a great many years to come, and yet in that short space of time, in entirely different fields had accumulated an unusually large amount of wealth for a young country like Canada.

The three of them, who chummed quite a lot together on the way over, were Mr. C. B. Gordon, the young president of the Dominion Textile Co., which represents the merger of a number of the larger cotton concerns of Canada; Mr. W. M. Aitken, more generally known as the president of the Royal Securities Corporation because it is his pet concern, but in reality the wizard of Canadian promoters, who even before he had touched the thirty-year mark had perhaps more consolidations to his credit than any other Canadian capitalist; and Mr. Shirley Ogilvie, a director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., but more generally known as one of the four young men who jumped into prominence a few years ago, when after securing the control of the Canadian Rubber Co., they formed the big Canadian rubber consolidation, now included in the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co.

Even a hasty glance back shows at what a tremendous pace all three of them have come along, for it only seems the other day when Charlie Gordon was working almost day and night to put the Standard Shirt Co. on its feet and probably had never dreamt of such a thing as the consolidation of the principal cotton concerns of the country.

When the time came, however, for this consolidation the Montreal financiers who recognized the possibilities of it, right from the outset called in Mr. Gordon's advice because it was felt that from a practical standpoint he knew a great deal about the cotton trade of the country.

When finally the merger had been completed it was found that Gordon had relinquished his position in the Standard Shirt and was to fill the important post of vice-president and managing director of the big textile concern.

Naturally, of course, from a stock market standpoint, he got right in on the ground floor, and while he was going ahead making a success of the Textile Company he was all the time adding to the value of his big holdings in the company.

Then about a year ago, when Mr. David Yuile, the president of the company, passed away, the directors insisted on Mr. Gordon stepping into the presidency, notwithstanding the fact that in doing so he would easily be the youngest Canadian to occupy such a post in a big concern.

Of course Mr. Gordon has also been a shrewd business man in other ways, but there can be little doubt but that by far the greater proportion of his present large fortune was made out of the Textile securities.

Then while young Mr. Aitken has during the past year become one of the leading figures in financial circles, both in Montreal and Toronto, still before coming up to Montreal to reside from Halifax he had put through a large number of deals, more particularly in connection with public utilities and electrical power concerns.

"Patrick," Duke of Connaught.

A propos of the probable appointment of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to be Governor-General of Canada before very long, though not probably this year, some papers have credited the selection of the name "Patrick," as one of the many borne by His Royal Highness to the personal request of the Duke of Wellington, who acted as sponsor. As a matter of fact, Queen Victoria herself has explained that the suggestion came from a humble but patriotic daughter of Ireland. Her Majesty was out driving with two of her children when an old beggar wife hobbled across her path and cried with high-pitched fervor: "Oh, Queen dear! call the next one Patrick and all Ireland will die for ye!" In the royal family, and among his intimates, the Duke of Connaught is always called "Pat," and it is related by one who knows him very well that he can tell the good stories he has collected in his travels and campaigns, with a humor worthy of his Irish name.

A Dundas Militiaman.

The famous 77th Regiment has a new colonel, and his name is not Bertram, but Knowles.

The new colonel is, however, of the Bertram type. He was born in Flamboro Township in Wentworth County in 1862. Proceeding rapidly to a professional career, he has been a barrister in the town of Dundas since 1884. He has served on the School Board, and in the council, and was for two years mayor of the town.

His military service has been short. In 1899 he joined the 77th Regiment as captain of No. 1 Company. Exactly ten years later, he became Lieutenant-Colonel and Commanding Officer.

Wolfe Memorial.

Beckles Willson, secretary of the Wolfe Memorial Fund, which is being raised with the object of erecting a statue to the hero of Quebec in his birthplace, Westerham, England, is in the east in connection with the matter, having arrived from England. Mr. Willson has visited several Quebec sites linked with Wolfe's name, and has left for Montreal in the interests of the memorial fund, of which Lord Roberts is chairman.

Wealthy Farmers Seek Canada.

One hundred wealthy farmers from Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois arrived from St. Paul the other day. The same day they left by a special train for Scott and Mainwright, Sask.

A mummy found in Egypt and presented to the English Royal College of Surgeons in 1892 recently was decided by experts to be the oldest known, dating from about 3000 B. C.

CRICKET CAMP FOLLOWERS.

Men Who Fatten on the "Flannelled Fools."

It is impossible to be among the crowd at a great cricket match without being struck by the number of persons unofficially connected with the game who appear to be reaping a rich harvest out of it. Vendors of sweets sandwiches, and cheap literature are most frequently met with; but one well-dressed gentleman used to frequent Lord's with a huge bag crammed with field-glasses, which he let out at sixpence each for the game.

Craig, "the Surrey Poet," is said to have made as much by the sale of his tropical doggerel during the season as many a novelist does by his books; and a London artist found a way to popular notice in his young days by doing lightning caricatures of famous players in characteristic attitudes on the ground, and then putting them up for auction during the luncheon interval. More curious was an old soldier's device for earning money during the cricket season on one of the Midland grounds. To a considerable section of the crowd the scoring-board is invisible, and he therefore took up a post where he could view every detail of the game, which he announced in a loud voice to the crowd in return for any trifle they cared to drop into his hat on the conclusion of the game.

Other ruses are to take camp-stools, which are readily hired to stand upon by those forming the outer fringe at a big match; to bowl to gentlemen cricketers at the nets, the latter often placing coins on the stumps, to go to the bowler clever enough to beat the bat; to obtain and sell to enthusiasts the autographs of famous players; and to beg for the return passes of gentlemen leaving early in the day, and dispose of them to later arrivals.

A shrewd Yorkshireman used to make money on the northern grounds by exhibiting a very clever parrot, that not only knew the names of the principal players, but would cry, at appropriate times: "Well fielded, sir!" "Bang it over the grand stand!" and "Bowl the beggar out!" A Lancashire enthusiast had a pet canary, whose prophecies as to the number of runs a batsman would make—the bird picking numbered cards out of a rack with its bill—were so frequently near the mark that its owner made a good deal by means of bets and little exhibitions.

The Woolsack of Cricket.

The Earl of Londesborough, who has just been elected to the presidency of the Marylebone Cricket Club—a post which may be described as the Woolsack of Cricket—succeeds a famous line of aristocratic sportsmen. His lordship is patron of the Scarborough Cricket Week, and is Hereditary High Admiral of the Yorkshire Coast. At Blankney, his Lincolnshire seat, a large ship of sugar is annually served to keep this quaint office in remembrance. Lord Londesborough is rightly described as "an all-round man." Besides being captain of his own fire-brigade, he is a good judge of horses, a distinguished amateur actor, fond of cricket and football, and always ready to lend his patronage in the interests of sport. It was whilst the guest of Lord Londesborough's father that the late King, then Prince of Wales, was attacked by typhoid fever in 1871.

Melodramatic Suicide.

Pericles Ianopoulos, a Greek poet, compared by Mme. Leblanc-Maeterlinck to Hermes for his personal beauty, has committed suicide in melodramatic fashion at Athens.

At a banquet to which he had summoned all his friends he showed them a trunkful of manuscripts that were to be destroyed. "To-morrow I am going on a journey," he said, as they left him. The next morning each of them received by post an exquisite statuette of a horse.

At the same time Ianopoulos rode out of the city to Mount Aegaleos, gathered a garland of flowers, and then made a dash for the sea. At the time a violent storm was raging. Ianopoulos, driving his spurs into the horse's flanks, urged the maddened beast into the foaming waters of the bay, and shot himself through the heart.

Curiosities In Bookbinding.

Extravagance in binding has frequently furnished an opening for the display of fantastic tricks and fads. In an old bookseller's catalogue was seen an advertisement of a Latin copy of Apulein's "Golden Ass," bound in the skin of a Jerusalem ass, the leather being still unhaired. A book by Jeffery Hudson, the noted dwarf, was bound in the silk waistcoat of Charles I., the dwarf's patron saint. A de luxe edition of Fox's historical works, specially fitted up for Edwards, the philosopher, was bound throughout in foxskin, forty-seven pelts of these little animals being required to complete the job. O'Connell, who so delighted in the possession of a first edition of Bacon's works, had the entire set rebound again in pigskin and always lovingly referred to them as his "Baconrind" books.

A Chance to Dry.

Lord Dufferin always said that the happiest years of his long official life were those spent in Calcutta. He reveled in the sunshine. A friend one day expostulated with him for his reckless exposure of himself to the weather. "Well, you see," said the viceroy, "they have always sent me to cold places. They sent me as viceroy to Canada, where one must live a third of the year in buffalo furs. They sent me to St. Petersburg, where one has to hibernate like a bear. So when they ordered me to India I rubbed my hands and said to myself, 'Now I can hang myself up to dry.'"

The Home of Musical Fish.

Lake Batticaloa, Ceylon, has the probably unique distinction of being the home of musical fish. The sounds emitted by these are said to be as sweet and melodious as those which would be produced by a series of aeolian harps. Crossing the lake in a boat one can plainly distinguish the pleasant sounds. If an oar is dipped in the water the melody becomes louder and more distinct.

The French military authorities in Africa are bending every effort to increase the number of a species of camel which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of commerce.

A DERBY JOKE.

Officers In Coster Rig Drive Four-In-Hand Barrow.

Quite a large number of people who seldom attend any other race meeting make it a rule never to miss a Derby, and one of their principal delights is the journey down the road. Given fine weather—and this year they were in luck's way in this direction—the Epsom road has many charms at this time of the year, and every description of vehicle is to be seen wending its way to the at ordinary times sleepy town of Epsom, which twice a year awakens from its lethargy and is for a few days all bustle and excitement. Motors and taxis of every description, smart four-in-hands, the sprightly quick-trotting horses of prosperous tradesmen, wagonettes, and the coster in his humble donkey barrow—all proceeded in one direction, and their occupants had all one object in view. They were out for enjoyment, and intended to make the most of their day. Quite the most picturesque turn-out this year left the neighborhood of Victoria at nine o'clock. People in the vicinity of the Grosvenor Hotel were astonished to see drawn up at the portico an ordinary costermonger's barrow capable of seating four persons, and in the shafts were a grey and a brown donkey. The shafts had been lengthened by the addition of an iron bar, to which were hitched the leaders, two more grey donkeys, making four in all. It was a very smart coster turnout, real four-in-hand harness, and plenty of flowers. Whilst the crowd stood gaping at the sight two smart-looking costers emerged from the hotel, peak caps over the eyes, jerseys, pearlies, blue chins, and slouching gait, and all. They were the real thing, and the crowd laughed and cheered as they drove off along Victoria street and over Westminster Bridge. Then the secret came out. It was a huge Derby Day joke. Two subalterns in a famous cavalry regiment had been challenged by their brother officers, and the tempting offer of 20 to 1 to drive a four-in-hand coster's barrow from London to Epsom, the drivers to be arrayed in coster's attire. The challenge was accepted, and as everything in the way of dress had to be technically correct, a visit was paid to a well-known theatrical costumier, who certainly had succeeded in effecting his part uncommonly well. The bet stipulated that the party should drive all the way, and pull up on some prominent position on the Derby course.

Unique Postage Stamps.

Reference has frequently been made to the King's ardor as a stamp-collector, and now the appointment of Earl Carrington as Lord Great Chamberlain recalls the fact, almost unique, that Lord Carrington's head appears on a postage-stamp. Records contain only one other instance, and that is the case—a classic among collectors—of O'Connel, the governor of New Brunswick. He was not what would be termed, even in flattery, an Adonis, but he placed his effigy upon a postage stamp. The result was disastrous to O'Connel. The stamps were immediately recalled and so was the governor. To-day, however, O'Connel is popular with collectors, for the stamp is of great rarity. Keen philatelists are always on the look-out for the Mafeking siege stamps, which bear the head of Major Baden-Powell. They were only issued to meet an emergency, but the Carrington stamp is Queensland's compliment to a popular governor.

Comet's Evil Influence.

An authentic record of the bad luck supposed to be brought about by the comet is contained in the old parish register of Alstonfield, Staffordshire, England, in which is a notice concerning a comet which was visible during the seventeenth century. The notice runs as follows:

"A very strange and fiery Meteor, in form like a Sword, appeared northwest by west in December, 1680, and continued about six weeks, after which ensued a tedious and long drought, which began April the 10th, 1681, and continued till June the 20th of the same year, which procured many pestilentious disease, as agues, strong fleavours, small-pox, of which many died in ye Countrey, chifely in great cities and towns corporate."

The Careful Caddie.

Miss Nancy Price, the popular English actress, is credited with the following story of the careful caddie. She was playing golf some time ago, on links where there was a caddie of about twenty-two years of age, who always wore a cap with large flaps which came down over his ears, as he was a victim to chapped ears in cold weather. One bitter day in mid-winter Miss Price saw him without the ear-flaps down, and asked him if his ears were better. "They're not better. They're as bad as ever they were. I've never had my ear-flaps down since the accident." "What accident?" queried Miss Price. "Well, you see, miss, a gent arst me once if I'd 'ave a drink, and I didn't 'ear 'im!"

A Fine Bridge Hand.

An extraordinary hand at bridge is reported by Miss Minnie Anray Jones, of Clifton, Eng. At a final meeting of a local bridge club the declaration was left, and dummy declared hearts with thirteen. The cards were not new, and had been made and cut, but had not been used, as the rubber had only just begun, this being the second deal. There were eight players in the room to witness. The other three hands were not remarkable, a suit of six diamonds, headed by ace, knave, being the only long suit.

What Could She Mean?

"Your little birdie has been very, very ill," she wrote to the young man. "It is some sort of nervous trouble, and the doctors said I must have perfect rest and quiet and that I must think of nothing. And all the time, dear Gussy, I thought constantly of you."

The young man read it over, and then read it through very slowly, and put it in his pocket, and went out under the silent stars, and kept thinking, and thinking, and thinking.

So perfect an insulator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap of an inch.

If Canada's wheat crop last year had been shipped by rail, each car holding 15 tons, it would have made a continuous train 1365 miles long.

COSTLY SIGHT-SEEING.

Big Fees Paid by Sightseers When Pageants Are Under Way.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and the death of a monarch puts money into the pockets of thousands. Those who profit most largely by such an event are the seat mongers on the line of the funeral procession.

The value put upon seats is always rising. When Edward I. became king a farthing was charged for a seat to see the coronation procession. On the accession of Richard II. the price rose to 1d.; and from Henry V.'s coronation to Henry VII.'s it was 2d. By the time Charles II. was crowned it had gone up to 2s. 6d.; while exactly double as much (5s.) was paid at the coronation of William III. Then the value of seats on such occasions appreciated enormously. To see the procession when George III. was crowned half a guinea was paid; and sightseers on George IV.'s day of days cheerfully paid five and in some cases ten guineas. This was considered the climax, but the value put on seats in later days has been much greater.

Why the enormous rise? The main reason, so far as our own times are concerned, is that wealthy Indians, Americans, and other foreign visitors have been willing to pay anything for a seat to witness a state pageant. Hence the value has been inflated.

The present high scale was set at Queen Victoria's Jubilee, when large sums were paid for rooms from the windows of which the procession could be seen. Few rooms, however small, could be hired for less than 10 guineas, and for many 150 guineas was demanded and paid. A large building on the route, being empty, was secured for the day by an enterprising individual for 1,000 guineas, and he had no reason to repent his outlay.

On the occasion of Queen Victoria's funeral the Jubilee rate for seats was confirmed. In St. James' street £10 had to be paid for a single chair, while seats which a few days before the procession were offered for 3 guineas afterwards fetched 5 guineas. A window which let when Lord Roberts came home for £210 found a hirer at £400 on the occasion of the Queen's funeral. As it will hold only fifty people at the utmost, the hirer must have charged pretty heavily for every seat in it. Again, some rooms in Piccadilly let for as much as 200 guineas.

High as these figures are, however, they were surpassed in several instances. The most remarkable "deal" in connection with the funeral was that of a gentleman who took a mansion near the Marble Arch for the day for the amazing sum of £1,500!

At Edward VII.'s coronation, and again at the royal progress, the price of seats was equally high. In South London some landlords evicted tenants that they might obtain windows for the function, and received more for a single day's occupancy of a part of their premises than they get in normal circumstances for the use of the whole for a year. Others, however, let their tenants make as much as possible on the occasion, with the result that many strenuous workers made handsome sums by letting their humble homes to sightseers.

Perhaps the highest price ever paid for a window was £1,000 secured by a landlord near the Marble Arch to enable some Americans to view the funeral procession of the King on its way to Paddington.

Queen-Mother's Relations.

No royal lady of any time has been so intimately related to such a large number of kings and queens as the Queen-Mother of Great Britain, who has been the recipient of world-wide sympathy in her great grief and sorrow. Her father and mother were king and queen, her husband was a king, her mother-in-law was the late Queen Victoria, her son is now King of Great Britain, her daughter is Queen of Norway, a sister was for some years Czarina of Russia and is now Dowager Empress, one brother is King of Denmark, another brother King of the Hellenes, one of her nephews is Czar of Russia, and another nephew, who is also her son-in-law, is King of Norway, while a third and fourth are destined to be King of Denmark and King of the Hellenes respectively.

"Charlie" Carrington.

Earl Carrington, who was recently appointed Lord Great Chamberlain of England by King George, is one of the largest landowners in England. The late King Edward and "Charlie" Carrington, as he is popularly known to his intimates, grew up together in close intimacy. For five years he was governor of New South Wales, where he studied agriculture. Lord Carrington returned home a convinced and enthusiastic land-reformer. He believes in getting men back to the land, and has established no fewer than 5,000 small holdings on his estates. The new Lord Great Chamberlain has a wide reputation as an excellent administrator.

Toy Spaniel an Old Breed.

The English toy spaniel is undoubtedly one of the oldest and most popular breeds of pet dogs known. As far back as the days of Charles the Martyr this breed was much prized by the ladies of the court. In the narrative of the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots, indorsed in Lord Burghley's hand and forwarded to the court, it was recorded that one of the executioners found her little pet (a spaniel of practically the same type as those afterward known in the reign of Charles II.), which had crept under the folds of her garments to be near her and which would not be taken away.

The Great Cod Banks.

There is just one other great cod bank in the world besides those off Newfoundland. It lies off Cape Agulhas, which is the southern tip of Africa and south of the Cape of Good Hope. The Agulhas plateau is said to be almost a duplicate in size and richness of the north cod banks. But this is too far off, so there is little promise of its appeasing the hungry appetite of the world for cod.

To make it possible to reach the bottom of a trunk without stooping over an Illinois man has patented a trunk with metal legs which slide in guideways on the corners to raise it.

BURIED PLUNDER.

Recovered by Thieves After Serving Out Their Jail Terms.

It is well known to the police that there are a number of ex-convicts who are literally rolling in riches and driving about London and the provinces to-day in their own motor-cars and carriages, said a detective to the writer the other day. The majority of these men are old embezzlers, and there seems to be little doubt that they are able to live well and keep going lavishly furnished residences because the money they stole was hidden by them before being arrested and sent to prison.

There are thousands of pounds' worth of valuable property looted by thieves from various sources that lies buried in odd corners of Britain and will probably only be recovered by the men themselves on their release. Cases are constantly occurring where an embezzler after running off with a large sum in gold refuses to divulge the hiding place of his ill-gotten gains. He is sent to prison, and the loot remains unrecovered. In nine cases out of ten the embezzler, finding arrest imminent, buries his stolen property and digs it up again when he comes out of prison.

A man who was for many years an inmate of one of our prisons is now living in affluence in a town up north. He was imprisoned for embezzling $350,000 from his employers, and he declared at the trial that he had spent every penny of it. For some time after his release from jail he lived in a cheap lodging house at Hoxton, and then one day he declared that he had come into a fortune, a brother in Australia having died and left him some thousands. As a matter of fact, although the police had no proof, he had recovered the money which he had embezzled years before.

A man of considerable means now living in the United States served a term of imprisonment for forgery, having obtained $75,000 by means of false checks. Not a penny of the money was recovered by the police. During the forced confinement of the thief his wife, in pursuance of a previously agreed plan, went out to service in a gentleman's family. As soon as the husband was liberated, however, his wife resigned her position, and the pair sailed immediately for the colonies. It ultimately came to light that the money which had been stolen by means of the forged checks had been buried under the flooring in a Soho house.

Some fifteen years ago a Hindu merchant who had come to London to make purchases of gems was robbed of many thousands of pounds. The thieves carried their ill-gotten wealth to a cheap tenement in Whitechapel; but, finding the police hot on their track, they carried the loot one dark night to a remote spot on the Essex marshes and secretly buried it. They then disappeared and have not been seen since. It is believed that the money remains to this day where it was buried—London Tit-Bits.

Thousands Would Do the Same.

A pretty story concerning Mr. W. H. Lever, of Sunlight soap fame, is going the rounds. At an outing of the children of Port Sunlight two little girls invited Mr. Lever to go with them on the switchback railway. Like a jovial schoolboy he consented. As they were going along one little girl said, "I've been in one of these before at New Brighton. I've got a rich aunt there." "Oh, indeed!" said Mr. Lever. "Yes," went on the little one, "she has got £200 saved up." "But you've got more than that, haven't you, Mr. Lever?" inquired the other child. "Well, you know," replied Mr. Lever, seriously, "I keep spending my money, and you can't have money if you spend it, can you?" "And are you very poor now?" asked the first tiny girl, anxiously. "Well," said Mr. Lever, "I keep spending, and whatever shall I do when all my money is gone?" Almost simultaneously his small companions shouted, "Come and live with us!" "I have received a large number of invitations in my lifetime," says Mr. Lever, "but none so dear and so sweet to me as that."

A Daring Noblewoman.

Lady Ernestine Hunt, the eldest daughter of the Marquis of Ailesbury, is the first woman to receive a commission as lieutenant in the medical branch of the territorial division of the British army. Lady Hunt is an unusual woman. She was one of the half dozen adventurous women who took part in the Jameson raid in South Africa in 1896, in connection with the ambulance department. For some years now she has divided her time between a little place she has in Ireland and her ranch in Canada. At the latter place she is an extensive breeder of horses, which are sold in London and Dublin at very remunerative prices, thus making her ranching adventure an exceedingly profitable one.

The King's Right-Hand Man.

Lord Knollys, who is to be private secretary to George V., acted in a similar capacity to the late King for nearly forty years. His lordship is the only man who can approach His Majesty at all hours and under any circumstances. Lord Knollys delights in relating an amusing malapropism in which he figured recently. A gentleman-in-waiting, who was anxious to obtain some favor from the King, but was too nervous to interview His Majesty, sought the assistance of Lord Knollys. "I do not like to speak to the King," said the applicant, "because he might not care to listen to me. It would be a different thing, though, if it were yourself, Knollys, for, of course, there is nothing of the 'gentleman' about you."

An Opalized Snake.

What is supposed to be an opalized snake has been discovered by a prospector at White Cliffs opal fields, South Australia, from whom it has been secured by an Adelaide resident, named S. Saunders. On a piece of ironstone, dark brown in color, and therefore making an excellent background to show off the precious stone, was embedded the form of a small snake or lizard of pure opal. The head and eyes are to be plainly seen. Even the scales of the back can be discerned.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

What Traveler Saw Abroad.

"So you think the Bluffers are faking about their extended European tour?"

"I should say so. They said there were so many Americans in Venice that many had to walk in the middle of the street."

"Well?"

WHEN THE TROOPSHIP SAILS.

Thomas A.'s Farewell When He Goes on Foreign Duty.

A dull morning, a wet morning, and dirty. The harbor shows grey and ugly in the half light. That huge outline heaving out yonder on the slowly rising rollers seems deserted.

But fussy tugs haul her great shape round, busy boats come and go in the greyness. A white jet of steam shoots up, trails away; black figures can be seen working furiously amidst a rattle of chains and blocks.

A clatter of hoofs, and then a dozen troopers rattle up with half a hundred horses: a confused mass, struggling, cursing, stamping, they crowd the long quayside. Then they case up; somehow they look long at the miserable scene — the drifting mist, the bare, grey outlines.

"It's a dismal hole," says one khaki-clad figure; "but it's a last look at the old country!"

Then the waiting crowd thickens. A faint echo of martial music, growing stronger—a tramp of feet—a hoarse cheer. Someone roars, "Here they come!"

And here they do come! Column after column, with swinging step, heads erect, a huge drummer's arms whirling fearfully, pipers playing furiously at fear of being out-rivalled.

See that old man marching so proudly, eyes lit up, lips tight pressed? He's one of the regiment, one of the old brigade, living over the glorious past again.

"That was fifty years ago!" he murmurs sadly. But he grips a lad's hand—his "boy"—holds up his head, and marches with the best.

And other hands are being held this dark morning. Here one tanned private sadly eyes the white face at his side. She's only a shop-girl—a slim, little, shabby figure—but her eyes are moist as she squeezes his hand tightly, and trudges silently, uncomplainingly, in the rowdy rabble and sludge, just to be at his side. They don't say anything. There's nothing to say. He doesn't ask her to wait, doesn't swear his love; but he gazes fiercely ahead, and curses fate.

Then a shrill bugle-call. Men break rank, swarm up the gangways; the crowd surges forward, privileged friends crush aboard.

Here, under a sheltering funnel, is the last farewell—a tender parting, amidst shrill whistles, ringing bells, hoarse voices.

You hear a faint, "You'll wait, lass? You mean it? Promise!" see a pale face, blue eyes, looking up pitifully. A long, comforting arm goes round a slim waist, and—— Well, it's getting very dark in that corner. We'd better leave that picture.

Now a loud clang, clang, and a hustle of seamen—men who gaze on such weaknesses scornfully. They leave the missus at all seasons. They've just left her now—comforting thought: gone back to get the lodger his tea! But "Tommy" is going to a strange clime, and as a hoarse roar of "All ashore! All ashore!" swells up, a silent officer wonders how many will return to these dull-grey shores, how many will see that white-haired father, that sadly weeping mother, who would always die cheerfully for her weakest—the black sheep.

But he's 'listed now; he's resolved to do well—to turn over a new leaf.

A roar of haste, a shrill, warning whistle, and the crowd is fairly heaved over the side. Someone's promising to write every week. Someone's comforting: "Don't take on, mother! Come, I'm not blubbering!"

And as the screw fast churns the water there's a waving, a cheering, from the lessening crowd; then the sea mist floats across; the picture fades—is gone.

Valient Father, Valient Son.

A valiant son of a valiant father was Captain Claude de Crespigny, whose tragic death was recently recorded. His father, Sir Claude de Crespigny, has crossed the North Sea in a balloon, and is the only white man who has successfully swum the first Nile cataract. He has escaped from the coils of a python, dived to amuse a few friends among the sharks at Bermuda, and enlisted as a scout during the Boer War because red tape threatened to keep him in England waiting for a billet until, as he put it, "all the fun was over"; three of his sons also being at the front at the time. One might search the world over to find an individual more fond of sport and adventure. In swimming, shooting, running, riding, and rowing he excels, and his son was equally enthusiastic as a sportsman and an athlete. The latter showed great heroism when out with the 2nd Life Guards during the Boer War.

Tom Mann, Labor Champion.

It was the great dock strike of 1888 which brought into prominence Mr. Tom Mann, who has returned to England after nine years in Australia. He threw himself into the work of organization with such energy and enthusiasm that, on the day of victory, he was elected president of the Dockers' Union. As a boy he worked in the coal-pits, getting the merest smattering of education. Later he entered an engineering workshop, where he learned his trade thoroughly, and in due course agitated for the betterment of labor conditions.

The Merry Boarders.

"Let's see," observed the smart boarder, seating himself at table, "how is it the proverb runs"—

"You refer to the saying that one man's meat is another man's hash?" put in one.

"Or," said another, "'Don't cry over skimmed milk?'"

"Or possibly," said a third, "'In butter there is strength?'"

"No," returned the smart boarder; "the particular proverb I had in mind is, 'None but the brave can face the fare'."

Madeira Island Roads.

In the whole of the Madeira islands there are no wheeled vehicles, for the roads are too rough and mountainous. There are a few heavy sledges drawn by bullocks, but the favorite modes of locomotion are hammocks slung on poles and borne by natives and basket sledges. The latter are used for descending the mountains and are skillfully guided by a runner behind.

Russia's Greatest Dancer.

So, by general consent, Mlle. Anna Pavlova, whose wonderful dancing at the Palace Theatre in London has aroused such enthusiasm, has been termed. Mlle. Pavlova, in her infancy, decided to become a dancer. She was taken by her mother to see a ballet. The dancers fascinated her, and she exclaimed, enthusiastically, "Oh, mother, that's what I want to do. I want to be a dancer, too. I must dance. I'll never do anything else when I grow up." And before she was ten she entered the Imperial School of Dancing in St. Petersburg, and studied under M. Petitpas, who danced with Taglioni and the great dancers of the past. And when the curtain fell after her debut the old dancer, who is now ninety-two years of age, put his hand on her head and said, "My child, you are the only woman fit to dance in Taglioni's shoes," so impressed was he with her performance.

Masonic Grand Lodge Opened This Morning.

IN DUE AND ANCIENT FORM THE BRETHREN MET — CIVIC ADDRESSES PRESENTED — GRAND MASTER MacWATT'S ADDRESS A PUNGENT AND INTERESTING UTTERANCE — BETWEEN 500 AND 600 DELEGATES IN ATTENDANCE, BUT THE G. T. R. STRIKE PREVENTED AT LEAST 300 MORE FROM COMING — TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS — FINANCIAL AFFAIRS AND THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE ORDER.

This was free Masonry's big day in Belleville.

From north, south, east and west, the Craftsmen came to meet in the 55th Annual Communication of Grand Lodge.

About 9.30 this morning you couldn't have thrown a brick around any of the principal street corners without hitting a delegate. Blue and yellow badges were as numerous as flags, at present, on our main aisle.

And a handsome, prosperous looking lot the Craftsmen certainly were.

Too bad there weren't more of them. A gentleman in touch with conditions told The Intelligencer that the G. T. R. strike had prevented at least 300 from coming. However, some were expected at noon, which would, it was thought, bring the total up to abou 700, which is not so bad, veteran members say, considering that this is an "off year," there being none of the principal officers to be elected.

The principal event of to-day's session was the Grand Master's address, given by His Honor, Judge MacWatt of Sarnia, Grand Master who presided over the Grand Lodge's deliberations The consensus of opinion among those who heard it was that a more timely, pungent, interesting, and at times caustic utterance had never fallen on the ears of Masonic Grand Lodge delegates.

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

At 10 a.m., and, after the beautiful ritual, a civic address of welcome on behalf of the Council and city, was read by His Worship Mayor Marsh, who gracefully expressed Belleville's gratification at the honor conferred on this city by having within her gates such distinguished visitors.

He was accompanied by City Clerk Mikel, K. C.

An address of welcome, on behalf of local Masons, was next read by Mr. Arthur McGinnis.

THE GRAND MASTER'S ADDRESS.

Grand Master MacWatt then delivered his annual address, of which the following is a summary:

Harmony had prevailed, and relations with sister Grand Lodges had been free from disturbance. The revenue to May 31, 1910, was $41,207.39, an increase of $3,760.79 over the previous year. The expenditure for ordinary purposes was $15,186.53, leaving a surplus of $26,020.86, as against last year's surplus of $20,415.27. Grants for benevolence from the ordinary fund were $21,956.30 in 1908; $24,362 in 1909, and $24,124 in 1910. The grants for benevolence from interest received from moneys paid in towards the semi-centennial fund were $1,210 in 1908; $2010 in 1909, and $2552.34 in 1910. The total grants for benevolence for year just closed were $26,631.34. Lodges have paid into the semi-centennial fund during the year ended 31st May, 1910, $18,263.58, an increase over the former year of $10605.97. During June, 1910, there was paid in an additional sum of $4,256.02; capital sum at this date $72,376.70, leaving $27,623.30 still payable by lodges.

The membership on May 31, 1909, was 43,900, on same date this year it was 46,000; increase for year, 2100.

There are 413 lodges on the roll.

On May 31, 1904, 387 lodges were liable to contribute to the semi-centennial fund, and up to May 31, 1909, only 60 had paid their quota in full. Last year 88 lodges were added to this list, so that on May 31 last 148 lodges had paid in full, and 239 have yet to pay. At present only 37 lodges have not contributed at all. A graceful tribute to the memory of King Edward was paid, and the Grand Master detailed the means he had taken, in the name of the Grand Lodge, to honor the memory of the departed monarch. The decease of the late Col. A. A. Stevenson, of Montreal, was also referred to in fitting terms.

The Grand Master had made 75 official visits during the year, travelling 12,840 miles, had laid two corner stones, one of the new hall of Mount Olivet lodge, No. 300, Thorndale, and the other of St. John's Episcopal church at St. Thomas. As Grand Lodge is getting very large and unwieldy, the Grand Master recommended that consideration be given to reducing the membership. He also recommended that, in case, the accommodation for members of Grand Lodge appear to be inadequate the Grand Master be given power to change the place of meeting. He had been informed that of the 800 or 1000 members expected to be present at this Grand Lodge, only about 400 could be accommodated, apart from private houses.

The Grand Lodge now has $114,000 loaned in investments, on which it gets from 4 1-2 to 5 per cent.

Commissions and trials during the past year were touched upon, and the Grand Master said he was astonished to find that a very large number of lodges had never been dedicated. Several matters of discipline were touched upon.

Two dispensations for new lodges had been granted, namely, University, Toronto, and King George V., Coboconk. Four applications had been refused.

Good work had been done during the past year by the District Deputy Grand Masters. The Benevolent fund had been well looked after by Past Grand Master Harding. In 1909 Grand Lodge paid for benevolence $25,362, nearly $4000 more than the surplus, and since 1904 there had been an increase of nearly 100 per cent. in benevolence. If this state of affairs continued for five years more a yearly per capita tax would be necessary.

Four lodges had been burned out during the year, namely, Norwood lodge, No. 223, Norwood; St. John's lodge, No. 63, Carleton Place; Colborne lodge, No. 91, Colborne, and Mississippi lodge No. 147, Almonte.

Undue interference with the ballot had been going on, and was sternly condemned.

Discussing lodge banquets, the Grand Master advised that they close early, and said, "I have had to put up, as many others had, with brethren proposing toasts during the year, and taking from half an hour to an hour in doing so, when three minutes would have been ample.

The work of the Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer during the past year was highly commended.

FINANCIAL REPORTS

The Grand Treasurer's report shows, for year ending May 31, 1910, ordinary receipts, revenue on general account, $41,207.39; ordinary expenditure, $15,186.53; grants for benevolence, $21,124. Total expenditure, $39,310.53. Assets of Grand Lodge 31st May, 1910, $114,139.50, of which amount $109,883.31 is invested in municipal and other securities.

In addition to the above receipts, the receipts for the Semi-Centennial fund, instituted to supplement the ordinary benevolent grants, were $20,948.22, of which $18,263.58 was contributed by the lodges. From the income of this fund $2650 was paid out in supplementary benevolent grants during the year The fund now amounts to $69,895.39. Later receipts have increased this sum to $73,800. genial fram if mind.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

A pleasing feature of this morning's session was the reception by Grand Lodge of M. W. Bro. Cameron Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and M. W. Bro. Will H. Whyte, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. Both gentlemen were received with full Masonic honors.

Mr. Arthur McGinnis, who read the Masonic address of welcome, was accompanied by the Masters of the three city lodges, as follows: Bro. Wm. McGie, W. M. Moira lodge No 11; Bro. C. D. Dyke, W. M, the Belleville lodge, No. 23; Bro. A. R. Walker, W. M., Eureka lodge, No. 283.

The Grand Master's replies to the different addresses were brief and graceful. It was evident that Belleville's welcome touched him deeply

A striking feature of the morning session was the welcome accorded to representatives of foreign Grand Lodges, who were in attendance at this Grand Lodge.

The business this afternoon will be the reception of reports, which will be referred and considered to-morrow.

A bunch of Masonic delegates from London, who came from Toronto on the steamer Belleville, went up Bridge st. about 11 a.m. They made the welkin ring with their jovial cheers.

The Grand Lodge officers and the members of the Board of General Purposes were last evening entertained by Rt. Wor. Bro. S. S. Lazier, at his residence, Victoria Avenue

"Valenta", the musical Italian, simply delighted "Palace" patrons last night. He's a wonder and no mistake. His one number from "Il Travatore" on the accordion was worth five times price of admission. People said so today who heard him last night and we agree with them. O. B. R. Notes.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

Dear Sir,—Beautiful for situation, the joy of our hearts, rendered more irresistably lovely than ever before in her history, in this renewal of her youth and her warm welcome to her returning sons and daughters, it seems strange, that notwithstanding all efforts made, Belleville cannot be made still more attractive by having a "Sons of England" and a "Canadian float" in our procession.

With characteristic energy, and enthusiasm, the loyal sons of Scotland, and of the "gem of the sea" dear old Ireland, are going to contribute two of the most beautiful floats, which have ever appeared in Belleville for the procession. Why not complete a characteristic national picture, by the addition of the two floats above suggested?

A little self denial, a little well placed energy, and the charming result will be achieved.

I am yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

GREATNESS OF CANADA.

What Voltaire's "Few Acres of Snow" Now Amount To.

A century and a half ago the cleverest man in Europe made merry over the fighting that was then going on between the troops of Louis XV. and George II. for the possession of "a few acres of snow somewhere in the region of Canada." If Canada meant nothing more than that to one whose extraordinary mental attainments earned him world-wide fame as the "sage of Ferney," then what sort of ideas must less instructed contemporaries have had on the subject? asks Collier's Weekly. Although no schoolboy would now say such a thing as Voltaire did, certainly a good many of us living south of Winnipeg even to-day do not fully realize the possibilities of those "few acres of snow," which embraces an area greater than that of the United States.

Dominion day may stimulate inquiry. It falls on July 1. The Canadians then, one and all, from Halifax to Vancouver, shut up their shops and schools and offices and factories to celebrate the anniversary of the establishment of the Dominion of Canada. This was first proclaimed by the British North America act, May 22, 1867, whereupon the confederation of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick took place, the new provinces of Manitoba, British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta being created within four decades following.

As at present constituted, the whole Dominion, comprising the aforementioned nine provinces and the northern and northwestern territories, forms a total land area of approximately 3,620,000 square miles. The census of 1911 is likely to record at least 8,000,000 of population. In 1919 the deposits in Canada's banks amounted to $70,000,000 and the banking assets to a billion. In the same year the Dominion's imports and exports added up to the value of $700,000,000—a far larger sum per capita than the United States own combined imports and exports. Of the Canadian exports United States purchased $113,000,000 worth, thus being the Dominion's second-best customer, Great Britain taking about a fifth more.

Kept Their Appointment.

Appointments are kept in strange ways, but seldom more weirdly than one which was fulfilled by two women a short time ago in Norway cemetery, near Toronto, where it had been made a few days previously.

Mrs. Ella Margaret Mace, 20 Harcourt street, and Mrs. Annie E. Saunders, 84 Winnifred avenue, Toronto, had been warm friends for several years. They had not seen each other for a considerable time, when purely by accident they met in the Norway cemetery in the middle of May. They were laying flowers upon the graves of departed friends, and when leaving the cemetery they met. After a casual conversation the women made appointment to meet on Monday, May 30, at the home of Mrs. Mace. They then came to the city and parted.

Each intended to keep her appointment, but, within a few days, each fell ill and the casual engagement was forgotten under the stress of a losing fight for life. Both the women died during the week preceding the date of their appointment, but chance, coincidence or whatever it is that has charge of such matters, seemed not to to have forgotten, for, purely by accident, on Monday, May 30, the day set for the meeting of these two women, two funeral processions wound up to the gates of the little cemetery and drew up beside newly dug graves. In the caskets were the remains of these two women who had lightly agreed to meet upon just that day to carry out some trivial matter of social intercourse.

So it came about that on just the day set by them in life, these two met in death.

Yellow Peril Talk.

John Chinaman is squinting through his slanting, olive eyes at Canada more eagerly than ever before—witnesses the Customs Department at Victoria, B.C. Yellow peril talk threatens to become rampant again. Dozens of the pig-tailed celestials are filing into the coast province. Every liner from dark Asia has its complement of yellow men; Japanese ships are doing good business shipping Chinamen to Seattle, whence the prospective laundrymen and butlers of the predatory rich take a local boat to Vancouver. Why the sudden influx? Transportation men explain that it is all a question of the capitation tax. Chinese imigrants pay now five hundred dollars each for the privilege of Canadian residence. A rumor is reported to have got abroad in Hong Kong that the immigration authorities of the Dominion contemplate doubling the five hundred dollar tax. Of course, such an intimation would tend to wake up any inhabitant of the "Land that Sleeps" who might have a hazy dream some time of washing clothes in the western hustle. But is the rumor true?—very possibly enterprising fiction on the part of the transportation agents.—Canadian Courier.

Dominion Income and Outgo, 1909-10.

Those who are interested in these matters will be glad to know that the income of the Dominion of Canada for the year amounted to over one hundred millions, or to be exact, $101,501,034.28, thus fulfilling the prediction made by the Minister of Finance more than a year ago, that the hundred million mark would be passed this time. The expenditure on revenue account amounted to a little less than $80,000,000. Among the "miscellaneous" expenditures is one of almost $1,500,000 added to sinking funds, or in other words, applied to reduction of the public debt. This amount and the $27,000,000 surplus over expenditure is $23,535,000. This surplus, together with some borrowed money, was spent in such permanent works as the Transcontinental Railway. The amount thus spent on capital account amounted to over $34,000,000, making it necessary to borrow, in addition to the income, about $10,500,000.

Because the native, two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1914.

FIRST SOCIAL CLUB.

Canada's Earliest Attempt Was In the Year 1785 In Montreal.

The club idea has secured a firm hold on Canada, evidenced for example, in the apartment house, that grotesquely new and picturesque phenomenon of Canadian town life. Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg have their millionaire clubs—exclusive resorts of the nouveaux riches; every hamlet in the land has some sort of "association," athletic, literary, scientific; about them nothing gilded. This club life of Canada is a matter of one hundred and twenty-five years. The first social club of this country came into existence in the year 1875 at Montreal, although there does not seem on the face of it any good reason why, before that time, a few good fellows could not get together, string out a few rules, and call themselves—what? Very likely the explanation is just this: No common motive happened to inspire them to unite. Necessity created the first club. In 1753, the Northwest Fur Co. began to send trappers out into the wilds, determined that they would smash the "Great Monopoly," the Hudson Bay Co., which had got a royal charter three years before. Now it required a lot of scheming to combat the wily Lords of the North. The new traders in pelts found that their plans kept them up o' nights. So, sensible men, nineteen of them decided to organize. Quite appropriately they styled themselves "The Beavers" of the Beaver Club, and with admirable aptitude adopted as their motto "Fortitude in Difficulties." What menus of entertainment the Beavers provided for themselves on the cold, blustery nights of a winter in the New World! Ordinarily the man who drops into the National Club, or the Rideau, or the Manitoba, smokes a cigar and discourses upon the vagaries of chauffeurs, or Leader Borden's chances in Quebec. The dashing Beavers whispered to each other of the redmen skulking in the bush; told of tragedies whirling in the rapids; laughed jocundly at the hard tack, culled corn and tallow, commenting on such luxuries as peas and pork. Sometimes they entertained a guest, an attache of the Government sent out to the colony to report. Then was the table heavy with venison haunches, beavers' tails, pemmican, and tongues of the buffalo. How they regaled the wondering stranger, these voyageurs with the bronzed faces and great, heavy voices of the wood! Time for the toasts—five the minimum, a rule of the club; the tinkling of the glasses mingles with the suave tones of the master; then the wail of a violin somewhere, and the gay company rings out with the lilting songs, "Malbrouk s'en va-t-en guerre," or "A la Claire Fontaine."

No club to-day in the Dominion was more exclusive than the Beavers. A man got in on his merits. The first test was unique; the prospective member had to furnish proof that his travels had included an itinerary through the Northwest. Next the unanimity of the members had to be expressed that the applicant for admittance was desirable. Later in its history, the Beavers confined the waiting-list to those who had mounted the various grades in the service of the fur company. Honorary members were sometimes added to the list. The constitution provided that all members in town keep the date of the annual dinner open—first Wednesday in December. The gatherings often took place with great eclat at Fort William on Lake Superior.

The Doctor and the Dean.

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell University, who represented that institution of learning at Prof. Goldwin Smith's funeral the other day, is a man of fine aesthetic taste and very proud of the college and of its buildings. A particular fad of his is a full set of chimes on the college library. A graduate of Cornell some time ago related that Dr. Schurman was walking across the campus one day with the Dean of one of the colleges when the chimes in the library building began to ring.

"Dean," said he, "the music of those chimes is so beautiful that it always sets me dreaming of the past. My boyhood days——"

"What do you say?" interrupted the venerable Dean.

"I say the chimes are very, very beautiful. They make me think——"

"What?" yelled the dignified Dean again.

"The chimes——the chimes——how beautiful——"

"Speak louder!" cried the Dean once more. "I can't hear you for those confounded bells."

A few days later Dr. Schurman had occasion to address the faculty and took occasion to deplore a decadence in æsthetic taste on the part of the learned.

An Unexpected Retort.

Col. Baxter, a leading lawyer of one of the Eastern Provinces, was once conducting a case for a Jew against a lawyer noted as a browbeater, of great dignity, and very fat.

When it came his turn to cross-examine Baxter's client, he arose with great weight and immediately began his bullying tactics. The Hebrew, however, was not to be intimidated, and answered every question in as thunderous a tone as that of his questioner.

Such conduct on the part of a mere witness was not to be endured, and, with a look of offended dignity meant to be terrifying, the lawyer said: "You need not eat me, my good man."

Baxter was on his feet instantly. "My learned friend need not fear," he said with a reassuring smile. "My client is a Jew and never eats pork."

The Inevitable Malady.

Mr. Goldwin Smith was decidedly fond of referring to his advanced age, and seemed to take a kind of melancholy pride in being among "the last of the Victorians." More than a year ago a youthful friend approached him and asked solicitously after his health. Dr. Smith smiled with that gentleness which always characterized him.

"There is nothing the matter with me at all," he said. Then he added thoughtfully: "Nothing except the incurable disease of more than fourscore years.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

AUTHOR OF "GINX'S BABY."

Forty Years Ago Edward Jenkins Was the Kipling of His Day.

One of the most distinguished sons of the Montreal High School passes off the roll by the death in London of Edward Jenkins, ex-M.P., politician, humorist, author and editor, creator of the immortal "Ginx's Baby." Some forty years ago Edward Jenkins was so much in the limelight in the literary world that his position in the sphere of letters at that time has been compared to that of Rudyard Kipling therein to-day. His style had the Kipling touch, and both men had close connection with India. Mr. Jenkins was born at Bangalore, India, in July, 1838, his father being Rev. Dr. John Jenkins, so long pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Montreal. He came to Canada with his parents at an early age and was educated at the Montreal High School and McGill University. Then, after a course at the University of Pennsylvania, he was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn, in 1864, and had a most remarkable career in the years which followed. He was counsel for the coolies on the Demerara Coolie Commission of 1870; agent-general for Canada from 1874 to 1876; a member of the royal commission on copyright in 1876-77; and about that time wrote his famous novel, entitled "Ginx's Baby," by which he will be remembered when his political career has been forgotten. Among his other humorous books were "Lord Bantam," "The Coolie," "Little Hodge," "The Devil's Chain," "Barney Geoghegan," etc., etc. Beginning his life as a Gladstonian Liberal he was by turns an Independent Liberal and Imperialist, and in his later years a Conservative. He represented the city of Dundee, Scotland, as a Radical from 1874 to 1880, but was then defeated, and though he sought the suffrage of the electors of that city in 1885, and 1896, he had changed his political clothes and the people would not avail themselves of his services.

He was one of the great historical characters at the Montreal High School, stories of his bright sallies, of his boyish jokes, of his prowess on the football field and in gymnasium being handed down from generation to generation. One of his brothers, Mr. George Ernest Jenkins, was one of the under masters in the big school in the seventies, and to the great edification, and delight of the boys he often recalled the sayings and doings of his brother when he was a High School boy, and occasionally read in class a clever letter from his brother humorously referring to his school-days at the "Old High," and expressing his pride in its continued prosperity.

The late Mrs. Gregor Mattice, wife of Col. Mattice, for so long a member of the militia staff, was a sister of Mr. Jenkins.—Chesterfield in Family Herald and Weekly Star.

An Illustrious Family.

During the absence from Canada of His Excellency Earl Grey, Judge Girouard, of the Supreme Court of Canada, is once more acting as administrator of the Government, and is to all effects and purposes clothed with the same authority and power as the Governor-General. The right of the administrator to be styled "His Excellency," was asserted by Sir H. Elzear Taschereau, formerly Chief Justice, while acting as administrator in the interval between the departure of the Earl of Minto, and the arrival of His Excellency Earl Grey, and he was informed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, in reply to an enquiry, that the administrator is rightly styled "His Excellency."

Judge Girouard's son, Col. Sir Percy Girouard, as governor and commander-in-chief of the East Africa Protectorate, is also entitled to the designation "His Excellency." I am told, with how much truth I do not know, that no other family in the British Empire has ever before had the honor of having two of its members entitled to be so addressed. Whether the coincidence is absolutely unique or not, it is sufficiently rare to deserve notice, particularly in Canada, and more particularly as the Girouard family is a purely French-Canadian one. Judge Girouard, who was born at St. Timothee, beside the Cedar Rapids, in 1836, is a descendant of Antoine Girouard, of Montelucon, France, who was private secretary to Governor de Ramezai at Montreal in 1720. The family has remained in Canada ever since.

The Wrong Fight.

In Queen's Park, Toronto, one glorious afternoon last week, a group of assorted loungers were discussing in heated fashion the news of the day. Another happy idler approached and wanted to know the matter of argument.

"It's the Jackson controversy," said an elderly orator. "What do you think of it?"

"Well, now," said the newcomer "I don't really take much stock in it Of course, I ain't saying that a nigger can't be a white man's equal in some respects, but when it comes to a white man going into the ring against a nigger, I must say that I draw the line."

"Oh, go on," said the elderly orator. "This ain't the Jeffries-Johnson fight that we're talkin' about. This is theology. Jackson's a minister."

"Shucks," said the newcomer, "what on earth can a minister be in a scrap about?"

New Brunswick's Clever Sons.

Although the Maritime Provinces do not loom up so conspicuously as do the new western provinces in the direction of material development, they still seem to keep up their record for producing clever men. In one single week three sons of the northern section of New Brunswick have come conspicuously to the front. The great railway lawyer, Creelman, once of Richibucto, has become a director of the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Mitchell from the Miramichi has become Attorney-General in the Sifton Ministry of Alberta. Prof. James McCurdy, of Toronto University, a native of Chatham, and a graduate of the University of New Brunswick, has been appointed to the charge of the school of Oriental Research at Jerusalem, under the auspices of the Archeological Institute of America.

DUNKARDS IN ONTARIO

THEY ARE A THRIFTY CONSERVATIVE PEOPLE.

Pennsylvania Dutch Throughout the Province Have a Prejudice Against Progressive Change, Which Evidences Itself Chiefly In Matters of Dress—Several Splits Have Taken Place on This Account.

The province of Ontario possesses the purest type of Canadian people in Canada. Outside of the cities, there are few to be found who are not direct descendants of old Scotch, English or Irish settlers. Almost the only exceptions are the settlements of Pennsylvania Dutch who came across the border during the early colonization of the province and were among the sturdiest pioneers who helped make Ontario what it is to-day.

Nature made of them first of all, farmers. Their ancestors for centuries back had followed the pursuits of the soil. They are of the hard working brotherhood—whether from love of work or for money one cannot say with authority, but their work is always to a purpose and productive of results.

Like the Quakers, they refuse to believe that a minister possesses more grace or graces than other men. He is one of their own number, and follows his humble calling as a farmer on week days. But, when he enters the pulpit on Sundays to perform his duties as leader of the flock, it is with no more assumption of divine grace than when he is following the furrow in the fields. They are a people who live their religion and take it with them into the field or the workshop instead of leaving it behind them when they pass outside of the church doors. They stand for the highest principles of purity, thrift and frugality. Honesty is a synonym with their names. Poverty is unknown among them, and many are in good circumstances.

As citizens they cannot be said to be rated as thoroughly perfect. Their strict interpretation of Bible passages prevent them from progressing with the times. It is only recently that top-buggies and telephones were accepted as the proper necessities of the day.

This prejudice against progressive change has been applied far more strictly to their mode of dress than in other habits of life. The men wear felt hats the year round—regardless of the cold of winter or heat of summer. Their coats are plain and square cut. Their collars are seldom adorned with a tie, and their hair is cropped close to the back of the head squarely across. However, the men indulge in more variations of dress than do their good sisters. While the women of other creeds may be slaves of fashion, each trying to outdo her neighbor in the matter of dress, a Dutch woman—whether she be Dunkard or Mennonite—does not vary her costume from that of her sisters.

In obedience to the Scriptural mandate that woman shall not worship with uncovered head, they wear a covering of delicate lawn or net as a symbol of humility. This dainty cap is worn at morning prayer in their homes and at religious service in their church. It adorns the head of the bride, and of the candidate for church membership who kneels at the altar or in the running stream to receive the pouring water of baptism. Many wear it as they go about their daily tasks, saying that it gives them strength to accomplish that which they have prayed for aid to do.

The bonnets which they wear at all times when away from home are made of buckram, covered within and without, usually with silk, but in winter a warmer material like velvet is used. In midsummer, straw bonnets are sometimes used. They are always of uniform shape and size and tied with silk ribbon. They are always fashioned by their wearers, and cost about a dollar apiece.

The Dunkards are the better organized of the two denominations of the Dutch religion. They have never varied from any of these forms of dress, but the dress question has led to many dissensions in the Mennonite church and has resulted in four divisions of it.

The Old Mennonites are those who adhere absolutely to the older customs. The women wear only the plainest of tight fitting waists without collar or any adornment. A kerchief is worn about the neck and an apron of the same material as the dress completes the costume. Their head-covering is of net and is also made in the plainest style.

This branch conducts its service in Dutch or Low German and will not permit Sunday school, revival or testimonial meetings, and holds no religious service in the evening. Funerals in this and all other branches of the church must be conducted in the homes, as no corpse may cross the portals of the house in which they worship God. It is noticeable that in this division of the Mennonites there are no young girl members. They object to the severely plain clothes until they are married and then the initial step of church membership is taken.

The Reformed Mennonites add "the tippet" as an adornment to the plain waists. It is a pointed piece which is attached to a collar and the point tucks in at the waist. It adds much to the attractiveness of their dress and still preserves the quaint individuality of their costumes. Their services is in English, but Dutch is taught in their homes.

Could Lift a Ton and a Half.

A Scotchman, said to be the last of the Stuarts, was possessed with an extraordinary strength, from which circumstance he got the byname of Jemmy Strength. Among other feats, he could carry a twenty-four pounder cannon and had been known to lift a cartload of hay weighing a ton and a half upon his back. Many a time he took up a jackass and, carrying it on his shoulders, walked through the tollgate.

A Californian has done away with the horn for phonographs by inventing a cabinet with a lid which, when raised, opens a bellows-like affair to amplify the sound.

THE SAFETY OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

May Be Taken For Years

The Ideal Remedy For Young and Old

Nature's gifts do us good, if used judiciously. We eat bread from babyhood to old age without ever tiring of it. We drink water, year in and year out, with the greatest benefit to our health. So too, we eat fruit in season and are better for the change of diet. This is true, because such things are the natural foods and drink of mankind. It is for this reason that "Fruit-a-tives" may be used for years in correcting some ill of the body. As is well known, "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes.

Just as fresh fruit may be eaten at every meal, so "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken every night for 20 years or more with the greatest benefit.

The absolute safety of "Fruit-a-tives" has been a great factor in its success. Those who suffered with chronic troubles such as Constipation, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., naturally took a number of boxes of "Fruit-a-tives".

As they became better, they found that instead of being compelled to increase the dose as in most medicines, they were decreasing it, and gradually taking fewer doses.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TAFT SEES CANADA.

Gazes at a Distance and Talks of Reciprocal Trade.

Eastport, Me., July 21.—President Taft and his party, which includes Mrs. Taft, the assistant secretary of the navy, Mr. Beekman Winthrop and Mrs. Winthrop, landed here from the United States steamship Mayflower Tuesday afternoon. The trip from Beverly until the Mayflower dropped anchor just inside the big white buoy which marks the boundary between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, had been without incident.

In a short speech made from the front of the Peavey Library, the President endorsed in the strongest terms the policy of reciprocal relations between the United States and Canada. Looking across the little bay which separates the fertile lands of Eastern Maine from those of the same character in New Brunswick, the President seemed impressed with the closeness and natural unity of the two countries.

"You are close to the Canadian border," he said to the people of Eastport, "close enough to know its residents as neighbors. That is a grand country, just learning how great it is and how great its resources. Speaking for the administration, we are convinced that the closest relations will be good for both countries. ... in the next year we can come to an agreement which will make our trade relations closer, we shall be fortunate. We have reached a time in our development when neither should be jealous of the other. The more prosperous the one the more prosperous will be the other. The trade of one as it grows is the trade of the other.

"All the controversies between the United States and Great Britain are now either settled or in course of settlement by arbitration. This is the first time in the history of the country that this could be said."

New Yorkers Can See Fight Pictures.

New York, July 21.—New Yorkers are to see the reproduction by moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. When Mayor Gaynor passed the question on to the board of aldermen, with a recommendation that it adopt an ordinance prohibiting the pictures, it was stated that a majority of the members of the board would vote for such a measure. The liberal members, however, played trumps in questioning the legality of such a proceeding. So the matter was referred to a committee to report at the next meeting.

By agreement, there will not be a quorum at another meeting of the aldermen until the latter part of September, and in the meantime the pictures will be put on here.

SCOTT GREETS LAURIER

Saskatchewan's Chief Welcomes Premier at Yorkton.

Sir Wilfrid Says In Reply to Grain Growers Demand for Fiscal Changes That the Tariff Is Not a Fixed Thing, But Will Be Changed as Occasion Demands — Reciprocity Unpractical at Present.

Yorkton, Sask., July 21.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's stay in Yorkton has brought a pleasing diversion in the routine of political meetings, and has given the Prime Minister an opportunity to see what a grain belt in full process of ripening looks like. The town was gaily decorated for the occasion, an arch made of oat sheaves containing some 600 bushels formed an entrance to the railway yard, and prizes were awarded for the best decorated stores in the town. The Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association submitted a resolution in regard to terminal elevators, the Hudson Bay Railway and th etariff, and other deputations will be arranged at different places for the same purpose.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier passed from southern Manitoba Tuesday to the hilly region contiguous to the northwestern branch of the C.P.R., he told the people of Birtle that if any other section was to impress him more than that which he had seen up until that time, it would have to be extraordinary fine. That requirement has undoubtedly been filled by Yorkton. With the prospect of an abundant harvest from the district for a distance of twenty-five miles on either side, there is a feeling of optimism and pride in every citizen in the community.

Speaking for Saskatchewan, Hon. Walter Scott, Premier, extended to Sir Wilfrid a hearty welcome to the new province. The Saskatchewan welcomed Canada's Prime Minister because, through his statesmanship, Saskatchewan had received its grant of provincial autonomy and financial assistance. Sixteen years ago the railway mileage of Saskatchewan was 350, to-day it is 3,500, but the growth of the province was not so much indicated by the increase of railway mileage as by the increase of population, both of towns and cities. Last year 6,000 bushels of grain were harvested for every mile of railway.

"Sir," he said, "in this province the memory of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be held especially dear. While the other provinces have the benefits of his administration, there is no province which has experienced these benefits in so large a degrees as the Province of Saskatchewan."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who had received a deputation from the Saskatchewan grain growers, took advantage of the occasion to reply to them.

Taking up the question of fiscal legislation and the demand that agricultural implements should be admitted free of duty, Sir Wilfrid said that the tariff was not like the laws of the Medes and Persians; it was not permanent and would have to be revised from time to time.

Sir Wilfrid pointed out the impracticability of reciprocity with the United States under present conditions. He was a free trader for his own part, and would view with favor any offer from Washington for a trade treaty.

Hon. G. P Graham told the farmers that they were wrong when they said that in granting subsidies they had neglected the agricultural industry.

"Every dollar given to the railways is given for the purpose of getting a better price for the goods of the men who till the soil," he said.

Trade Is Booming.

Ottawa, July 21.—Canadian trade figures for June show an increase of $11,000,000 over the same month last year. The total trade for the month was $66,611,824. For the first quarter of the present fiscal year there is an increase of $35,000,000.

Puppets of Downing Street.

London, July 21.—The Cape Times says Downing street has laid it down that the Secretary of State, London, has authority to instruct a governor in the colonies to break the law of the land, while he is all the time acting as administrator of the law. With such a preposterous doctrine prevailing, The Times asserts that the position of the King's representative becomes farcical, and the occupant of the position mischievous, a puppet worked at the will of Downing street, either to screen or sanctify the violation of the law, or invasion of the rights of the people.

Found Dead In Bed.

Woodstock, July 21.—Dan McCulloch, a life-long resident of this city, was found dead in bed yesterday morning by the contractor for whom he was working. He did not show up at work and his employer went to find him. He was known by nearly everyone in the city, being an enthusiastic hunter and trapper.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The decorations for the O.B.R. are superb. If any of the old boys and girls are, by the strike, prevented from coming and seeing them, they have our sympathy

◆ ◆ ◆

Pretty tough, these days, on the folks who send to Toronto for their goods. There may be a long delay. Safest way is to shop at home.

◆ ◆ ◆

Cheer up. All strikes must have an end some time. It isn't half as bad as if Halley's comet had struck the earth.

◆ ◆ ◆

A great search is being made for Dr. Crippen, the London murderer. Look out for him. He may be in the Calithumpian procession.

◆ ◆ ◆

One obvious fact sticks out in this strike business — Belleville cannot get C. N. R. connection too quickly.

That forceful person, C. M. Hays
Now has his share of anxious days.

◆ ◆ ◆

The Grand Trunk appears to be checked a bit by the strike. What?

◆ ◆ ◆

By the way, what's the Lemieux Act doing these days. It was announced as a sure cure for all trade disputes. Seems to be as much use at present as an auto without gasoline.

◆ ◆ ◆

With the T. A. S. baseball team down in the cellar of the local City league, who can truthfully say that local option always wins?

◆ ◆ ◆

Jeffries couldn't come back, and if a Belleville man goes away on a railroad trip now he may not come back very soon either

◆ ◆ ◆

These magic figures—23— were in evidence again yesterday, in a local baseball match this time. The winning team must have thought they were playing cricket.

◆ ◆ ◆

And they have a big railroad strike over 'ome. Cheer up. We suffer in good company.

◆ ◆ ◆

If the threatened rain comes the question will be, Can the decorations come back?

◆ ◆ ◆

A Toronto paper says freight is moving on the Grand Trunk. Perhaps. But down this way it isn't moving with quite the speed of Halley's comet.

◆ ◆ ◆

Both parties in the G. T. R. strike claim to be satisfied, and the general public cheerfully confess that they are somewhat easily pleased

◆ ◆ ◆

Kingston is having a small epidemic of appendicitis. Some of her people are all cut up about it.

CHOOSING BETWEEN EVILS.

(Brockville Times.)

Last Saturday the Toronto lacrosse team defeated the Tecumsehs at Scarboro Beach. The contest was one of the worst exhibitions of savage brutality ever seen in Canada, according to the papers. The police raided the field twice, and slashing and fighting was incessant throughout. Heads were cut open and blood flowed freely. However, the virtue of the Province is safe since the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures have been prohibited by the Government.

A STRIKE OPINION.

Hamilton Herald.

It's an unconditional surrender that the G. T. R. trainmen require of President Hays. If he declines to grant all that the trainmen demand, they will strike. We think the men are badly advised. Public opinion cannot and will not approve of this uncompromising attitude. If the strike is called, and if it causes much public inconvenience, the blame will have to be borne by the strikers. One result of the trouble may be a general demand for compulsory arbitration of labor disputes in connection with railways, with compulsory acceptance of the award of the arbitration board.

G.T.R. Engineers are Not Cheering Loudly

The Grand Trunk engineers and firemen, whose mission used to be to run freight trains, are not giving three cheers for the strike. They are idle as a result of the tie-up in freight traffic. A conservative estimate says that fully 150 engineers and firemen are idle in this district alone as a result of the strike.

As one of the engineers said this morning, they and the firemen are worse off than the strikers, for the latter are getting strike pay, whereas the engineers and firemen are getting nothing at all.

A peculiar local incident in connecton with the strike is the fact that the Grand Trunk was going to build an arch near the station, in honor of the Old Boys' Reunion. The evergreens they were going to use are on a freight car which is stuck somewhere in transit, and the project has had to be abandoned.

The G. T. R. Strike.

There is practically no change locally in the G. T. R. strike situation from yesterday. The men are sticking to their guns and the company is operating all passenger trains with the aid of employees of other departments acting as conductors, brakeman and baggagemen. Good time is being made, considering the difficulties encountered by the men, who find their new duties a bit awkward but there is a noticeable falling off in passengers, especially in the commercial ranks.

How Strikers View It.

So far as the strike headquarters were concerned, they seemed to be in jubilant humor last night, says the Montreal Gazette, and declared that the strike order had been obeyed even beyond their anticipation, the statement being made that practically none of the men had stayed with the company except the few who had voted against the strike.

"We were a little dubious about suffering from this strike," said Mr. Murdock. "But now we have gone into it, everything is working fine. Two hundred and fifty men on the Wabash went out to-day, which make a total of about 4,000 men who have quit work.

"The position to-day is that we have practically all the men employed in the train and yard service on strike from Chicago to Portland. I have been in telephone and telegraph communication with all the leading points during the day, and can say that there are not more men left in the train and yard service than voted against the strike—about fifty. If there are we have not heard of them and we have reports from every point."

There is nothing particularly new locally in regard to the G. T. R. trainmen's strike. Passenger trains to-day were running as usual and nearly all were on time.

On the Midland and Madoc divisions passenger trains were also running to-day. One freight train of a few cars came in here at 11.30 this morning from the west, being the first since the strike commenced. This branch of the system being tied up is severely felt in some quarters and is causing considerable inconvenience to many shippers here.

Coleman Flats Won One-Sided Game

A rather one-sided and uninteresting baseball city league match was played yesterday afternoon on the Coleman's Flats diamond, between the Coleman Flats and T. A. S. teams. There was a large number of spectators present, many of whom left before the conclusion of the game, as interest was lacking. At the commencement of the game Coleman's Flats took the lead and maintained it to the finish. Their eighth innings was a record one, as no less than 10 runs were scored before three men had been put out. Whalen for the T. A. S., pitched a fairly good game, but was by no means well supported in the field. For the winners Draycott pitched an exceptionally good game, and was given good support by the fielders. In the early part of the game Campbell, catcher for Coleman's Flats was retired owing to a mishap. In catching a ball he had the misfortune to split the flesh between the third and fourth finger. The tear was of such a nature as to compel his retirement. Clement also sprained his foot, but finished out the game, a runner for him being substituted. The score at the conclusion of the game was 23 to 3 in favor of Coleman's Flats. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire and he certainly had his work cut out as there were several disputes. His decisions, to the majority of the onlookers, were all right.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

COLEMAN FLATS		T. A. S.
	Pitcher
Draycott		Whalen
	Catcher
Campbell		Champagne
	1st Base
Clement		J. Goyer
	2nd Base

	Short Stop
Jarrell		McNabb
	Centre Field
Finkle		Callaghan
	Right Field
Bowen		N. Goyer

The score by innings was as follows:—

SPORTING NOTES.

The Giants recently knocked "Miner" Brown, the Cub pitcher, out of the box in two games in succession.

Rumors are travelling thick and fast in regard to the tumble of the Detroit Tigers. Jennings and Cobb on the outs seems to be the gossips' leading topic.

New York took an eleven-inning game from Cincinnati, mainly because of Mathewson's pitching in the crisis. Thirteen Cincinnati players were left on bases, three of these in the ninth and two in the tenth.

All paid attendance records for baseball games in Boston were broken, when 32,318 persons saw Boston win two in fourteen innings. The largest attendance recorded up to yesterday was mae on May 30, this year, when 31,070 persons were present at the same grounds

---

The veteran pitcher, Cy. Young, won the 500th game of his long career at Washington yesterday, when Cleveland defeated Washington in the second game of a double-header, 5 to 2. The contest went eleven innings, Young allowing but one hit in the eighth, the catch killing off a sure triple. Young has worked in something like 800 games

---

Within three months of Lajoie's engagement to play in Cleveland, Ban Johnson—who knew the exact receipts and disbursements of every club in the league— said:—"Lajoie's presence in the American League is worth from $50,000 to $75,000 in extra money at the turnstiles."

Friends of Jim Jeffries are much perturbed over reports that have been received for several days from Burbank in regard to the queer actions of the big man whom Johnson defeated so decisively at Reno All those who have seen Jeffries since he returned say he is a changed man. He seems to have aged ten years and to have lost complete control of his faculties. He sits for hours humped over like an old man, never talks and never laughs, but gazes away to a far distance, as though in a dream. When he talks he frequently rambles like an old man. Some still cling to the belief that Jeffries was doped at Reno and that he hasn't yet recovered, but most people think his present condition is simply the result of the shock of defeat.

Cobourg Medical Man Said to Have Caused Discord

Bowmanville, July 19.—A horrible disgrace has fallen upon the devoted heads of the medical profession at Cobourg. in their midsts is a physician who has lowered the high social standards of the profession. He has designed to sweep up his office floor. Not only that, but, broom in hand, he has appeared in front of his office and industriously cleaned off the sidewalk. Even worse, on occasions he ventures forth armed with a mop, and cleans his windows. In addition he has completed the catalogue of offences by letting his wife wash and scrub the office floors.

The medical men of Cobourg are incensed over the matter, and declining to rest under the stigma, have sent a letter to the medical council condemning the unprofessional labors of their fellow-physician. Just what the council will be able to do in the matter remains to be seen.

The Western Crops.

Toronto, July 19 — "Never take the pessimistic view until the last shower is in," said Wm. Mackenzie of the Canadian Northern, regarding the drops. He went on to say, from the most of the points along the lines of the C. N. R. in the west, that the average condition of the crops was good and he expected to receive reports again to-morrow confirming the state of affairs of a week ago and showing considerable improvement.

FIREWORKS GALORE

Wonderful programme for the Canadian National This Year

Never was such a programme of fireworks given as that prepared for the Canadian National Exhibition this year. There will be fireworks day and night. Japanese fireworks and exploding submarine mines in the afternoon and at night. "Naval Review at Spithead," "Battle between a Dreadnought and an Airship," winding up with a long list of sixty pieces which exhaust the possibilities of pyrotechnics. It is certainly a wonderful programme.

TOOK HIM AT HIS WORD.

Don Piatt's Client Had a Stunted Sense of Humor.

A quaint story about Don Piatt is told in the "Recollections of a Varied Life," by George Cary Eggleston. The story is given in Mr. Piatt's own words:

"When I was a young man trying to get into a law practice in Ohio and eager to advertise myself by appearing in court a fellow was indicted for arson. He came to me, explaining that he had no money with which to pay a lawyer, but that he thought I might like to appear in a case so important and that if I would do the best I could for him he stood ready to do anything for me that he could by way of recompense. I took the case, of course. It was a complex one, and it offered opportunities for browbeating and 'balling up' witnesses—a process that specially impresses the public with the sagacity of a lawyer who does it successfully. Then, if by any chance I should succeed in acquitting my client, my place at the bar would be assured as that of 'a sharp young feller who had beaten the prosecuting attorney himself.'

"But in telling my client I would take his case the demon of humor betrayed me. Just across the street from my lodging was a negro church, and there was a 'revival' going on at the time. They 'revived' till 2 o'clock or later every night with shoutings that interfered with my sleep. With playful impulse I said to the accused man:

"'You seem to be an expert in the arts of arson. If you'll burn that negro church I'll feel that you have paid me full price for my service in defending you.'

"I defended him, and as the witnesses against him were all of shady character I succeeded in securing his acquittal. About 4 o'clock the next morning a fire broke out under all four corners of that negro church, and before the local fire department got a quart of water into action it was a heap of smoldering ashes, hymn books and all. A week or so later I received a letter from my ex-client. He wrote from St. Louis, 'on his way west,' he said. He expressed the hope that I was 'satisfied with results' and begged me to believe that he was 'a man of honor, who never failed to repay an obligation or reward a service.'"

Not the Same Spelling.

A stout man had recourse to a doctor to see whether something could not be done to reduce his size. "It's a disgrace, doctor!" he cried. "Just look at this bay window of mine! Now, what would you advise?"

"Well," replied the physician, eying his waist line, "all I can suggest is to diet."

"All right, doctor, I'm willing. What color would you suggest?"—St. Louis Republic.

A Pious Wish.

It was in a city hospital that a man refused to undergo an operation for appendicitis until his minister could be present.

"What do you want the minister here for?" asked the surgeon.

"Because I want to be opened with prayer," was the reply.—New York Tribune.

A Few Pointers.

Sir Wilfrid, says the Globe, received a hearty reception at Morden, Manitoba, and reaffirmed his statement that his "tour to the West was not a political pilgrimage," and then discussed the political questions, telling the people that it is the "present purpose of the Government to finish the canal from Winnipeg to the foot of the Rockies within five years, and to prove the non-political character of his visit to the Western provinces, he attacked Premier Roblin in a somewhat virulent style. Sunny words, may please, but not humbug, sensible men.

✦ ✦ ✦

Other reports from Morden by other representatives than those of the Globe staff say Sir Wilfrid's reception was a cool one, there being only a handful of people at the station, when the Premier's special train pulled in from Winnipeg and not a single cheer greeted Sir Wilfrid as he made his way from his car to the carriage in waiting.

✦ ✦ ✦

At the Morden meeting the Premier devoted almost his entire speech to the Manitoba boundary question and was at times quite bitter in his references to Premier Roblin. At the conclusion of which three cheers were proposed and heartily given for Premier Roblin.

Mr. M. E. McDonald, the champion Public Accounts blocker denounced the Conservative party as the party favoring "adequate protection," which he said meant high tariff. This being a ticklish question Sir Wilfrid promised to deal with the question at some meeting next week.

✦ ✦ ✦

On the transportation question Mr. Graham told the people that the Government, instead of enlarging the present Welland canal, would probably build a new canal. He also gave examples to prove that in Canada freight rates were lower than in the States. These are the most sensible remarks that have fallen from any of the Tourists.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE JULY ROD AND GUN

Fascinating is the best description that can be given of the opening article "Canoeing on Lake Superior," appearing in the July number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont. The writer and a companion, despite the doleful predictions of their friends, planned and carried out a canoe trip along the northern shore of Lake Superior and thoroughly enjoyed their holiday. They hugged the shore carefully except on one occasion when the temptation to make a short cut across a bay proved irresistible. At the end of the experiment they shook hands and promised not to do it again. This will convey to the readers far better than a long description, an idea of their experiences. "Canoe Trips in Temagami," describing the conclusions from the experiences of several seasons in fire ranging, is a most readable article. Fishing stories from several provinces are timely, while big game hunters are not forgotten and articles on sheep and bear hunts furnish fine reading. Mr. Vance's experiences with minks will attract all lovers of our wild animals and may tempt some to try their hands at similar work. In addition there are many other articles everyone appealing to those interested in some phase of outdoor life, and the whole forming a number no sportsman should miss.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation If Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the great French Physician, of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all disease caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill all the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

J. S. McKeown guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence daintily perfumed and free from greasy stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere, and in Belleville by J. S. McKeown. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package

GIGANTIC TREE STUMPS.

Big Enough to Be Hollowed Out and Used For Houses.

The fine firs of the Pacific northwest are so colossal that after the trees are hewed down the stumps are used for children's playgrounds, houses for families to live in or for dancing platforms.

To make a stump house the material from the interior is removed, leaving only enough to form walls of suitable thickness. A roof of boards or shingles is put over the top of the stump, holes are cut for windows and doors, and a family of five can and often does make it their dwelling. The stump houses are sometimes used by settlers until they can build larger and more convenient homes.

After the stump home has been vacated it is turned into a stable for the horses or sometimes into an inclosure for chickens or hogs.

Next to the big tree of California the fir or sequoia of Washington and Oregon has the largest diameter. As they decay rapidly, the hollowing out is easy. Sometimes they are used for dance platforms, some of them accommodating as many as four couples.

Another custom is to turn the big stumps into playgrounds for the children. The children reach the top by pieces of wood nailed against the sides or by ladders. A beautiful use of the large stumps is making them into flower beds and covering them with trailing vines.—Chicago Tribune.

THE WAISTCOAT.

It Became Popular by the Patronage of Charles II.

Few men realize how much they are being influenced in their dress by King Charles II., and yet it is to that monarch we owe the adoption of the waistcoat as a regular article of gentleman's dress, says London M. A. P. At least that is so if we are to accept the statement of Pepys, who in his diary under date of Oct. 16, 1666, states: "The king has declared his resolution to set a fashion which he would never alter," and "This day King Charles II. began to put on his vest. It is a very fine and handsome garment."

Prior to this date they were exceptional garments, and there is even some doubt whether they were originally worn by ladies or gentlemen, though there is good reason to believe they superseded the doublet, such as was worn by Raleigh, Essex and other notables of the Elizabethan age.

A neat waistcoat "wrought in silk and gold" is mentioned in "Patient Grissell," 1602, and there is a painting in distemper of a vest on the walls of Winchester cathedral, dated 1489, so that what Charles II. took was merely an existing garment, which he remodeled, and by his patronage so popularized it that it became a standard article of gentleman's dress.

Clever Reasoning.

Rather an original lesson in political economy was that once taught by the Japanese nobleman Awoto and thus translated by Sir Edwin Arnold in "Seas and Lands:"

One evening as he was going to the palace to take his turn in keeping the night watch he let ten cash drop out of his tinder case into the stream and then bought fifty cash worth of torches to search for the lost coin. His friends laughed at him for spending so much in order to recover so little, and he replied, with a frown:

"Sirs, you are foolish and ignorant of economics. Had I not sought for these ten cash they would have been lost forever—sunk in the bottom of the Namerigawa. The fifty cash which I have expended on torches will remain in the hands of the tradesman. Whether he has them or I is no matter, but not a single one of the sixty has been lost, and that is a clear gain to the country."

Wedding Ring Mottoes.

When posies or mottoes inscribed inside wedding rings were first introduced does not seem to be known, but from the sixteenth century until the middle of the eighteenth it was customary to have them engraved on rings. These mottoes seldom consisted of more than two lines of a verse, often of only one, but there are a few instances known where three lines were used. Some of these posies are very quaint and curious, and a few reach a high standard of poetic beauty. The South Kensington museum has a good collection of posy rings, and among them are the following inscriptions: "United hearts death only parts;" "Let us share in joy and care;" "Love and live happily."—London Standard.

The Cause.

"Did you hear the awful shriek that engine gave as it flew by?" asked the first man as they approached a railroad crossing.

"Yes. What caused it?" rejoined his companion.

"I presume the engineer had it by the throttle."—Smart Set.

A Mean Retort.

"There goes a man I could have married," she said softly.

"Yes," he chuckled, "and I notice that he keeps on going as though he were afraid you might try it again."—Detroit Free Press.

Way It Goes.

"Could you give a starving woman work?"

"Yes; I need a girl to scrub."

"Too bad; this girl's a parlor maid."—Washington Herald.

The small courtesies sweeten life; the great ennoble it.

FIRST PICTURE BOOK.

The Daring Idea That Was Carried Out by Johann Comenius.

Some 300 years ago a German savant had a wonderful vision. At that time children were taught to read by force of arms, so to speak, through hardships and with bitter toil on the part of teacher and of child. It seems curious that the first real step toward lightening the labor of children as they climb the ladder of learning was the product of the imagination not of some fond mother or gentlewoman teacher, but of a bewigged and betitled university doctor.

It was Johann Comenius, however, who first conceived the daring idea that children could be taught by the aid of the memory and the imagination working together, "by means," as he quaintly expressed it, "of sensuous impressions conveyed to the eye, so that visual objects may be made the medium of expressing moral lessons to the young mind and of impressing those lessons upon the memory." In other words, the good herr doctor had the bright idea that picture books could be useful to children. Comenius made his first picture book and called it the "Orbis Pictus." It contains rude woodcuts representing objects in the natural world, as trees and animals, with little lessons about the pictures. It is a quaint volume and one that would cause the average modern child not a little astonishment were it placed before him.

As truly, however, as that term may be applied to any other book that has since been written, the "Orbis Pictus" was an epoch making book. It is the precursor of all children's picture books, and modren childhood has great cause to bless the name of Comenius.

FAULTS OF GOLFERS.

To Cure Them the Play of Experts Should Be Studied.

The common faults of the golfer may be named in the following order of importance: Swinging too quickly, taking the eye off the ball, holding the left hand under the club, keeping the hands too near the body and standing too near the ball.

The easiest, says Outing—indeed, the only satisfactory—way of curing all these faults is to go out and watch some first class experts play. If you cannot find any expert of the first class go for the best available.

This, of course, is rudimentary advice and certainly not original. The youngest caddie at St. Andrews has learned to request his master to keep his eye on the ball and not to press. The trouble is that no amount of book teaching will make you follow this advice.

There is only one way to hit a golf ball. You must watch a good player and imitate what he does. Most beginners make the serious mistake of taking lessons from professionals who watch their pupils play and try to correct them. The pupil would get twice as much good out of the lesson if he would watch the professional play and think as little as possible about himself.

The human being is naturally imitative. If you sit and watch a good tennis match between first class players you will unconsciously finish your stroke better the next time you take up a racket. With golf this is particularly true, because nothing is so important as the rhythmical timing of the stroke which distinguishes a good player from bad.

Who Pays for the Advertising?

Wouldn't you prefer if you had a clothing store to sell a hundred suits of clothes in a day making an average profit of $2.00 per suit, to selling ten suits in a day, with an average profit of $5.00 per suit?

Who would be "taxed" for the advertising? Your patrons? Scarcely—when they pay you $3.00 less than they would have to pay for the identical suits to the merchant who does NOT advertise.

You? Scarcely—when you make a great deal more money than you would if you "saved" your advertising appropriation.

LEOFRIC.

A Love Match That Was Broken Off and Happily Renewed.

By MARTHA M'C.-WILLIAMS.

Janey Gates was the beauty of the Cane Creek neighborhood. Even Sister Meakins admitted as much in spite of robust prejudice. Janey would have been likewise the belle if it had not been accepted as a fact ever since she put up her hair and let down her frocks that she was, in neighborhood phrase, "mortgaged property." Phil Mayben had laid claim to her when she came hardly to his elbow. He had, further, let nobody dispute the claim even after she came back from boarding school, fearfully and wonderfully accomplished. He was a big fellow, square jawed and square headed, who cared nothing for looks unless they dealt with figures. At figures he was marvelously quick and clever—so clever it was nothing for him to stump successive schoolmasters even though they were college bred, while he knew nothing higher than the neighborhood academy.

Possibly it was a triumph of this sort which had first incited the present schoolmaster, Leonard Trabue, Esq., to try conclusions with him in the field of Miss Janey's favor. Janey loved books in the freshest, most whole hearted fashion. Trabue could talk books by the hour and talk very well. Naturally he found himself welcome at the Gates homestead. Quite as naturally Phil Mayben resented his presence there and showed it outright, after the manner of a masterful man crazily in love. Thus by fate and free will and the obligation of hospitality Janey was in a manner forced to take Trabue's part. The result was a very pretty quarrel and the transfer of Phil's attentions to Miss Dora Meakins.

There had been no set engagement to break. That made Phil's attitude all the more aggravating. Janey was for months bitterly unhappy over the rupture, although she let nobody see it, not even her mother. Outwardly she was gayer than ever and so charming Leonard Trabue quite lost his head. He had meant at first only to punish that pestilent fellow, Mayben—incidentally, of course, to divert himself and pass time otherwise heavy on his hands. Teaching was merely a stop gap. Literature was his chosen vocation. He meant to enter upon it through the gate of newspaper work as soon as he could scrape together a few hundred dollars.

The Gateses were not rich folk, but still comfortably off, and Janey an only child. It is but just to say the fact had little to do with Trabue's falling in love. That came upon him unawares. But once he had realized his frame of affections he took full cognizance of it. Might it not be easier to make himself immortal even here in the deep country, with a charming wife and assured comfort, than out in the bustle and hurly burly of a city? To settle it out of hand he proposed plumply to Janey. He was dazed to get a refusal, distressed, almost tearful.

Next week the county paper printed, with flattering comments, a love rhyme signed "Leofric." Cane Creek read it because reading the paper thoroughly was certainly the part of thrift, if not of Christian duty. Still, it felt no curiosity as to the authorship until the rural press quite generally copied and praised the rhyme. A second bit of verse got reprinted in three city papers, so upon the appearance of the third Leofric's identity became a burning question, one that the editor himself could not answer. All he knew was that the copy came to him by the hand of Mr. Murdock, a leading lawyer.

All winter long Leofric wrote intermittently, becoming more and more a riddle and a personage. All winter long, too, Phil Mayben ate Sunday dinners at the Meakins' table, and Leonard Trabue talked books and the world to Janey Gates. He was playing a waiting game, resolved to win her in spite of herself and Phil Mayben.

Janey's heart was singularly steadfast. Still, there were times when she thought Trabue would succeed. Phil's going had left her desolate indeed. He could never have cared as he pretended or he would not be able to stay away. Of course she could not make the first move to reconciliation, especially since he was so taken up with the Meakins generation. Since he was forever lost to her it was far from unpleasant to sun herself in Trabue's devotion.

Spring came with such a rush that year the picnic season opened in mid-May. Sister Meakins and Sister Hodgin, self elected social autocrats, got up the first one and set the place for it, Clear Spring, just a little way off the Gates' pasture. The spring was, in fact, Gates' property, so Sister Meakin let the owner know she thought it would be no more than neighborly of him to put up tables, seats and stakes for the gypsy kettles, to say nothing of the swings. There Phil Mayben interfered. "You don't play a lone hand at this game with me around, squire," he said to Janey's father. Thus it fell out that for two days before the picnic he was nearly as much in Janey's eyes as he had been all winter in her mind.

It amazed and somewhat frightened her to find how equably she regarded him. Squire Gates brought him to dinner, whether or no, and Janey shook hands with him and chatted gayly throughout the meal without the least flutter of the heart. She even watched him go away with no access of sentiment.

If only Trabue had spoken there and then! But he was invisible until next day. The picnic crowd gathered early. Phil was the life of it, though Dora Meakins stuck to him like a limpet. He even bowed civilly to Trabue, who hung about Janey, his eyes downcast, his look preoccupied. The end of the school term was just three weeks ahead. Before he came to that parting of the ways he felt that he must know exactly where he stood. Janey had grown distinctly kinder. Still, there was something in her kindness that put him farther off. She would be an ideal wife for him. A bold stroke would do it now. A year hence would be quite too late.

While the laughter and chatter were at flood he drew her apart and poured out to her his hopes, aspirations, plans. Love he barely named. Might they not, he pleaded, be intellectual comrades? Sustained by her companionship he felt himself capable of great things. He had already made a beginning, and she was all unwittingly the inspiration of what he had done.

Then he tried to take her hand. Janey withdrew it gently. "Tell me all about it," she whispered, a hovering smile about her lips. Trabue bent to her ear and said hurriedly, "You must not mention it, sweetheart, but I am Leofric—Leofric, who wrote desolate and despairing things because you refused him."

"Indeed!" Janey said, getting up from her mossy rock to slip past him. Then, over her shoulder, she added: "You will please wait until afternoon for your answer. I must go help about the dinner."

Dinner was so fine a feast Lawyer Murdock declared he felt more than paid for his long drive out from town. He was Squire Gates' man of business and Janey's sworn friend. Therefore nobody wondered at their confidential talk aside, and even Phil Mayben smiled approval when the lawyer kissed Janey in greeting. But be sure there was a stir as Lawyer Murdock pulled Janey to the middle of the crowd, raised his voice and said, with twinkling eyes: "Ladies and gentlemen, I like unmasking humbugs, so permit me to present to you Leofric, the poetess of Cane Creek. Don't remember it against her that she is a poetess—it's all the fault of that scoundrel, Phil Mayben"—

"It won't be any longer, Mr. Murdock," Phil said, bursting through the crowd to catch Janey in his arms and hide her blushes in his breast. "I know I've been seven kinds of a fool," he went on. "I don't deserve Janey—nobody does, for that matter—but I'm going to have her or die trying."

"You've got her," Lawyer Murdock said, wringing Phil's hand. Dora Meakins turned her back and went off with her head high, but Mr. Leonard Trabue stayed not on the order of his going. Nobody in Cane Creek neighborhood ever saw him again.

Ancient Egyptian Mortgage.

Of all the numerous Egyptian papyri dating from the Greco-Roman period and preserved in the British museum none can be said to be of greater interest than those throwing light on the social conditions and manners and customs of the period. Many of these documents are mortgages, bills of sale and marriage contracts. Of the first named class a very interesting one is dated in the twentieth year of Cleopatra and Ptolemy. It appears that a shepherd named Menthu and his mother, Tausir, finding themselves in difficulties, mortgaged their field to a woman named Ete for the sum of 600 pieces of silver, which they promised to repay in eight months' time with interest. In case of failure of this condition they were willing to forfeit the field without further trouble or litigation. After giving the measurements of the land and particulars of its boundaries the document is attested by Heru-se-esi, scribe of Usir-ur, alias Amenhetep.—London Globe.

Preserving Spiders' Webs.

Naturalists employ an interesting method to preserve all kinds of spiders' webs. The webs are first sprayed with an atomizer with artist's shellac, and then, should they be of the ordinary geometric form, they are pressed carefully against a glass plate, the supporting strands being at the same time severed. After the shellac has dried the plates carrying the webs can be stored away in a cabinet. Even dome shaped webs may be preserved in their original form by spraying them with shellac and then allowing them to dry before removal from their supports. Many spiders' webs are very beautiful, and all are characteristic of the species to which they belong, so that, from a scientific standpoint, their permanent preservation is very desirable.—Harper's Weekly.

A Country Doctor's Record.

Dr. James Morris, who was one of the oldest medical practitioners in Scotland, has just died at Dunfermline. When he celebrated his jubilee as a doctor some ten years ago he made this statement: "During my fifty years in practice I have attended 50,000 patients, administered chloroform 10,000 times with absolute immunity from fatal results, had 5,000 births (1,000 consecutive cases without a death), made about 1,000,000 visits and traveled about 500,000 miles." Not a bad record for a country medical man.—Westminster Gazette.

Skyscrapers.

The second generation of skyscrapers in lower Manhattan has appeared. The twenty story building at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets is now being torn down as obsolete in order to make way for a new and much higher thirty-two story structure. New York skyscrapers may soon be classified like battleships—at the end of ten years "obsolescent," at the end of twenty "obsolete" and then the scrap heap.—Springfield Republican.

The German military authorities will use the services of 120 civilian motor cyclists in the army manoeuvres in September.

MOOSE HUNT TO ORDER

HOW VAN HORNE FURNISHED SPORT TO TWO WRITERS.

He Didn't Know Where to Find a Moose, But He Warned Them Not to Make a Slaughter — Turned Them Over to Pat Murphy and Patrick Did the Rest—Five Moose Just Off the Railway Track!

Sir William Van Horne, of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, once told Mr. J. R. Barrett how he furnished Julian Ralph and the late Frederick Remington a complete moose hunt, which was duly described and depicted in Harper's Magazine, a few years ago. True the moose were there, were shot, and photographed, but how they happened to be there is another story. Mr. Barrett quotes Sir William as follows in The Bellman, (Minneapolis):

I was sitting in my office one day when two cards were brought in bearing the names of Julian Ralph and Frederick Remington. I knew the names and told my secretary to show the gentlemen in. They came, and presented a letter from Harper's Magazine, from which it appeared that they had been sent, the one to write and the other to illustrate a Canadian moose hunt. The editor of Harper's Magazine asked me to show them any courtesies which would assist them in their object.

Now I hadn't a notion whether there was a single blest moose along the whole line of the Canadian Pacific, but I wasn't going to say so to two men from New York. So——

"I understand, gentlemen," I said, "that you have come here to shoot moose." They said that was the case.

"Well, now," I continued, "I suppose that I can take it for granted that you are gentlemen and have the proper sporting instinct. If I turn you loose you are not going to go slaughtering our moose and filling the woods with blood?"

No, no, no; they wouldn't think of such a thing.

"You don't propose to decimate our herds of these noble animals?"

"Why certainly not."

"I presume that one good bull moose apiece would satisfy you?" And their eyes glistened as they said that indeed it would. "On that understanding," I said, "I'll give you a letter to our agent at Mattawa."

The reason why I chose him was because if there was a moose to be found in Canada Pat Murphy was the man to find it when told to. If there wasn't a moose in the country, I knew he could take a joke. So I wrote:

Dear Murphy.—This will introduce to you Frederick Remington, the well-known artist, and Julian Ralph, the equally well-known writer, who have come in the interest of Harper's Magazine to describe and illustrate a moose hunt. They have promised not to kill too many of the noble animals, but will be content with getting one good bull moose apiece. I trust to you to see that they get them. Yours, etc.

Now it was up to Murphy.

I had forgotten all about the matter in the press of business, when a couple of weeks or so later, the same two cards were brought to me again and once more I met Mr. Ralph and Mr. Remington. They were delighted. Had they got their mooses, or meese, or whatever it is? Of course they had. They had had a simply glorious time, and couldn't say enough in thanks to me or in praise of Murphy. In due course, the article appeared in Harper's. One of them sent me a copy, and a rattling good article it was, pictures and all. But what puzzled me was how it had all happened. Murphy told me some time later.

When they arrived with my letter he didn't know whether there was a moose within five hundred miles. He hadn't heard of one for ten years, but he wasn't going to give us away to any New Yorkers any more than I was. Besides, I had said that he was to see that these men got their moose, and he proposed to do it.

He made excuse that his best hunters happened to be away for a few days and it would be necessary to wait till they came back. Then he sent out runners. He sent them to every point of the compass to start the Indians beating the woods towards Mattawa. I don't know how many Indians and others he got to work, but they beat for all that was in them. From somewhere up in the Arctic regions, from east to west, the entire population of the country came converging toward Mattawa, with a distinct understanding all along the line that any man who let a moose through would be shot out of hand.

It took six days, but they got 'em. By the evening of the sixth day, men came in and told Murphy that they had five moose, two bulls and three cows, safely cornered ten miles off in the woods. So Murphy announced that his hunters had come back, and would be ready to go out next day.

They went. The skill those men showed in reading the moose signs impressed Ralph and Remington as simply marvellous. Within a few hours they were on the track of a herd of five, and early next morning one of the ambitions of the lives of both was realized, for each had shot with his own rifle a good Canadian bull moose.

Within a few miles of the line of the railroad, to strike off at random into the woods and pick up moose as if they were prairie-chickens—what a paradise for hunters!

A Link of Empire.

Another link in the bonds of Empire was forged the other day when the Tasmanian Government presented a gold watch, suitably inscribed to Constable Walter Lygo, who, while on duty in London, some months ago found a young Tasmanian seaman named George Johansen in a starving condition and assisted him with both food and money. The people on the West Coast of Tasmania, where Johansen's parents lived, desired to make some recognition of Constable Lygo's kindness and opened a subscription for the purchase of a testimonial.

FREIGHT DEMORALIZED

Passenger Service First Says Fitzhugh of G.T.R.

Neither Side Pays Attention to Offer of Hon. W. L. M. King to Arbitrate—The Men Are Jubilant and Claim That Things Are Going Their Way—Three Hundred and Fifty Wabash Men Reported Out.

Montreal, July 20.—It is somewhat early to make predictions as to the outcome, but several features of the Grand Trunk strike became prominent at the end of the first twenty-four hours.

In the first place, no attention has been paid on either side to an intimation from Ottawa that Hon. Mackenzie King would, if requested, be glad to offer his good offices.

Then it can be accepted as granted that the C.P.R. will not allow a strike to take place on their system, and it is generally understood that the G.T.R. conductors and trainmen's executive did not show their hand before being quite well aware that they would not nave to engineer a strike on the rival road. There will, therefore, be one great strike and nothing more, although friends of the Grand Trunk are already blaming the C.P.R. for what they call want of backbone.

Two short interviews took place between C.P.R. Vice-President McNichol and Messrs. Murdock and Berry, and although the former would not say anything, the men were sufficiently jubilant to leave the impression that things were going handsomely their way. In fact, the end of the negotiations appears to be in sight.

As to the passenger service on the Grand Trunk, all of the through passenger trains are runnning, although some of them are a little late, and it is generally understood that the men in charge are good hands and that they have been carefully selected. In fact, the statement is made that the G.T.R. had hundreds of men in hiding all over the system, waiting till the last word was said. This, however, is contradicted to a certain extent by the fact that the suburban trains are about at a standstill. The Toronto train, which leaves at 10.30 p.m., was 10 minutes late, but it appeared to be manned all over by experienced hands. There is very little excitement at Bonaventure Station over the strike.

Vice-President Fitzhugh said last evening that they were going to let the freights look after themselves till the passenger service was properly cared for, and to this latter end the best efforts of the company will be directed.

"This is not a strike of a day," he added, "but we are making preparations to fight the strikers all along the line, and we are not going to lose."

In a few days he expected to have the passenger trains running all right, and then the freight service would be attended to. They had not time to discuss details, but the public, he declared, might rest assured that everything possible would be done for the road's customers, passengers first and freight next.

As for the suburban service, that is pretty tightly tied up, and people are coming into the city and leaving either on the electrics or by the C.P.R., which, by the way, is reaping a rich harvest.

The mails, however, are suffering very considerable delay, and Deputy Postmaster Gaudry is complaining bitterly that his men have twice as much to do as on ordinary days.

A good many people have to do without their milk, and it will probably be worse before it is better.

The men announce that 350 men have gone out from the Wabash Railway, and this, of course, elates them very much.

It goes without saying that the ramifications of the Grand Trunk are so extended that the sympathy here is generally with the company, but from all that can be learned from along the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont systems, the feeling is sharply in favor of the strikers.

When your correspondent seen Vice-President Murdoch of the Trainmen, that gentleman appeared to be well satisfied. He said:

"We were somewhat dubious when going into this strike, but everything is working fine, and with the 350 men out on the Wabash, the total number of men our reaches 4,000. As a matter of fact, practically all the men employed in the train and yard service between Portland and Chicago are on strike."

Freight Is Stalled.

Toronto, July 20.—Freight traffic is utterly demoralized on the Grand Trunk System. Carloads upon carloads of fruit and other perishable stuff that was accepted before 9.30 Monday night are stalled along the line between Toronto and Sarnia. The great livestock export trade from Chicago which was shipped over the Grand Trunk has been diverted to other lines and it is said by a minor official that this traffic will be lost for years to the company. The C.P.R. will, it is said, get a considerable slice of this trade under a long contract and will transport the exporters to the port of Montreal.

But the passenger service seems to have recouped remarkably last night from the chill it took so suddenly night before last.

This is a fair size-up of the results of the first day of the strike of the Grand Trunk conductors, trainmen and yardmen. Locally the men are confident they'll win and claim that the strikers are sticking like glue. On the other hand, the company's officials say that several conductors who went out in the middle (Toronto) division have come back, that a number of conductors refused to go out, and that every train is now manned by a qualified conductor through either of these sources or through the engagement of men who had been previously dismissed from the service "for reasons."

Shippers Stand to Lose.

With regard to the loss of perishable goods through delays in transportation, it is the shipper who must bear the burden, since the railways assume no responsibility at all in the matter. This makes the situation very serious for the shipper, especially for the fruit shippers. The Grand Trunk does the bulk of the transportation of fruit in the Niagara Peninsula, and the fruit-growers are wearing a worried look.

The strike could not have occurred at a worse time for them, since the season for fruit is at its height. Shippers of dairy products are also likely to lose sleep at nights if they have to depend upon the Grand Trunk.

Gas Works Blow Up.

Friedrichshaven, Germany, July 20.—The gas works of the Zeppelin Airship Co. were demolished yesterday and several persons were injured.

The managers of the plant were not present at the time, and the cause of the accident has not been ascertained. Shortly before noon the gasometer burst and the surrounding walls were blown to a great distance. Several cottages in the vicinity fell in heaps of ruins, while other nearby buildings, which held to their foundations, lost their windows.

The detonation was heard for many miles around, causing a panic in the district, and even those residing on the opposite side of Lake Constance.

Puts It Up to Aldermen.

New York, July 20.—Mayor Gaynor put the question of the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures squarely up to the aldermen yesterday. In a message to the aldermanic board, the mayor declares that there is no law at present to prevent the showing of the pictures here. He points out that the aldermen have the power under the charter, however, to make it a penal offence to exhibit such pictures.

The mayor's message was referred to a committee.

WOODSTOCK SCANDALS

One Minister Has Left Town and Another Is Arrested.

Rev. W. H. McLeod Is Given a Long Holiday From His Pastorate of First Baptist Church, Accused of Being Too Intimate With Girls In Congregation—Colored Minister Is Arrested on Charge of Seduction.

Woodstock, July 20.—The pastor of the First Baptist Church given his holidays, with orders never to return because of the circulation of certain rumors as to his associations with two prepossessing young ladies of his church, and the allegation against a colored Methodist preacher, against whom the charge is laid of having illicit connection with a girl between 14 and 16 years of age, constitute the sensations in this city.

No specific charge has been laid against Rev. Warren H. McLeod of the Baptist Church, but to the deacons of the church his indiscretions, which he is said to have admitted to them, have been sufficient to warrant them asking for his resignation. This they expect to receive from Chicago, for which city Mr. McLeod and family left last Friday.

What the deacons of the church were unable to justify in the former pastor's conduct was his associations with at least two young ladies. Although quite ready to believe his story that he had no immoral relations with them, they took the view that kissing, hugging and fondling young ladies was not commendable in a minister of the gospel and especially one who is married.

It was at a meeting of the deacons last Thursday night that Rev. Mr. McLeod was confronted with the rumors, and that the deacons were pretty certain he had been indiscreet was evident from the fact that the father of one of the young ladies was present and had informed them that his daughter had acknowledge to him that Mr. McLeod had been guilty of grave indiscretions. The girl's father is a prominent member of the church.

The minister, when asked by the deacons as to his conduct, is said to have collapsed, and admitted that he had been foolish. He would not admit that he had been guilty of any wrong towards either of the young ladies.

Rev. Mr. McLeod came to Woodstock from Amherst, N.S., where he was raised, a year ago last April. He received his college education in Chicago. He is about 34 years of age, is married, and has two children, both girls. Previous to leaving here, his wife was ill in the hospital, having undergone an operation, but was fully recovered when they left. It is said that she was entirely innocent of the rumors about her husband and ignorant of the trouble he has had with the church deacons.

What action the church committee will take is yet to be decided. If they should deem fit they can refuse to give Mr. McLeod a letter of release, which constitutes his credentials to become the pastor of any other church. It is argued by some members, however, that if they accept his resignation, the letter must be delivered to him.

Colored Preacher Accused.

The colored pastor against whom the serious charge has been laid of seducing Martha Ann Selby, colored, under 16 years of age, is Rev. James Davis. Information was laid Monday by the girl's mother, Mrs. William Selby, who resides near the church at which Davis was pastor. Davis left here before the information was laid, having stated to his congregation that he was going to take charge of a church in Brantford. It is thought that he is in Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Davis some time ago raised a big kick because he was not admitted into the Ministerial Association, and only last week the association apologized to him through the press for their failure to invite him into the association.

Davis Arrested In Toronto.

Toronto, July 20.—Last night Detectives Archibald and Mitchell gathered in Rev. James A. Davis, now pastor of the British Methodist Episcopal Church at 97 Chestnut street, who came to this city two weeks ago from Woodstock. Davis was got at 135 Lindsay avenue, where he is boarding. He was delivering an address to a select supper party when taken. He is 52 years of age and has a wife and child in Woodstock. He is a regularly ordained minister, not very dark in color, and has been preaching for 18 years.

Fled From Burning Vessel.

New York, July 20.—On fire and deserted by her crew, the tugboat C. F. Roe of Brooklyn, was picked up by the tugboat Regent on the Lower Bay, off Sewarn, N.J., yesterday. The captain and engineer of the Roe escaped from the burning vessel in a lifeboat, after they had tried in vain to extinguish the flames, while the two members of the crew jumped overboard in the first excitement and managed to swim ashore.

U. S. Catholics and King's Oath.

London, July 20.—Fourteen million American Catholics, members of the Catholic Federation of the United States, have sent a respectful but earnest protest to King George pointing out that part of the accession oath which the King takes is insulting to Catholics.

Elevator Cage Fell on Him.

Stratford, July 20.—A lad, aged 15 years, named Joseph Smith, employed by the Corcoran Tea Co., was almost instantly killed last evening when the cable of the elevator at the warehouse broke, letting the cage fall on the unfortunate boy.

Killed In Chicago.

Brantford, July 20.—Word was received yesterday of the death of Stanley Merrill, a Brantford man, who met death in Chicago by coming into contact with a live wire in an electrical works there.

Soft paint brushes will not be deformed if they are suspended in cleaner liquids by clamps made of clothespins instead of being allowed to stand on the bristles.

MINERS ARE HOMELESS.

Forest Fires Around Nelson, B.C., Wipe Out Mine Houses.

Nelson, B.C., July 20.—Bush fires, which on Saturday night were believed to be under control, have been blazing with terrible ferocity, causing at least four deaths and enormous damage to property. The most serious loss is reported from Kaslo distdict. The Towns of Whitewater is blotted off the map. All the buildings at McGuigan have been destroyed. The Lucky Jim, Rambler and other mines have lost their buildings. Three hundred miners, with their families, have lost all their possessions. The Powers' Lumber Co. camp has been completely destroyed, with timber and cordwood, and several valuable teams that were literally roasted alive.

The Great Northern is a severe sufferer. At McGuigan ten freight cars were consumed, bridges have been burned, and at least $100,000 worth of timber belonging to the company, consumed. The Washington, Utica and Rico mines were reported safe. The dead were Charles Norman, S. Pierson of Sandon; George Chisly and David Patterson. Edward Lucas is missing. The dead men took refuge in the tunnel of the Lucky Jim mine, where they were overpowered by smoke.

In response to a hurried summons for aid, rescue trains were despatched from Kaslo. They were unable to pass Bear Lake, but returned crowded with panic-stricken men, women and children, who are now being cared for by the citizens of Kaslo. A number are suffering from the effects of smoke, and are in hospital.

Accounts In Bad Shape.

New Westminster, B.C., July 20.—According to the report of Auditor M. B. Cotsworth, who has been investigating the finances of the city, a state of affairs of a most unsavory character has been disclosed.

"Most of the account books," said the auditor, "evidenced the lack of both system and thoroughness. Errors were frequent, but could have been avoided.

"I regret to find that the allowances of unauthorized rebates have prevailed to a very serious extent during the past six years, thus losing the city such large amounts as may be estimated in the respective departments from the following basis:

"From city taxes, $14,327; lighting, $16,115; water, $24,815; total, $55,257, after allowing for special rebates duly authorized by council.

"Part of these rebates have apparently been allowed to some ordinary taxpayers, along with the more regular schemers, through the laxity with which the city authorities and officials unwarrantably extended the dates for discounts or rebates beyond those definitely fixed by the respective bylaws which only the ratepayers by collective vote had power to alter."

Guelph Also Interested.

Guelph, July 20.—Guelph will be represented at the banquet which will be tendered Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, at Goderich, on Aug. 8.

Mr. Pugsley's visit to Goderich is to investigate conditions with respect to the harbor and to look into the request from that town for the deepening of the harbor and the enlargement of the wharf. This is a matter in which Guelph is interested as much as Goderich, said Acting Mayor Rudd, who added: "We have it from the manager of the elevator company at Goderich that if the needed improvements to the harbor at Goderich were carried out, there would be a great deal of western wheat handled there. It would mean, he tells me, that at least nine big wheat trains a day would pass over the Guelph Junction Railway from Guelph to Goderich during the wheat season. The revenue to the City of Guelph from its junction line would then be very materially increased."

Better Freight Facilities.

Ottawa, July 20.—In an effort to better their freight-handling facilities in Ottawa, the Canadian Pacific Railway yesterday accepted options on property valued approximately at $125,000 in the district bounded by Sussex and Dalhousie streets. Negotiations for the purchase of the different parcels of land have been going on for the past week, and yesterday morning the first of the options was accepted. The land-holders have all accepted the terms of the C.P.R., and the only thing that now remains to be done to complete the purchase is the signing of the deeds, which are now in the hands of the C.P.R. attorneys in this city.

Elaborate Suicide.

Port Arthur, July 20.—Tying a shotgun to a tree, attaching a string to the trigger, blindfolding himself and then pulling the trigger, sending a charge of buckshot into his breast, is how Peter Kurts committed suicide last Wednesday in a garden at the rear of his shack on his homestead in Dorion Township.

The body was found four days later by neighbors, whose suspicions were aroused by his non-appearance. His age was 20. He was unmarried and came here from Duluth.

Japanese Tariff Goes Up.

Tokio, July 20.—An Imperial decree issued yesterday fixes the date on which the new tariff will go into effect on July 17, 1911. Great Britain and ten other countries have sent notice of their intention to abrogate their existing commercial treaties with Japan on that date.

Killed While Operating Hay Fork.

Brockville, July 20.—W. D. Copeland, a farm hand employed by Wm. Paterson of Fairfield, was driving a horse operating a hay fork. The breaking of the whiffletree struck him over the heart with such force as to kill him.

Drowned In Canal Lock.

Cornwall, July 20.—Joseph Boyer one of the lockmen at Lock 17 on the Cornwall Canal, was drowned yesterday morning about 5.30 o'clock. Mr. Boyer was opening a valve when he slipped and fell in.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

WHERE CROP IS GOOD

Premier's Party Passes Through Southern Saskatchewan.

Sir Wilfrid Visits Rapid City, Minnedosa, Birtle, Langenburg, Churchbridge and Saltcoats—Laurier Tells Farmers at Birtle That on His Return He Will Be Better Able to Cope With Transportation Needs.

Langenburg, Sask., July 20.—In the interval between meetings, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's party yesterday had an excellent opportunity to see a part of the country that had not been destroyed by the sun. The section of the province traversed out of Winnipeg included the districts to the south and southwest that have been most damaged, where the farmers are daily plowing the wheat under, and sowing other grains for a crop of green cattle food in the fall.

A different aspect was presented yesterday morning, when, after leaving Brandon, the party journeyed to Chater, where it left the main line for Rapid City and Minnedosa. At both of the latter places the Premier received a welcome, and in reply spoke a few words along the line of interests which exist between the east and west. From Minnedosa, the Premier's special went over the northwestern branch of the C. P. R. to Yorkton, passing for the most part through the hilly country forming the Valley of the Little Saskatchewan to Birtle. All over this section of the province the crops present a fine appearance.

The C.P.R. is now seeking aid from the Government for a short line between Brandon and Birtle, and Hon. Mr. Graham took advantage of the trip to look over a proposed crossing and the station location in the town. The intervening country traversed by the projected line is ample to support a railway, and much territory will be opened for settlement.

At Birtle, Sir Wilfrid said that adequate transportation facilities would be the only means of securing for the farmers a proper remuneration for his toil, and he hoped as a result of his trip that he would return east a better man and more able to deal with the great questions presenting themselves for settlement.

While here Sir Wilfrid met Oliver Nichol, an old schoolmate, whom he studied with in New Glasgow 57 years ago.

Other stops were made at Langenburg, Churchbridge and Saltcoats. At Churchbridge, there were some rowdy interruptions while Sir Wilfrid was speaking. Otherwise the trip was without incident. As head of the R.N.W.M.P., an escort paraded in the evening to receive Sir Wilfrid.

He May Come Back.

Ottawa, July 20.—There was a rumor around here yesterday that if the G.T.R. strike persists, Sir Wilfrid will be back in Ottawa within four or five days.

Deprecated the Preference.

London, July 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Hon. Mr. Haldane, speaking at the inauguration of the branch Free Trade Union, deprecated the tariff reform preference as perilous to the unity of the Empire. He believed that we are only at the beginning of the unity of the Empire in such things as the Imperial general staff had now accomplished on Imperial navy, Imperial conferences, and all the things that brought the overseas dominions together, each preserving its complete freedom. We have a material medium within which the real unity of the Empire would be achieved.

To Protect Consul.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, July 20.—According to advices received at the insurgent headquarters here, conditions at Cape Gracias are unsatisfactory to foreign interests. The representative of the Nicaraguan Government in charge there is said to be anti-foreign character.

The U. S. cruiser Tacoma will sail immediately for the Cape and will leave forty marines there, if such a course proves necessary to protect Edwin W. Trimmock of New York, the United States consul.

A Youthful Anarchist.

Naples, July 20.—A boy of 13, declared to be a full-fledged and fanatical anarchist, hurled a bottle bomb at the Duke of Aosta yesterday while the prince was leisurely proceeding through the streets in his automobile. The bottle just missed the royal head, glancing along the side of the furnishings of the car, which prevented its smashing when it touched the pavement.

Elopers Deported.

Detroit, Mich., July 20.—After being held at Cleveland for two months, Mrs. Elizabeth Darton, 22 years old, of Palmyra, Ont., and Joseph Stanley, 30 years old, of Toronto, were brought to Detroit by Cameron Miller, United States immigration inspector, and deported to Windsor Monday night, where they were arrested on a charge by the woman's husband.

Earl Grey on the Irish Question.

London, July 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is stated that Earl Grey, before his departure, urged on the Unionists the desirability of settling the Irish question on federal lines. He was questioned before leaving as to whether the public house trust movement had yet spread to Canada, and he said not.

Turriff for Lieutenant-Governor.

Winnipeg, July 20.—The Telegram yesterday publishes an Ottawa despatch to the effect that J. G. Turriff, M.P., will succeed Lieut.-Governor Forget on his approaching retirement from Government House at Regina.

Bears Devastate Sheep.

Kingston, July 20.—Bears are giving settlers in Vennachair, in the northern part of the county, a great deal of trouble. Heavy loss of sheep is reported.

Made a Social Outcast.

In court circles in England it is a serious matter to incur royal displeasure. The man or woman who does so intentionally ceases to be recognized by his majesty, which means social extinction. The offender's name is struck out of the visiting list of every person who is anybody in society, and should the offender be a man he is politely informed that his resignation from his club or clubs would not be out of place. No man or woman of social repute will in future know him, and if he be in the army or navy he has no option but to resign, for he will find himself cut dead by every one of his brother officers.—London M. EASY TO FLOAT.

Simple Rules That Will Aid Those Who Want to Learn.

"It is inexcusable for cramps to cause the death of a good swimmer," remarked an old and enthusiastic swimmer.

"Any normal person can float in the water," he said. "A good swimmer can learn more easily than others, and he should learn it. There may be human bodies that will be entirely submerged if unsupported, but I doubt it, and I know that such bodies are rare.

"Probably the bodies of drowned people sink because they have taken in large quantities of water. Whether this is or is not the explanation is not important.

"With the air expelled as much as possible by ordinary breathing and with no swimming movement some part of the head will remain above the water. If the experiment is to be prolonged it is more agreeable to throw the head back and have the nose above the water, but that is a detail.

"When you are in the water you should practice floating. It is easier to float in deep than in shallow water, but until you have learned to swim prudence demands that you remain where you can stand with your head above water. Walk out until the surface is near your shoulders. You can float in a less depth, but it is more difficult. Allow yourself to fall backward. Make no effort to prevent sinking. Let your nose point to the zenith. Your head may go under water, but it will rise again. You can take my word for it, knowing that if you fall you can stand on your feet.

"If you have followed instructions you should float the first time. The important thing to remember first, last and all the time is: Hold your breath all the time unless you know you will take in air and not water.

"You who have not learned to float may be thrown into the water. You may have a few hours or a few seconds of warning. Use those few or many seconds to get control of yourself, and there are two things you should bring to the front in your thoughts. Refrain from breathing except when you know you will take in air and not water, and if a swimmer attempts to rescue you make no effort to grasp him except when and as he requests.

"If he is a wise and a good swimmer he will not allow you to do this, as an effort to grasp him will add to his labors, and he will need all his strength."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ashes From the Old Hearth.

A quaint Swedish legend concerning a cure for homesickness appears in Selma Lagerlof's book "The Girl From the Marsh Croft," translated by Velma Swanston Howard. The tradition is to the effect that if a person suffering from nostalgia took some ashes from the hearth in his or her old home and strewed them on the fire in the strange place he or she would be rid of the homesickness—an easy remedy apparently, but it had two serious drawbacks. The first was that after using the remedy in the new home one would never be content in any other place. If one were to move from the homestead to which one had borne the ashes one would always long to get back there again just as much as one had longed to get away from there. And the second drawback was that one couldn't carry ashes along every time one moved to a new place, because the remedy could be used once only. After that it lost its charm and had no effect. So that, taken all in all, it was a rather dangerous experiment to make.

Winter Home of Deer.

The winter home of the American red deer is very interesting. When the snow begins to fly the leader of the herd guides them to some sheltered spot where provender is plentiful. Here as the snow falls they pack it down, tramping out a considerable space, while about them the snow mounts higher and higher until they cannot get out if they would. From the main opening or "yard," as it is called, tramped out paths lead to the nearby trees and shrubbery which supply them with food. In this way they manage to pass the winter in comparative peace and safety.—St. Nicholas.

Family Relations.

"Who is that man you were just talking with?"

"That's my brother-in-law."

"He looks enough like you to be your own brother."

"He is my own brother. We are twins."

"Twins? Then why did you say he was your brother-in-law?"

"Because he is. I have three brothers—one in law, one in medicine and one in the army."

He Explained It.

"See here, young man," said the stern parent, "why is it that you are always behind in your studies?"

"Because," explained the youngster, "if I wasn't behind I could not pursue them."—Chicago News.

Gloomy and Peculiar.

"What is the baby crying for, my child?"

"I dunno; 'e's alw'ys crying. I never came acrawst any one wot looks upon the dark side of things as 'e does."—London Punch.

Still a Baby.

"The last time I saw him was thirty years ago, when he was a baby."

"Well, I saw him yesterday, and he hasn't changed a bit."—St. Louis Star.

The covetous man loses what he does not get.—Seneca.

PAWNSHOP LINGO.

A Business Chat Between a Customer and His Uncle.

Maybe you never had occasion to go to a pawnshop. Probably it's just as well. If you ever have gone there, though, you may have learned that the pawnshop has a lingo of its own.

Here is a conversation overheard—oh, a man told me about it—in a place on Ontario street.

A young man with a worldly wise expression had just walked in, unhooked a large gold watch from a chain and handed it to the man across the counter for inspection.

"How many do I cop on the chimer?" he inquired nonchalantly.

"Cough your figure," said the duck behind the counter.

"Would four sawbucks find you in the front parlor?"

"Not so, my cheelid. I can get a dray load of 'em for forty."

"Aw, well, pass me over sixty Mexicans, then."

"Nope. Come again. Thirty's too strong too."

"Say, bo, where do you think I gets this ticker—by findin' six out o' twelve faces in the picture?" inquired the young man with a disgusted leer. "Anyhow, twenty-five's the rock figure. That goes. Nothin' less.

"Twenty-five on a gilt dial," murmured the money lender as he wrote out the ticket and the transaction was ended.

The next customer was a red haired youth with a forehead about one and one-eighth inch high and carrying a suit of clothes under his arm.

"How often for me happy togs?" he asked, spreading them out on the counter.

"Up to you."

"'Bout four, then. They're gay ones."

"Split," said the other laconically. "Better take it down too. Can't play the high one."

"Whut—on'y a double on them giddy rags?" in a tone of injury.

"Two's the limit."

"You win." And, taking the two dollar bill and his ticket, he went his way. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DRESDEN POLICE.

They Are Permitted to Impose Small Fines on Offenders.

One advantage accrues to the respectable member of the community from the minuteness with which the Dresden police look into the affairs of every inhabitant of the city. If he is a careful man and always carries papers which may serve to establish his identity he is practically immune from the indignity of being arrested and marched off to the police station unless, indeed, he commits some especially heinous crime. Does he drive faster than the law permits, does he cross a bridge on the left hand side, he is stopped by the guardian of law and order and requested to give his name. If he has his papers with him the policeman may then and there impose a fine of from 1 to 3 marks. If then he admits that he is in the wrong and pays the fine the incident is closed. If, however, he wishes to appeal from the policeman's decision he may do so. Even in that case he is not arrested, but a day or two later he is notified to appear in court and answer to the charge against him. But then if he is found guilty the lowest fine that can be imposed is 3 marks. That this custom of permitting the policeman personally to impose small fines is little understood by foreigners is shown by a remark made by a gentleman who had lived in Germany the greater part of his life and in Dresden for a number of years. In reply to any inquiry as to whether there was ever any question of corruption in the police department he replied:

"No; none whatever as far as the higher officers are concerned. The individual men, however, may be bribed occasionally. For instance, if I were to walk on the grass in the Grossergarten and a policeman caught me at it I would give him a mark or two, and that would end the matter."

Crushed.

The late Sir Charles Hammond was addressing a meeting during a general election, at which he won a seat in Newcastle, when a man interrupted him. "Get yer 'air cut, Charlie!" he shouted.

Sir Charles, who was a magistrate, calmly adjusted his glasses and silenced the interrupter by saying, "My friend, if I am not mistaken, I have been the means of having your hair cut before today."—London Tatler.

Chastened.

A Wall street broker, turning the corner of Broad street, saw a friend coming down the steps which lead out of the office of a well known financier. This departing caller had a chastened and bored expression on his handsome face, and the Wall street broker inquired the cause. With thoughtful deliberation his friend replied:

"I just have been experiencing the unconscious insolence of conscious wealth."—New York Press.

Easier.

"Better take a hardwood table ma'am. It is the fashionable thing." the dealer said.

"No," said the young woman; "baby will soon be old enough to hammer, and he never could drive a nail into hard wood. I'll take a plain pine table."—New York Journal.

A FEAT OF HORSEMANSHIP.

Threading a Needle While Riding at Full Gallop.

Some amazing feats of horsemanship have been performed by cowboys and Indians, not to speak of those astonishingly expert Cossacks, but it is doubtful if these have ever exceeded the feat of a Rif irregular cavalryman.

Cossacks have been seen to snatch a baby from its mother's arms at full gallop, toss it into the air, catch it and repeat the performance. Indian riders in the far west have sprung from their horses' backs while the animals were moving at full gallop, picked up arrows and remounted instantly in a standing posture. But who ever heard of a Cossack, an Indian or a cowboy threading a needle while at full gallop?

The horsemen of the Rif coast use small mounts, slight, but quick and wiry, of thoroughbred Arabian barb type. Those of the irregular cavalry perform all manner of charges and evolutions. They will throw their swords and matchlocks into the air, catching them by the hilts and stocks. On one occasion, by way of offering some new and unusual entertainment to a French officer visiting that region, it was announced that one rider would attempt the needle threading feat.

A needle and a piece of thread possibly two or three feet in length were produced. They were both handed around for inspection. The needle was a cambric one and the thread fifty or sixty fine.

The rider galloped his mount down the sand about 400 yards or so. He finally wheeled his horse and remained stationary, facing his audience. The man who held the needle and thread waved them in his hand and rode toward the other. When he had covered about two-thirds of the distance he halted and waved his hand to the farther one. Immediately the latter spurred his horse into a gallop and came toward the audience at full speed. As he passed the other he took the needle and thread from his companion, bent over for a moment and pulled up when he reached the visiting Frenchman, holding the threaded needle triumphantly over his head.—St. Louis Republic.

His Own Hands.

A fashionable painter, noted for his prolific output, was discussing at a studio tea in New York a recent scandal in the picture trade.

"Look here, old man," said a noted etcher, "do you paint all your own pictures?"

"I do," the other answered hotly, "and with my own hands too."

"And what do you pay your hands?" the etcher inquired. "I'm thinking of starting an art factory myself."

Awaiting Her Chance.

Maud—I do wish Tom would hurry up and propose.

Ethel—But I thought you didn't like him.

Maud—I don't. I want to get rid of him.—Boston Transcript.

Housekeeper's Reason.

"What is your chief objection to moving pictures?"

"The dust that has accumulated behind them."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Because the native two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1914.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

Masonic Grand Lodge Was Very Hard At Work

DISTRICT DEPUTIES ELECTED LAST NIGHT — GRAND OFFICERS ELECTED THIS MORNING — MANY EXCELLENT REPORTS PRESENTED BY COMMITTEES — ST. CATHARINES THE NEXT PLACE OF MEETING.

Masonic enthusiasm was at its height to-day when the vote was taken for the Grand Officers. The elections for the districts took place last and many delegates went home on the night trains to Hamilton and Toronto.

The Registration Committee's report shows 635 delegates present.

There are 263 lodges represented and 141 unrepresented. In all 404 lodges were represented. 189 by officers, 74 by proxy and 79 by Past Masters. The total vote was 1192 and a clear majority of these ballots were necessary to election.

The elections by acclamation were:

M. W. Bro. D. F, MacWatt, Sarnia, Grand Master

R. W. Bro. Aubrey White, Toronto, Deputy Grand Master.

M. W. Bro. E. T Malone, Toronto, Grand Treasurer

W. Bro. Lewis R. Terwilligar, Belleville, Grand Secretary.

The special committee on Foreign Correspondence advised against the recognition of the Grand Lodges of Turkey, Roumania and Brazil.

His Honor M. W. Bro. J. M, Gibson, Past Grand Master, and Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, was loudly applauded yesterday when he read the report of the Committee on the Grand Master's address, submitted by himself and Past Masters, M' W. Bros A. T. Freed of Hamilton, and Judge Harding of Lindsay. He eulogized Grand Master MacWatt for his efforts and mentioned the fact that not since the days when M. W. Bro. John Ross Robertson, of Toronto, was Grand Master, has there been anything like the work done that has been accomplished during the year. The report states that it was almost a physical impossibility to follow on the work done by Past Grand Master Robertson, who imparted enthusiasm into every lodge in the jurisdiction, but in the present Grand Master, the Craft in Canada has a ruler, that for work has challenged M. W. Bro. Robertson for first place. The report commends every thing mentioned in the address by the Grand Master, and extols his merits as a man and a Mason.

CONDITION OF MASONRY.

Col. W. N. Ponton, chairman of the Committee on Condition of Masonry, commends the Grand Master for the good work accomplished and the untiring efforts, entailed in the visits he has made to 314 lodges. The committee suggests that more consideration be given applications for initiation and gives figures showing rapid growth in some lodges, and asks if the growth is fair to the lodge or the candidate. One lodge initiated 63 giving all three degrees; another 39 and a third 38, while a fourth had 33.

The fact that $32.000 is outstanding in arrears for dues is regretted. The committee also utters a warning word about the practice of having too many functions, such as Irish Night, Canadian Night, Scotch Night, Birthday Military Night, and Ladies Night. It hopes that Craft gatherings will not become honeycombed with too much dramatic and emotional features and that Masons will not prefer rhetoric to reason. Special mention is made of University Lodge, Toronto, one of the youngest, dedicated on June 23rd. The fact that Toronto University has 3800 past graduates is looked upon as an indication of the success and intellectual strength of the lodge.

THE BENEVOLENCE COMMITTEE.

M. W. Bro. John E Harding, in his report of the Benevolence Committee, commends the charity of those who have contributed the $74,000 to the semi-Centennial Fund, and asks that the report of the Benevolence Committee be read in all lodges on a stated occasion. The recommendation is made for the continuation of the Masonic Relief Association of the United States and Canada. It shows that 413 applications were made for assistance, 213 through lodges amounting to $15,779 and 217 through local boards amounting to $11.600, while special grants totalled $675, making the outlay for the year, $33,767, adding the new interim grants made. There were 276 applications received from widows, 264 of whom were provided for, while 86 applications on behalf of Masons' Orphans were taken care of, as well as 46 Indigent Masons who are disabled either by old age or disease.

"It may be interesting to know the ages of some of our people," says the report. "There are 53 between 74 and 75 years of age; 35 between 75 and 79; 22 are between 80 and 84; 10 are between 84 and 89, and seven are over 90." The report appeals to the members for the kindly consideration of all such cases.

The Inspector's report is appended to the report of the committee. R. W. Bro. J, B, Nixon, states in this that the money distributed by Grand Lodge does more practical good than any similar amount paid out in this country from one end to the other. It is estimated that for the next year, $40,000 will be required for benevolent purposes.

DISTRICT DEPUTIES ELECTED.

The election for the twenty-two Masonic Districts in the jurisdictions of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A. F. and A. Kenny, of the Tabernacle church, was the officiating minister. Miss Ruth Bateman, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, whilst Mr. Leon Walmsley, did honors for the groom. After the ceremony the guests were handsomely entertained. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and appropriate gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Embury left later in the evening, by steamer North King, for a trip to Rochester and other places. Their many friends in the city will wish for them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

BOTH SIDES BLUFFING

Utmost Optimism Expressed by G.T.R. and Strikers.

No Effort Is Being Made to Run Freights and Many Passenger Trains Are Cancelled — First Violence Occurs In Sherbrooke, Que., and Niagara Falls, Where Strike-breakers Are Mobbed.

Montreal, July 21.—There is no doubt that a great deal of bluffing is being indulged in both by the strike leaders and the railway officials. For instance, Vice-President Murdock declares most emphatically that the trainmen will not arbitrate, even if Sir Wilfrid Laurier came back from the West and asked them to give their case to an independent party, while Vice-President Fitzhugh of the G.T.R. states that by Saturday the backbone of the strike will be broken.

It is, of course, very difficult for anyone here to size up the situation, as naturally nothing is given out by the representative leaders that will endanger their cause. One thing is sure, however, after yesterday's developments the men who were turned out of the shops are blaming the strikers for what has befallen them, consequently sympathy is rather on the side of the company. At Bonaventure Station last night there was no appearance of a strike, and trains are arriving and departing with very near their accustomed regularity. This, however, is when one is not behind the scenes. The suburbans began to move at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, the train for Vaudreuil being the first to get out of the Bonaventure Station, and the officials say that they will all be on the move by to-night. In fact, they claim that it is all right to-day, but this is a claim that cannot be justified, as men who formerly traveled to Lachine and other points by the G.T.R. are now using the electric.

The feature of the day was the trainmen's decision that, now that the gauntlet had been thrown down, they would not arbitrate. Mr. Murdock was sure that this idea of arbitration was a trick on the part of the company to make friends for, if it went out that Mr. Murdock had declined to treat with people from the Department of Labor, for instance, a good many people might blame them for not doing so, hence his desire to avoid any false position that the company might want to force upon them.

"Everything is going splendidly, in view of the fact that a strike was necessary," he said late yesterday. "We have information that not three freight trains were moved on the Grand Trunk system yesterday. We know, of course, that an attempt would be made to move the passenger trains by officials, or would-be officials, but I am receiving constant messages from all over the lines to show how little success they are having even with that."

Mr. Murdoch reiterated that President Hays had not been willing to give the 51 per cent. increase awarded by the conciliation board, but that it worked out less than 13 per cent., and in many instances less than 10 per cent.

"We will win this fight by fair and square means or else lose it," he rejoined. "There will be no violence that we can prevent, and I have heard of none. Unfortunately we cannot be responsible for every individual, but we will allow no violence anywhere."

Mr. Murdoch said that no I.C.R. man would be allowed to touch freight in the G.T.R. yards.

"Will your organization do anything to help the men who were locked out of the shops?" Mr. Murdoch was asked.

"That is not part of our duty," he said. "The company locked these men out just to make trouble for us. It is not our fault, any more than it is our fault that Booth's mill in Ottawa are closed.

It was very evident yesterday that the invitation of the company to the effect that all men who would show up yesterday would be taken back at their ald status, had failed, for none of the strikers have put in an appearance, at least on this part of the system.

Riot at Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 21.—O. W. Smith, night agent of the G.T.R. here, was slugged by a mob at the N.Y.C. depot, on the American side last Tuesday evening, mistaking him for a non-union conductor. He received a bad cut over the right eye and another on the top of the head, knocked him down and rendered him unconscious.

A mob of about a hundred, principally young men, awaited the Muskoka express, which pulled in at 11.30, and began jeering and hooting those in charge of the train, and Grand Trunk officials, including Supt. C. S. Cunningham. Stones and eggs were freely used, several of the stones narrowly escaping striking Cunningham's head. The police were called, and two men sent to the depot, who escorted the official through the hooting crowd to the bridge, where he superintended the handling of the Chicago express to this side.

After the departure of the train the crowd attempted to mob Cunningham again, throwing eggs and stones.

A Conductor Mobbed.

Sherbrooke, Que., July 21.—There was considerable trouble here at the G.T.R. station Tuesday evening when the Montreal-Island Pond train arrived an hour late. There was a large crowd at the station, and when the acting conductor went to get his orders he was hooted and mobbed.

Tie on the Track.

Clinton, July 21.—An attempt was made Tuesday evening to wreck the G.T.R. northbound London train at Brucefield, near Clinton. A railroad tie was placed across the track, but was discovered and removed just before the train came along.

Muskoka Express Ditched.

Toronto, July 21.—The engine of the new Muskoka Express on the Grand Trunk, due here early this morning, was ditched just north of the Dundas street bridge, opposite the chicle factory at 1.23 this morning.

The engineer and fireman are badly scalded, perhaps fatally.

The accident was caused by a spreaded rail. Both rails are curled up like a bow, over the locomotive, which is over on its side.

Two coaches were also ditched, but none of the passengers injured. A special street car brought the passengers down town.

A familiar shaving paste known as cream of almonds is made by melting one part of caustic potash into three parts of lard with enough essence of almonds added to give it a flavor.

THE SERVITUDE THEORY.

National Counsel Are Still Pleading at The Hague.

The Hague, July 21.—Continuing his argument on behalf of Newfoundland, before the tribunal, S. S. Ewart endeavored to show that even if the United States had been accorded fishing servitude by the treaty of 1818, the exercise of such servitude was susceptible to modifications by Britain by regulations or laws which were not incompatible with the treaty. There was no clause in the treaty obliging Britain to submit such regulation to the United States for assent, attempts to frame regulations in common had failed.

The servitude theory put forward by the United States is to be dealt with by Attorney-General Robson.

The tribunal expressed a desire that the contending parties should communicate within one week detailed copies of the laws and regulations to which they object, together with a statement of their objections, which, it was stated, would be transmitted to the other side, in order that the latter might reply to them in the course of the following week.

S. J. Elder, for the United States, then opened his speech, arguing that the cause of the arbitration proceedings was the attitude of Premier Bond in introducing during his tenure of office as Premier fiscal legislation, the object whereof was to force the United States to ratify the disadvantageous treaty. Previous to 1905 Newfoundland had not objected to American fishermen who exercised their rights in accordance with the treaty of 1818 to such legislation, but in 1905, when the Hay-Bond treaty was submitted to the United States Senate, Premier Bond introduced a new bill concerning foreign craft, which tended to deprive American fishermen of rights hitherto enjoyed by them.

Victory Unequivocal.

Cincinnati, O., July 21.—Labor leaders are jubilant to-day over the Bucks Stove & Range Co. victory, declared to be the greatest triumph in the history of organized toilers. Even manufacturers employing non-union help look glum and admit that the submission of the big St. Louis stove concern, after a sturdy fight of six years, is a body blow to their interests.

The victory for the labor union side is unequivocal. The Bucks Stove & Range Co. flatly agrees to abandon its open-shop policy and hereafter employ none but union men. This action is the more remarkable because instead of the American Federation of Labor winning its union fight by stages beginning with its weakest enemies, it has won over the corporation that for years was the hope and the admiration of open-shop manufacturers.

Flames Enveloped Her.

New York, July 21.—Hundreds of spectators, among whom were many women, were horror-stricken while attending a performance in a Belleville, N.J., park, when Henrietta Halkviet member of a fire diving troup, failed to escape scathless as usual when diving with oil-saturated and burning clothing into a tank of water in the park. Oil that clung to the surface of the water as she dove into the tank become ignited, and the flames enveloped her as she rose to the surface.

The young woman struggled to get out of the tank, but collapsed from pain, and had to be rescued by her fellow-performers. Her hair was ignited and her neck and face badly burned, before her still flaming clothing could be torn from her. At the hospital to which she was taken, it was said that her condition was serious.

There were four others in the boat at the time, and but one of the party could swim. They were rescued by an Indian with a rowboat.

DID MUTE SET FIRES?

Remarkable Story Comes From Gimli, Manitoba.

Deaf and Dumb Lad, Aged Thirteen, Is Believed to Have Started Fires In Hope of Being Sent Back to Institution In Winnipeg—No One Has Been Able to Teach Him the Sign Language.

Winnipeg, July 21.—The provincial police have evolved a remarkable theory which they hope to prove in court in the case of a deaf mute boy, aged thirteen, recently arrested and committed for trial on a charge of incendiarism at Gimli, Man., as the result of an investigation into six mysterious fires which destroyed the houses of settlers there.

Until a little over a year ago, the boy was a young savage, unable to communicate with anyone except by natural gestures, as no one in the settlement understood or could teach him the language of mutes. The result was a backward development of mentality, and when the boy at the age of twelve was taken to the deaf and dumb institute at Winnipeg, he was like a child of six in understanding. He ran away from the institute four times, thinking he had been deserted forever by his family but when sent home for a week and then brought back, he was thoroughly satisfied, and apparently feared nothing but that he might be taken home again. Shortly after being sent home for the summer holidays, some weeks ago, incendiary fires terrorized the settlement at Gimli, and the boy was finally arrested. The police theory is that he deliberately fired the houses in the hope of getting into trouble and being sent back to the institute at Winnipeg.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs Lower on American Exchanges—Cattle Generally Firmer.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 20.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings of live stock were 800 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs, and 500 calves. There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady at the decline noted on Monday. The offerings were fair, but the quality generally was only medium. The gathering of buyers was large and as they all wanted a few to see them over until next week, the demand was good and active trade was done, which resulted in the market being cleaned up of all stock with the exception of about 200 northwest ranchers, which were held at higher prices than butchers were disposed to pay. A few choice steers sold at 6¾c, good at 6¼c to 6½c; fairly good at 5¾c to 6c; fair at 5¼c to 5½c; and common at 4½c to 5c per lb. There were some choice cows, which sold at 5c to 5¼c, and the lower grades at from 3½c to 4¾c, while the bulls brought 3¾c per lb.

There was quite an active trade in small meats, owing to the increased offerings and the good demand for the same, and prices in consequence were well maintained. Yearlings sheep sold at 3½c to 3¾c per lb.; spring lambs at $3.50 to $5.25, and calves at $3.50 to $10 each. The market for hogs was stronger, and prices were 10c per 100 lbs. higher. The demand was good, and sales of mixed lots were made at $9.50 per hundred weighed off cars, and selected lots brought $10.15 to $10.25.

Fun on a Liner.

The Pacific liner "Orcoma," which arrived in the Mersey recently from Rio de Janeiro, had on board the largest number of passengers ever carried on a South-American liner. After the Orcoma left Rio a parliament was elected on board, and an act granting votes for women was passed. The first thing the ladies did was to issue cards on which was printed in English, Spanish and Portuguese the query: "Who do you think is the handsomest man on board?" On the following day the result of the voting caused immense excitement. The winner was a well-known Englishman on a pleasure trip from Buenos Ayres.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

TO-DAY'S SPECIALS.

Hon. Mackenzie King Says The Strike Leaders Are Both Trying to Evade the Issue

Wants Plain Answer to a Simple Question, He Says---In Case None Is Sent Government May Take Action.

(Intelligencer Special)

Ottawa, Ont., July 22.—That the replies of President Hays, of the Grand Trunk, and of Vice-President Murdock, of the Strikers' Committee, to the Government telegram yesterday, offering Government arbitration both evade the issue is the opinion of Hon. MacKenzie King, Minister of Labor.

To-day in a long telegram he pointed this out and insisted that both Hays and Murdock send plain direct answers to the simple question put by him.

Hon. Mr. King intimates that if either or both refuse they take the responsibility of such action upon themselves.

In this way the Minister of Labor has to-day put it up to the leaders in the dispute, and paved a way for such action as the Government considers necessary.

LATEST NEWS OF THE GRAND TRUNK STRIKE.

(Intelligencer Special)

Montreal, Que., July 22.—With both sides perfectly satisfied with their success according to their own statements, the fourth afternoon of the big railway strike was reached to-day.

The Company appears to be getting more trains under way as the days go by, but it is a very slow process, and manufacturers and merchants all over afflicted territory are sending hundreds of protests by mail and wire.

President Hayes this morning received telegrams from the mayors of Stratford and other cities and towns interested, calling attention to the great loss sustained by the country at large.

Vice-Pres. Murdock deplores the outrages and urges friends of the strikers to desist from all forms of violence.

London, Ont., July 22.—In dismissing to-day a case of Lord's Day agents against five employees of the International Harvester Co., charged with shipping stuff on Sunday, Magistrate Love partially agreed with the defence that the work was one of necessity, because farmers absolutely needed parts to repair harvesting machinery and gather the wheat crop.

GOTHAM'S FOUR HUNDRED HAS SPICY SENSATION.

(Intelligencer Special.)

New York, July 22.—Gotham's Four Hundred are being treated to a new kind of midsummer scandal sensation in connection with the publication of the love letters of Miss Helen Woodruff Smith, millionairess, who is being sued by Russell Griswold, also of high society, for fifty thousand dollars damages for breach of promise.

The lady's letters are full of endearing phrases and mushy talk, furnishing very entertaining reading for the breakfast tables to-day of New York society ,in which both parties are well known.

In his statement of claim, young Griswold says Miss Smith's pranks have caused him much inward pain.

Miss Smith is away on her palatial yacht, sending to New York papers wireless messages characterizing Griswold as an "ungrateful little cad," and such like phrases ,and saying their love affairs were merely "puppy love."

LANGFORD AND KAUFFMAN TO MEET IN PHILADELPHIA

(Intelligencer Special.)

Philadelphia, July 22.—Quaker City fight fans are anticipating a great fight between Sam Langford and A. J. Kauffman at the athletic club here on the 10th of August.

WARM DISCUSSION OVER KING'S REMUNERATION

(Intelligencer Special.)

London, Eng., July 22, 6 p. m., English time.—There was quite a sensation in the House of Commons this evening when George Barnes, a prominent local member, during a discussion on the additions to the King's civil list or remuneration, declared that he wouldn't support it unless the revenues from the Duchies of Lancaster and Cornwall, which now go to support Royalty, be turned into the Government exchequer.

He alleged that the system of control of the Duchies was honeycombed with abuses.

Mr. Arthur Balfour, in defending the Crown and its necessities, said that Britain should expect to pay for the upkeep of Royalty at least as much as the United States pays for its President.

Including the Duchy revenues the King's exchequer demands one million eight hundred thousand pounds.

There were other caustic comments and the debate adjourned.

BROWNLEE SAYS: "IN BEST SHAPE SINCE STRIKE BEGAN

(Intelligencer Special)

Toronto, July 22.—W. G. Brownlee, Grand Trunk transportation manager, today said: "We are in better shape this morning than at any time since the strike was called.

"We have now sufficient crews of experienced men to handle all our passenger service and a large number of conductors and brakesmen who are being examined and instructed today to put in charge of freight trains tomorrow."

Bees in Warfare.

Certain Nigerian tribes find bees very useful in warfare. The villagers on retiring before an enemy excite the bees and set them free, and painful is the experience of the man who is attacked by them in the labyrinths of cactus which surround the villages.

Work For His Sheep.

A resident of London with a taste for deviled kidneys found himself recently in a remote west of England village, where a sheep was killed about once a week. Not knowing that mutton was a luxury and kidneys, for obvious reasons, therefore, a rarity, he presented himself day after day at the village butcher's with the same request for his favorite breakfast dish. The butcher, looking upon his customer as a lunatic, bore it as long as he could, but on the fifth day said indignantly, "If you think, young man, that my sheep have nothing better to do than to lay kidneys for your breakfast you be mortal mistook."—London Saturday Review.

Famous Cricket Groundsman.

The Surrey (Eng.) Club have decided to devote the proceeds of one of the county matches at the Oval for the benefit of "Sam" Apted, who has been closely identified with the fortunes of Surrey cricket for many years. The benefit is well deserved, for Apted probably knows more about preparing a pitch than any other groundsman. He has prepared the wickets for all the Australian elevens that visited that country, and such is his care of the ground that it was once jokingly remarked that if a worm crawls over the pitch during the night it makes Apted turn in his sleep.

HELPED CANADIANS.

Beaudette, Minn., Firemen Crosses the Line to Fight Forest Fires.

Beaudette, Minn., July 22.—The forest fire which has been raging in this vicinity for the last few days has regained force. A large fire started near Rainy River yesterday and threatened to destroy the town. The Beaudette fire department has gone to the assistance, as have also the fire engines from Fort Francis.

Several settler's houses have been destroyed during the last few days, and there is also a large fire burning near Spooner, just across the river from Beaudette, which threatened to wipe out that village. The air is heavy with smoke and the ashes are falling in the town.

Sandon In Danger.

Winnipeg, July 22.—Latest report from Sandon states the town is in danger, and a train crowded with refuges is ready to leave. Three Forks, which was reported, is still in existence, although surrounded by fire. The total destruction of White Water and the destruction of McGuigan is authoritatively confirmed. Another fire is reported in the neighborhood of Rossland.

Hemmed In by Flames.

Merrill, Wis., July 22.—Several hundred persons of Bloomville and Heinemann are hemmed in by forest fires at the former town, with seemingly no means of escape. Loss on buildings is nearly $200,000.

Another Town Burning.

Spokane, Wash., July 22.—The town of Marble, on the Columbia River, about 10 miles south of the Canadian boundary, is reported to be burning. In China Creek basin the citizens have been fighting flames almost continuously since Sunday afternoon.

C.P.R. and Its Employes.

Montreal, July 22.—The C.P.R. and the delegates reached a definite agreement yesterday afternoon, several of the committee left for their homes and it is officially announced that all the difficulties between the men and the company have been got over.

There can be no doubt now that the Grand Trunk strike was precipitated as soon as it became evident that the C.P.R. were inclined to give the men about all they asked. Vice-President McNicoll confirms in fact the men's statement that the C.P.R. have given their conductors and trainmen the standard rates east of Chicago. It is understood that the men's appeal to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy had a great effect, and that there were several matters conceded by the president, which the vice-president had haggled over considerably.

Be this as it may, the trouble is over, and peace will prevail on the C.P.R. lines from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

No statement was agreed upon, as both parties say that the details would not be understood by the public.

Chatham Inquest Adjourns.

Chatham, July 22.—The inquest into the shooting of Jake Enos ended last night without anything out of the ordinary developing, and was adjourned for a week, pending the recovery of Guy Needham, the man who was slashed with a razor.

Hardware clerks told of a man answering Jackson's description buying a box of revolver cartridges during the afternoon before the murder. Circumstantial evidence seems to point to Jackson as the slayer of Enos, and that the shots were fired to revenge the slashing of Needham. All the men concerned in the killing were drinking heavily during the evening, and the opening of the quarrel was the result of Enos winning big stakes from the others at a game of dice the evening before.

Roosevelt and Ireland.

London, July 22.—T. P. O'Connor, president of the United Irish League of Great Britain, referring in the course of his regular contribution to a Sunday paper, to the rumor that the Irish question will form a part of any settlement reached in the inter-party conference over the question of the Lords' power of veto, says:

"I know that Mr. Roosevelt brought to the attention of leading men here the vast necessity for a settlement of the relations between England and Ireland, from an American viewpoint, and Mr. Roosevelt is convinced that until the Irish question is settled there will always be an element of soreness among the large masses of Americans, which must stand in the way of better relations between the two countries.

Drinking on Trains Made Illegal.

Atlanta, Ga., July 22.—The State Senate yesterday passed a bill declaring the drinking of intoxicating liquors on passenger trains a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment.

Played With Matches, Will Die.

St. John, N.B., July 22.—Annie Davis, aged 3 years, was so badly burned while playing with matches yesterday that she is now in the hospital at the point of death.

BANK MEN ARRESTED

Charges of Conspiracy Against Three Lindsay Residents.

W. R. Travers, General Manager of the Farmers' Bank and Hartley Dewart, K.C., Are Investigating an Alleged Case of Conspiracy to Harm Lindsay Branch of Farmers'.

Lindsay, July 22.—W. R. Travers, general manager of the Farmers' Bank, was in the city yesterday, accompanied by Hartley Dewart, K.C., laying the facts with reference to an alleged case of conspiracy before Crown Attorney Devlin and Police Magistrate Jackson.

As a result of the interview, the crown attorney instructed proceedings to be taken before Police Magistrate Jackson against A. B. McGill, former manager of the Farmers' Bank here; J. J. Fleury, who was a clerk in the same bank, and J. L. Coulter, until recently manager of the branch of the same bank in Nestleton. Mr. McGill is now the manager of the Home Bank in Lindsay, and the other two are clerks in the same institution.

The statements that have been laid before the crown attorney make an interesting story. It appears that in the month of June last all these gentlemen occupied their respective positions with the Farmers' Bank, but Mr. McGill resigned on the 29th, and the same day a branch of the Home Bank was opened in Lindsay, next door to the Farmers' Bank, manned by the former employes of the latter institution.

Immediately a large number of checks, aggregating thousands of dollars, were presented to the Farmers' Bank for payment, and as fast as the money was withdrawn it was deposited next door with the Home Bank.

This sudden change in the financial leanings of the former depositors in the Farmers' Bank was felt to be due to something more than an hypnotic influence on the part of the erstwhile manager. Mr. Travers caused investigations to be made by the Canadian Detective Bureau, which disclosed allegations upon which he has been advised by counsel to lay the information and take the proceedings.

The result of the investigation is said to show that the depositors who withdrew their deposits to the extent of $60,000, and almost caused a run upon the bank, were in every instance influenced to do so by misrepresentations and misstatements.

The result is that the gentlemen who are accused of having made these statements find themselves faced with a charge of conspiracy to defraud and injure and injuriously affect the financial position of the Farmers' Bank. Mr. McGill was arrested yesterday and gave bail in the sum of $2,000 for his appearance on the 28th inst., when Fleury and Coulter will also have to appear to answer to the same charge before the police magistrate in Lindsay. Bail was fixed for the latter at $500 each.

The whole affair has caused quite a sensation in Lindsay, while the fact that the Farmers' Bank is still doing business at the old stand has certainly put a different face upon the whole matter.

Mr. Travers feels the whole matter very keenly and there is no doubt that the crown authorities will sift the matter to the bottom.

Guardians Exonerated.

Barrie, July 22.—Coroner Evans returned to Barrie last night after holding an inquest at New Lowell on Loretto Smith, a mulatto of six years, that had been living between the homes of Mrs. Mercy Mills and her son-in-law, Fred Rawn. On July 12 she was given some rough usage by Stanley Rawn, aged six years. The lad pulled her around by her legs, but the examination doctor did not think that the fatal wound could have been given in this way. It looked rather like a stone bruise or a wound from a heavy stick.

The verdict was that the child died from septic poisoning, and the jury believed that there had been no ill-treatment on the part of her guardians.

Ran Away With Boxer.

Buffalo, N.Y., July 22.—"Billy" Papke, middleweight boxer, was married Wednesday by Rev. E. T. Curtis of Niagara Square Congregational Church, to Miss Edna E. Pulver of Hamilton, Ont. Miss Pulver's family is wealthy and opposed her engagement and marriage to the boxer. They made arrangements two weeks ago for Miss Pulver and her sister, with her father and mother, to sail Wednesday for Europe, but when Papke drove up to her door in his racing auto, she jumped in and a few hours later they were across the border. Papke will sail with his bride for Australia.

Escaped With His Life.

St. Thomas, July 22.—A serious fire occurred at Highgate, a village on the Michigan Central Railroad, about 20 miles west of St. Thomas, at an early hour yesterday morning. The fire started in the cellar of George R. Dodson's general store. Dodson barely escaped with his life.

Had to Run For Their Lives.

St. Catharines, July 22.—The family of Wilfrid Fry, on the Thorold road, had to run for their lives early yesterday. They wakened up to find the house in flames. The building was totally destroyed, the loss being about $2,000.

TIMELY TOPICS.

That unfortunate affair at the Station last night will be regretted by all good citizens, whether they are numbered among the ranks of the strikers or not.

◆ ◆ ◆

Crime and violence never yet did any cause any good. The sympathy of many people, we believe, is with the strikers, but events such as that of last night will rapidly make that sympathy wane.

◆ ◆ ◆

It is pleasant to note that those in authority believe the nasty work was done by men who are not Bellevillians, but the fact remains that the occurrence took place in Belleville and this city will get a bad advertisement in connection with it.

◆ ◆ ◆

This is not a matter of sentiment. It is a cold, hard fact, and taking that fact into consideration it behoves all concerned to see that the lawless scenes are not repeated.

◆ ◆ ◆

The authorities MUST see that order is kept, and it will be the part of wisdom for those who are responsible for the conduct of the strikers to see that the laws of the land are not broken by them. If the guilty parties are apprehended they should be severely punished. In the meantime, as before stated, let us hope that Belleville has seen the last of such lawless scenes, which can do no possible good, and are bound to do the city, and the strikers themselves, incalculable harm.

◆ ◆ ◆

In justice to the Belleville G. T. R. strikers we make this statement. A gentleman who came through the mob which attacked Donovan and McMahon, last night, states positively that there was not a local railway man among them. This seems to be a case where the local strikers may well pray "Save us from our friends."

◆ ◆ ◆

The letter from "Junius," which appears elsewhere, will be read with interest by many people at this time. It gives, in an incisive, vigorous way, the general public's view of the matter, from one point of view, at all events. Whether people agree with the writer or not, they will, we think, confess that the letter is excellently written and contains much food for thought

No change in the strike situation, says a heading. And if it keeps on long enough there won't be much change in some people's pockets.

◆ ◆ ◆

A high G. T. R. official says the backbone of the strike will be broken in a week. This may a case of the wish being dad to the thought.

◆ ◆ ◆

The rain didn't hurt the decorations much. The Red, White and Blue doesn't run for rain or anything else.

◆ ◆ ◆

"These conventions may bring a lot of money to the city," says the west Belleville philosopher, "but I haven't picked up any ten dollar bills on the street."

◆ ◆ ◆

A Toronto paper has a very lurid account of the disturbance in this city last night. The best thing that can be said of it is to class it with Mark Twain's denial of his own death some 20 years ago: "Very much exaggerated."

Graceful Letter From A Fine Old Boy.

Albuquerque, N. M., July 16th.
Col. W. N. Ponton, Secretary "Belleville Old Boys' Reunion," Belleville, Ont.

Dear Colonel,—I am just in receipt of your circular describing the grand doings of the Old Boys' celebration to be held there this month, I regret very much my inability to be present and renew my old acquaintances, with Harry Corby, John Walker, Col. Lazier, J. V. Jenkins, Col. Hambly, and many others, To express my feelings when reading the circular, would hardly do justice, it brought me back thirty two years about the time I left the Queen City on Bay Quinte, and the old cricket days, with G. Benjamin, Jim Clark, Johnny Walker Harry Smart, and others, Many were the happy times had, especially attending dance parties at Shannonville by sleigh rides, (such a pleasure as a sleigh ride we never have here.) My father, of whose death you no doubt read in the papers often in his life time, spoke of the grand times we all had there. My life since leaving good old Belleville has been one of adventure on the Frontier and in the Southwest for 30 years. My health is first class and I hope before another year goes by I can visit Belleville. I was an officer commanding a New Mexico Battalion during the Spanish War. Since have been retired for 25 years service in the National Guard as Brig-General, started in as Lieut. in 1881.

Please remember me to all the Old Boys, wishing them all a fine reunion I remain,

Ever yours truly.
JOHN BORRADAILE.

Canadian Northern's Port Hope Station.

Port Hope, July 20 — Messrs. A. M. Grantham and John Montgomery, of Toronto, were in town yesterday in connection with the construction of the C. N. R. station. Plans of the proposed building were given to several local contractors and they will submit a price of the same in a few days.

The site selected for the new station is on the west side of Hope street on the vacant lot just north of Mr. Wm. Pidgeon's residence. The offices, waiting rooms and baggage rooms will be combined, and there will be a covered passage way between the baggage room and waiting rooms. The building will be 128 feet by 31 feet, and will be constructed of brick. The roof will be slate. The interior finish of the waiting rooms is yellow pine, while the baggage rooms is laid up brick joints; no woodwork, and a cement floor. All the rooms will be in burlap and fitted out with every convenience. A wooden platform will encircle the building.

The station is to be completed by Christmas, and no doubt it will be an ornament to that section of the town.

AT THE BEEHIVE

Chas. N. Sulman.

A MILD COMPLAINT.

Say, Belshazzar's my name,
And I'm here with a kick.
I arise to proclaim
That I'm utterly sick
Of the way in which I'm Getting gossiped about.
It's a cowardly crime,
And I want it cut out!
Every time that a bunch
Of cheap loafers get tight
At a twenty course lunch
And stay up half the night
And go howling about
Till the sun's in the east
The reformers all shout,
"Bad as Belshazzar's feast!"
And when crooks get the hook
Some one's certain to bawl,
"At the handwriting look
Which appears on the wall!"
Shades of Babylon great!
It has sure got my goat,
For I'm willing to state
That my feast of such note
Could in no ways compare—
Not in one single sense—
With that Trenton affair.
I cued ladies and gents.
Nobody got gay
And flung bottles about,
And the papers next day
Didn't set up a shout,
And that stuff on the wall
Which we happened to see
Was no scandal at all.
So I say, let it be!
And next time when a crowd
Of plain rowdies and thugs
Get to cutting up loud
And fall round on the rugs
Leave me out of it, please,
And don't shout in the least
In such measures as these:
"'Twas a Belshazzar feast!"
—Paul West in New York World.

Then She Grabbed a Strap

"Madam, I would give you my seat, but I am an old man," said the gouty passenger.

"You hold your age and place remarkably well, sir," replied the woman with a grouch.

Not In His Judgment.

"The next thing in order," said the master of ceremonies, referring to the slip of paper in his hand, "is music."

"No, sir!" savagely whispered the leader of the band. "Not music! The next thing is 'Hail, Columbia!'"

Taking his station, he scowled, waved his baton, and the noise of the brasses burst forth.—Chicago Tribune.

Cause of His Death.

"Yes, I remember him," said Alkali Ike. "He died very sudden."

"Heart disease?" asked the eastern tourist.

"Waal, now, I don't know as you kin say it was the heart any more'n the club, spade or diamond. Anyway, he dealt himself four aces."—Philadelphia Press.

A Test of Sociability.

"Miss Eliza Beemis is just as nice as she can be," declared her neighbor, Mrs. Elderly, "but there's one thing about her that I don't like. She isn't sociable."

Her friend expressed surprise at this accusation and began to defend Miss Eliza.

"I know, I know," said Mrs. Elderly, breaking in, "that's all very well, but tell me this: Did you ever see her going around to the funerals? No, of course not, and so I don't see how you can call her sociable—real sociable, that is."

Lottery Methods.

An English writer declares that financial morality, imperfect as it is in our day, is superior to that of the epoch that came to an end in 1823 with the abolition of lotteries. Take a single instance. Lord North in 1779, while the American war of Independence was in progress, issued 60,000 lottery tickets, 20,000 of which were given as bribes to members of Parliament.

Early English Umbrellas.

Two centuries ago the umbrella was known and used as a sunshade. Ben Jonson and Beaumont and Fletcher alluded to it. In 1712 it was used as a rain protector. Gay in his "Trivia" speaks of the "umbrella's oily shed," which was recorded as a kind of sou'wester material more serviceable than gingham or silk, which was used in its construction at that period.

A Sure Sign.

"I see you had a perfectly lovely time at the matinee," said the unfeeling person.

"How do you know?" asked his sentimental wife.

"Because you have cried until your nose is red."

Behemoth Was Hippo.

The behemoth of the Bible is supposed to have been the hippopotamus.

A writer in a recent number of the Boy's Own Paper gives an interesting account of a visit he paid to a South Australian ostrich farm at Port Augusta. The ostriches, he says, were chiefly hatched in incubators. The eggs take 45 to 50 days. The chicks are first fed on bread crumbs, bran, and water. On the fourth day a little enclosure is made round the incubator, and the young are allowed to take exercise. They are then fed on grain, green vegetables, and water. The dangerous age is from birth to three months, after which time they generally live. When the ostrich is seven months old the first crop of feathers is ripe. At 12 months he begins to develop black feathers, and his plumage reaches perfection at the end of three years. The hen ostrich lays from 12 to 20 eggs, but if these are removed she will continue laying like a domestic fowl. One bird has been known to produce 120 eggs annually. Both parents share the duties of incubation. The hen covers the nest during the day, and the cock throughout the night. The chicks are released by the old bird pressing upon the shell with its hard breast. Ostriches are not expensive to keep, because the greater part of the year they find sufficient food in the paddocks, and at other times they only require a little Indian corn or beans and some additional green food, such as lucerne or cabbage.

Daily Intelligencer.

Pulpwood.

The Ontario Government is inaugurating a sensible policy in dealing with a valuable Provincial asset. It has been decided to sell the rights to cut pulp-wood on Lake Nipigon and the Nipigon River in the Thunder Bay District. The concession will extend five miles inland from the shores of these waters and will be continued for a period of twenty-one years.

Tenders are to be called for. The conditions of the sale are that the purchaser or lessee will be constrained to build a $500,000 paper mill with a daily output of 150 tons of paper. They must employ an average of 250 hands for at least ten months each year. No wood cut in the territory shall be exported.

Tenders will be given the right to cut spruce, poplar, whitewood and Banksian of jack pine nine inches and upwards in diameter, but are prohibited from cutting any other timber.

The dues at present are 40 cents a cord for spruce and 20 cents a cord for all others among the woods mentioned. Tenderers must state the amount of the bonus they are prepared to pay in addition to the ordinary dues.

This is a sensible way of dealing with public property. A contrast to the Cap. Sullivan mode of becoming rich through Ross favors.

The G. T. R. Strike.

"JUNIUS" MAKES SOME STATEMENTS WHICH WILL BE READ WITH INTEREST WITH EVERY BODY.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir, — This unfortunate strike is another painful illustration of the ways in which our boasted twentieth century civilization breaks down, so often in spots. No argument is required to show that there is something wrong either in the laws or in some people when honest industrious Canadians who are striving to make our magnificent heritage what a bountiful Providence evidently designed it to be, are subjected to such inconvenience, loss and even ruin as are impending to-day.

We do not for a moment presume to allot the blame between the G. T. R. officials and the men, we frankly admit we have not the evidence before us to enable us to judge. We do however, unhesitatingly say that the dishonesty of greed of some one has proved treason to Canada; and as free born Canadians we demand that treason shall be suppressed and traitors punished.

Railways being considered public utilities are different from all other enterprizes. They can expropriate a man's home whether he is willing to sell or not, or they can ruin it without paying any compensation by running their line under his windows, provided they only cross other people's land, not his. They are all assisted in construction by large subsidies of public money, and thereafter annually bonused by fancy payments for the carrying of His Majesty's Mails. They have, however, corresponding obligations. Their construction, their operation, their tariffs are controlled by the Board of Railway Commissioners. Why can not such control be carried a little further. We have had a Board of Conciliation. We hear rumors of arbitration, but it never seems to enter any one's head that the most important party of all, the Canadian people— are never represented in any of these proceedings. Three or four representatives of the men negotiate with an equal number of officials. They win or fail, compromise or strike, but not a thought is wasted on the millions of Canadians, whose only right—and that it must be admitted is religiously reserved for them— is to foot the bill.

If we admit that our agricultural, our manufacturing, our mercantile, and other interests are concerned, then they too must be represented by arbitrators and be at liberty to adduce evidence.

Every year Canadian Judges, and juries deal with millions of property and adjudicate even on life itself. Are we prepared to admit that no tribunal can be found in Canada possessed of sufficient intelligence, impartiality and courage to decide what is a reasonable and proper day's wage for a train man running between Toronto and Montreal. Are we quite sure which of the two great prize fights of this month of July, critics a hundred years hence will think indicated the lower type of civilization. If the Railway is trying to rob the men it must be compelled to be honest. If the men have been offered a fair wage they must be compelled to work The interests of the Canadian people are paramount. They are honest enough to be bold and bold enough to be honest, so justice must be done to all.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment. Money Back If It Fails.

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Remedy.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Remedy is unexcelled, and that it will do all we claim, that we will sell it with our own personal guarantee that it will not cost the user a cent if it should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Remedy for kidney ailments that are chronic and which resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for reasonable length of time, it will positively remove all symptoms and effect permanent cure.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Remedy, and our generous guarantee should convince the most skeptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Remedy at our risk. Two sizes 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKeown.

The Fire Waste.

The actual loss by fire in Canada is not known, but we have some guide to it in the tables given by the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance. One of these tables sets forth the total losses paid by the companies that operate under Dominion license year by year since from 1869 to 1908. It is as sure as anything can be that these payments do not amount to much more than half of the actual loss, but their increase or decrease is almost certain to be in proportion to the whole.

There was an abnormal loss in 1904, the year of the great Toronto fire and other serious conflagrations, amounting to $14,099,534.

Recently compiled figures show that the fire loss—not the insurance loss alone, but the total waste by fire—for six months past has amounted to nearly $9,000,000, which means that Canada has a bonfire of about $1,500,000 a month, or, say, $50,000 a day.

His Own Writing.

Dean Stanley's handwriting was atrocious. The late Lord Lyttleton handed in an amendment to the Tory reform bill of Lord Derby. The clerk at the table could not read it, nor could any one else. At last Lord Lyttleton—a rare scholar and an accomplished man of letters—was asked to read it himself. He explained that, though he could not pretend to read the text, its purpose was to enact that no man should be admitted to the poll unless he could sign his own name in legible handwriting.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

Who Pays for the Advertising ?

Wouldn't you prefer if you had a clothing store to sell a hundred suits of clothes in a day making an average profit of $2.00 per suit, to selling ten suits in a day, with an average profit of $5.00 per suit?

Suppose that, to sell the hundred suits a day you should spend, say $20.00 per day in advertising.

Who would be "taxed" for the advertising? Your patrons? Scarcely—when they pay you $3.00 less than they would have to pay for the identical suits to the merchant who does NOT advertise.

You? Scarcely—when you make a great deal more money than you would if you "saved" your advertising appropriation.

Your non-advertising competitor—in the penalty he pays for not doing so large a volume of business as he COULD do by advertising, and taking a smaller per-sale profit?

That's it—precisely!

HOW JIMMIE GOT HIS ENGINE.

The Incident That Brought Him Promotion and a Bride.

By WILLIAM WALKER HINES.

It was the general understanding among all the employees of the Lawrenceburg division of the X. and Y. R. R. that when Jimmie Kincaid got his engine he would also get Nettie Oliver. But Jimmie's chance for getting an engine in the near future did not seem particularly bright. He was fourth on the list of firemen of the Lawrenceburg division, and that meant he must wait until four engineers died, reached the age of limit or were fired. Of course there was always the chance that he would be able to do something to attract the attention of the superintendent of motive power, and then he might get his engine at any time.

In the meantime Nettie had a fairly good position as telegrapher at Benson station, and Jimmie could get a chance to chat with her for a few minutes every day when his train, passenger No. 14, lay over on the siding at Benson to allow the limited mail to pass. When he had begun scraping an acquaintance with Nettie something over a year before Jimmie had used the pretext that he was thinking of learning telegraphy, and under her tutorship he had picked up a fair working knowledge of the Morse code.

Many a sly joke did the train crew of No. 14 crack at Jimmie's suddenly born ambition to learn telegraphy, but he bore all of these with equanimity and said that the knowledge might come in handy some time. After awhile it became understood among all the men that Jimmie's case was really serious, and then the jokes stopped. Even the head brakeman of No. 14, who had a reputation as a wit, forbore to make remarks about the connection between the Morse code and pretty girls.

Benson station is at the foot of Twelve Mile hill, and this hill is regarded by the engineers as the worst place on the division. The grade is so heavy that the track winds up the hill in two long loops. When you get to the beginning of the second loop you are only a mile from Benson station on a straight line, but it is six miles distant by the track. After he had mastered the rudiments of the Morse code Jimmie would take hold of the whistle cord when No. 14 came to the loop on the down grade and signal "hello" to Nettie at Benson station in sharp blasts upon the whistle, which stood for the dots and dashes of the code.

So things went along for a year, and Jimmie's prospects of promotion got little brighter. On the records of the office of the superintendent of motive power he was still merely James Kincaid, fourth on the list of firemen, with a good reputation and the prospect of succeeding to an engine in the course of five or six years. When business picked up in the fall a number of extra freight trains were put on, and he got his fist chance to run an engine.

On the first trip it fell to his lot to take out the third section of freight train No. 106, eastbound. The third section of No. 106 was made up of thirty-one heavily loaded cars, and none of these was equipped with air brakes. As he pulled out of Adairville the old yard master swung himself up into the cab of the engine and said:

"I think ye'll pull the engine all right, Jimmie, me bye, but for the love of the saints be careful when ye strike the top of the hill this side of Benson. Faith, it's a heavy train they've given ye, and if it should break in two going down that hill and thim cyars with no air brakes on to thim there'd be the devil and all to pay."

Despite this warning there was no fear of a "break in two" in Jimmie's heart as he nursed his engine along toward the top of the hill on the other side of which lay Benson. This is an accident which happens very rarely and which not even the most experienced engineer can successfully guard against. But as he struck the top of the hill and began to descend on the side toward Benson he felt a jerk which nearly threw him off his seat. Looking back, he saw that the worst had happened. A coupling had snapped in the middle of the train.

For the present there was but one thing to do, and that was to go down grade as fast as he could. Looking back, he could see that the rear brakeman, who was the only man on the cars which had been left behind, had made one ineffectual attempt to set the brakes and then had jumped to safety. Jimmie knew that if the fourteen cars running wild behind caught up with the forward half of the train there would be a wreck which would cause damage to the extent of thousands of dollars and blacklist, if not kill, the engineer responsible.

Faster and faster the telegraph poles on the side of the track flew past him. Jimmie's mind was working faster than it had ever done in his life. His orders directed him to wait on the siding at Benson station for the westbound passenger train to pass, and he knew that at any cost he must save the passenger. Away off on the farther side of Benson he could already see the faint line of smoke coming up from it, and he knew that it would arrive at Benson in just about ten minutes. He figured that his own train was going about a mile a minute and would reach Benson in seven minutes. If no alternative offered itself he resolved to put on all brakes when he got to the foot of the hill and deliberately wreck his own train. There was a straight track for three miles on the farther side of Benson, and the engineer of the passenger train would see the wreck in ample time to come to a stop.

This plan, if carried out, would probably mean death for Jimmie, but he analyzed the situation none the less coolly because of that. Death is something that engineers get accustomed to facing. But if he could only discover some way of letting Nettie know the condition of affairs it would be an easy matter for her to throw the derailing switch after he had passed and allow the rear half of the train to come to a safe haven in the cornfield beside the track.

Down at the station Nettie heard a sound which sent her rushing out to the platform. Away up the hill she could see a freight train coming down at a terrific rate of speed. The whistle cord seemed to be in the hands of a lunatic, for the whistle was sounding in strange, unearthly shrieks. As she watched it something struck her as being strangely familiar about the way the whistle was sounding. All of a sudden it struck her there was method in the shrieks and that interpreted by the Morse code they were saying "BN, BN, BN," her station call. This was continued for a few seconds, and then began: "Broke in two. Throw derailing switch when first section is past station." Three times this was repeated, and then the engine went around the curve at the farther end of the loop, and she could hear the whistle only faintly.

But she heard enough, and when Jimmie's engine whizzed past the station with his white face pressed closely against the glass at the side of the engine cab he saw Nettie standing at the switch. When the last car in the part of the train which still remained intact had passed the frog he saw her throw all her weight on the switch handle, and the signals told him that all of the cars which were following him would pile themselves ungracefully, but harmlessly, on the soft earth of the cornfield. Bringing his engine to a stop, he ran back to the station and on to the siding in ample time to let the passenger train pass him.

The trainmaster examined Jimmie very closely as to the necessity of piling valuable freight cars on useful agricultural land and passed the case up to the division superintendent. He examined the papers carefully, made some notes on the bottom of them and referred the whole matter to the superintendent of motive power. When Jimmie walked out of the office he was a full fledged engineer and had been congratulated on his presence of mind. And the superintendent of motive power congratulated him again a month later when the railroad lost the services of the telegraph operator at Benson station and Jimmie got a wife.

Mark Twain as a Bowler.

When Mark Twain was an editor in Hartford he was considered a formidable opponent at skittles. His favorite resort was a bowling alley in a cellar on State street not far from the steamboat dock. While the celebrated humorist was under Major Pond's management he was billed as one of the features for an evening's entertainment at the Young Men's Christian association hall at Newark. There was a bowling alley immediately underneath the lecture room. As Mark Twain was on his way upstairs with the major he caught a glimpse of it.

"What's going on in there—bowling?"

"Yes," replied the major, who knew his weakness, "but never mind that now. You're due on the platform."

"Run in somebody else for ten or fifteen minutes," said Mark Twain. "I shall do ever so much better after a little exercise."

And he did.

Cosmic Dust.

To an enormous extent the bed of the ocean is covered with lava and pumice stone. Still more remarkable is it to find the floor of the ocean covered in many parts with the dust of meteorites. These bodies whirl through space like miniature comets and are for the most part broken into innumerable fragments. We are all familiar with these heavenly visitants as shooting stars, but it has been only lately discovered that this cosmic dust forms layers at the bottom of the deepest seas. Between Honolulu and Tahiti, at a depth of 2,350 fathoms—over two miles and a half—a vast layer of this material exists. Falling upon land, this impalpable dust is indistinguishable; but, accumulating for centuries in the sea depths, it tells a wonderful story of the continuous bombardment of this planet by cometary bodies.

Dancing Mice of China.

Scientific study of the so called "dancing mice" seems to indicate that the breed was derived originally from the mating of individual mice which exhibited the strange impulse to dance. These mice were first bred in China. In that country today and also in Japan they are commonly kept in small cages, not for the sake of their dancing habit, but because they are extraordinarily agile and acrobatic. Such cages are usually provided with revolving wheels and other apparatus which the little rodents set in motion as they skip rapidly about. They are sometimes called "waltzing mice" because they not only run in circles, but frequently whirl about swiftly as if on a pivot. It is a very curious phenomenon, and there seems to be no certainty that it may not be due to a nervous complaint perpetuated by inheritance.

The German military authorities will use the services of 120 civilian motor cyclists in the army manoeuvres in September.

NEW YORK'S LATIN QUARTER.

Old Stables Occupied as Studios by Eminent Artists.

Turning north from Washington square, up Macdougal street, you come upon a little alley leading back behind the houses that face on the north side of the square. A sign says this is Macdougal alley. Really it is "the alley." It is the closest approach, perhaps, to a Latin quarter in New York. It is in external aspect and in its spirit unique. It is devoted entirely to horses, black cats and the fine arts. The alley once upon a time was entirely lined with little stables, where the Washington square aristocrats kept their horses. It still appears to be lined with stables, but if you look closer you observe that most of them have studio lights and shades at the upper windows. If you look still closer at the plates on the tiny entrance doors you will read the names of artists known over the entire country.

The first studio in the alley is inhabited by James Fraser, who was at one time a pupil of Saint-Gaudens. The next stable is the home of Edwin W. Deming, who can talk with any Indian in his own dialect and who paints Indian scenes and legends with the grace and charm of Greek mythology. A little farther on Daniel Chester French, one of the leading sculptors of the country, has a studio. The next stable is the home of Blendon Campbell, painter and illustrator. Next door live A. P. Proctor, the animal painter and sculptor, and Victor Salvatore, a young Italian, who learned to model while helping Mr. Fraser in his studio and who now has plenty of work of his own. Still another sculptor is Chester Beach.

At the end of the alley, in a stable differentiated from the rest only by two bits of Italian marbles standing before the entrance, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney works every day, though, of course, she does not live there. Mrs. Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, is no mere amateur. She works as hard as the rest and on the same terms of competition. She executes professional commissions and has been accepted into the fraternal life of the alley as one of the artistic band.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Why Iron Rusts.

British investigators estimate that the rails of a single railroad system in England lose eighteen tons of weight every day and that the larger part of this loss is due to the effects of rust. The problem of rust is of great economical importance not only because of such losses as that just mentioned, but also because of the great expense involved in repainting iron and steel structures in order to preserve them. Thus $10,000 a year is spent in painting the great Scotch bridge over the Forth. Recent experiments indicate that pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.—Harper's Weekly.

Tax Dodging In Japan.

Lately I have been far afield in a small Japanese-English dictionary, from which I have culled a choice collection of words peculiar to the country, such as:

An—A small house inhabited by a Buddhist priest.

Araigome—Washed rice offered to idols.

Onden—Rice fields about which a false statement has been made in order to diminish the tax.

Now, idols are all very well, for even in this country we have idols (of sorts) to which we devote more precious gifts than much washed rice; also no idol nourished merely on rice will be able long to withstand the assaults of the higher criticism. But it is rather melancholy to find that tax dodging is not unknown to that most patriotic though by no means lightly taxed nation.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Beautiful Alloy.

Dr. Roberts-Austen of England has succeeded in making out of gold and aluminium a compound metal or alloy which is said to be the most brilliant known. Its general hue is a splendid purple, but as it is turned in the light it reflects bright tints of ruby color. A little more than three-quarters—more accurately, 78 per cent—of the alloy is gold, the remainder being aluminium. Certain of the expectations with respect to the possibility of substituting aluminium for steel and iron are not likely to be realized, but that metal is proving of great use in combination with others, and the discovery of Dr. Roberts-Austen is expected to lead to the production of very beautiful effects in jewelry.—Harper's Weekly.

Hold Your Breath and Ascend.

Scientists of Europe have lately been conducting experiments in the art of breathing and as a result have discovered some interesting conclusions. The theory is advanced that by abnormal control of the breathing powers, the breath being held for an unusually long time, a person may "ascend into the astral realm" and commune with things higher up. One of the scientists claims to have demonstrated that rapid breathing of pure air acts as an anaesthetic and renders a person immune to pain as long as it is maintained. Of course after the rapid inhalations cease the pain will be felt. By a little training a person may induce sound sleep by deep and rapid breathing for a few minutes.

"The Brake That Makes The Wheel Run Easy."

The Hercules Coaster Brake

There were more "Hercules" brakes sold in Canada last year than all Others combined

One reason for the "Hercules" popularity is that it is lighter in weight than any other. The "Hercules" is an armless brake, a great feature in any bicycle. Also it is pathetically simple. A child can take it apart and reassemble it.

AMOS PARKER WILDER, Ph.D., Editor, Wisconsin State Journal, Madison. "I use a new wheel with coaster brake between my office and summer cottage. The distance can be covered in 17 minutes; but as a 25-minute ride the experience is rich and restful and up-building.' Not at such times does one ask, 'Is life worth living?'"

Hercules Coaster Brake

Positive in action and easy running when released. It wears well because it is solidly-simple and there are no intricate parts to get out of place or become damaged in the Wear.

Something Palatable.

Pick over and wash one peck of spinach, then add one cupful boiling water and one level teaspoonful salt. Cook uncovered until tender. Drain and press out all the water possible.

Chop fine and add it to two level tablespoonfuls butter and two level tablespoonfuls flour cooked together. Mix well and add one-half cupful thin cream and salt and pepper to taste.

When heated and thickened place in the center of a hot platter and place broiled lamb chops against it.

A Fine Sauce.

For strawberry sauce to turn over ice cream make a sirup of a cupful of sugar and three-quarters of a cupful of water and when the sirup spins a thin thread cool it. Add a pint box of strawberries that have been mashed. Vanilla cream is the best for the purpose. The sauce should be served in individual pitchers or in a general boat.

Help Out Dessert.

For a simple dessert to help out a short allowance of berries a plain lemon jelly may be made, inserting halved or quartered strawberries just as the jelly begins to harden. If the jelly is allowed to set in a ring mold the center may be heaped with whipped cream.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN.

Less Inclined to Grog and Nicotine Than Ever Before.

The traditional man-of-war's man who made it a practice to roll his quid to the other side of his cheek and spit on his hands before taking to the guns is decidedly a thing of the past, according to the reports of the navy department.

The quid of chewing tobacco is no longer an essential characteristic of the man behind the guns. He is coming to the conclusion that he doesn't care for chewing tobacco or that it is not a nice habit or that he hasn't time to chew and be about his business too.

Last year the navy department contracted for 220,000 pounds of chewing tobacco for the use of the men of the fleet. This year the contracts will call for about 70,000, less than one-third of that amount.

There was a time when chewing tobacco was as important a feature of the ship's commissary as the allowances of grog was to Captain Kidd's crew and Captain Marryat's sailors. But the modern sailor has changed his habits.

He is a daintier sort of person by far, a cleaner cut, more orderly being who has not lost altogether his social perspective. Nowadays the sailor is less inclined to both nicotine and grog than he has ever been before.—Blue-Jacket.

COLLECTOR OF HAIRPINS.

Odd Hobby of Secretary to the Mayor of Indianapolis.

Hairpins are the special hobby of Luman K. Babcock, private secretary of Mayor Shank of Indianapolis. Mr. Babcock has hairpins by the hundreds and thousands—from the ordinary little wire affair that can be bought two dozen for 5 cents to the more elaborate tortoise shell effects that can be bought at a price as high as the buyer wishes to go. For years Mr. Babcock, who is a modest young bachelor, has been collecting hairpins until now he has approximately 3,000.

"I always wanted to make a collection of some sort," he says, "but I did not wish to collect something every one else was interested in. So far as I know there is only one other man in the country who collects hairpins, and he lives in Grand Rapids. My collection is probably the largest of its kind in the United States."

Included in the collection are 535 hairpins that he found in the streets during a tour of Europe in 1903. Every pin is labeled to show when and where it was found.

A Bird's Curiosity.

Professor Guy A. Bailey, a member of the faculty of the Geneseo State Normal school, relates a little incident which might be doubted were it not for the fact that he has the proof to show for the story. Mr. Bailey was on Temple hill with his camera attempting to get a picture of a horned lark. The lark evidently thought that Mr. Bailey was providing it with a bird house, as it hopped on to the camera, back into the trees and then back on the camera again. The bird repeated this performance several times, refusing to remain in the trees long enough to be snapped. Finally Mr. Bailey left the camera where he had located it, went and got another camera, and when he returned he secured a splendid picture of the bird perched on camera No. 1. Curiosity got the best of the bird, and the result was a novel picture. —Geneseo Cor. Rochester Herald.

Dogs of Other Times.

Swiss naturalists have recently presented to the Helvetian Society of Natural Science the results of their studies of the remains of dogs found among the ancient lake dwellings of Switzerland, the earliest of which date from the age of stone. It has been found that three different races of dogs existed there at that time, one of which resembled the Siberian sledge dog of today. Later, when the age of bronze dawned upon the Alps, two new species appeared, one being a shepherd dog and the other a hunting dog. All of these dogs were of northern origin, the canine types of the Mediterranean lands not having crossed the Alps.—Philadelphia Record.

A Card Sharp's Trick.

A Moscow card sharp has confessed that he has been winning money at the chief clubs for thirty years past by the following trick: On the pretext that his eyes were weak he invariably wore dark spectacles at night. His favorite game was one called "bank," in which the eights and nines are the most important cards. In his waistcoat pocket he kept a preparation of phosphorus and by touching the backs of cards which he wished to mark he made them slightly luminous. His dark spectacles enabled him to see the small phosphorous marks, which were invisible to the other players. After a few deals with a pack he could play with absolute certainty.

Intensive Cultivation.

"Intensive cultivation," so called, has reached its highest state of perfection in the market gardens lying about Paris, where land rent runs to $250 an acre or more a year and four crops are taken from the soil between February and November, and on the island of Guernsey, in the English channel, where farming land is valued at $1,200 an acre—two instances that move all writers upon agricultural topics to wondering awe—and yet in the near vicinity of Boston gardeners growing lettuce, radishes and cucumbers under glass are clearing $3,000 to $4,000 an acre a year without attracting more than passing notice.—National Magazine.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

The changes for the Church Cards should be in by five o'clock on Friday afternoon, or earlier.

A LESSON THAT FAILED.

Don't Go Too Far When Asking a Father For His Girl.

"I don't suppose," the timid young man said as he tremblingly approached her father, "that you will be inclined to grant the request I have to make, Mr. Boodleson, but"—

"Stop!" the millionaire commanded. "I know what you're here for. My daughter told me this morning that you would call on me today. She made a strong plea for you, and I promised her that I'd listen to you patiently, but you have just about convinced me that you're not the kind of chap I want for a son-in-law."

"Wh-why, what have I done—what have I said to c-cause you to fe-feel that way?"

"I'll tell you. You came in here saying you didn't expect me to consent to let you have my daughter. That's no way to begin. If you expect to get along in the world you'll have to get over that way of approaching people. You should have come to me with a feeling of confidence in your breast and with words on your lips that would have indicated that you didn't doubt for a moment that you'd carry your point. Why, when I asked my wife's father for her I went up to him with all confidence in the world, slapped him on the back and let him understand that I hadn't a doubt of my ability to win his consent."

"All right, old man. Seeing that there's no reason why Genevieve and I shouldn't get married, you'll of course give your consent, and remember that I expect you to do something handsome in the way of handing out a check as a wedding present. No bluff, you understand—no $10,000 check that is to be torn up after the guests leave or"—

Five minutes later the young man woke up on the sidewalk and began wondering how one was to be able to tell how to go far enough without going too far.—Chicago Record-Herald.

And a Bargain at That.

A little boy had got into the habit of saying "darn," of which his mother naturally did not approve.

"Dear," she said to the little boy, "here is 10 cents. It is yours if you will promise me not to say 'darn' again."

"All right, mother," he said as he took the money; "I promise."

As he lovingly fingered the money a hopeful look came into his eyes and he said, "Say, mother, I know a word that's worth 50 cents."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Was Suspicious.

A Scotchman at the dentist's was told that he must take gas. While the dentist was getting it ready the Scot began to count his money.

The dentist said somewhat testily, "You need not pay until the tooth is out."

"I ken that," said the Scotchman, "but as ye're about to make me sleep I jist want to see how I stand."—Harper's Monthly.

Very Real.

"What I like about you, dear," said George in a smothered tone of voice, "is that you're just yourself."

George was right, except for about a peck of some one else's hair, a wire jimmy, a small pharmacy of paint and powder and seven bushels of nature's only rivals.—Minnesota Minnehaha.

A Leader.

"Didn't you tell me Faro Joe was one of the leading citizens of Crimson Gulch?"

"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "he was. When he left town he led the vigilance committee by a quarter of a mile clean to the next county."—Spokane Spokesman Review.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but that kind of combats don't go well on the stage."—Houston Chronicle.

Rube Audience.

Usher—Ladies, the audience wishes you to keep still during this performance.

Ladies—Heavens! Is it possible that the audience hasn't heard this old opera before?—Cleveland Leader.

As Usual.

He played the "kitty" to the end,
And then the jack pots came.
So now his wife does laundry work.
She's paying for his game.

A Historic Influence.

"It's a long time since Mrs. O'Leary's cow started the Chicago fire by kicking over a lamp."

"Yes, and Chicago beef has been creating more or less excitement ever since."—Washington Star.

The Only Way.

He—I hear that you won your breach of promise suit. Did you get all of the $15,000?

She—Of course. I married my lawyer.—Baltimore American.

Duke's Interest In Horses.

The Duke of Teck, who is to be president of the forthcoming Richmond Horse Show, has been devoted all his life to horses. Horses in general attract him, and horses for polo-playing in particular. His Serene Highness has signalled his presidency of the Richmond Show by presenting a magnificent trophy, the Teck Cup, to be won outright in a jumping competition for officers in uniform. The duke has apartments in Henry III.'s tower, Windsor Castle, where is gathered one of the most interesting collections of curios ever gleaned from the corners of the globe. The duke was military attache in Vienna for some time, and has seen service in most foreign countries.

G. B. S.'s Suspicions.

Mr. G. B. Shaw has a way of his own, even on post cards. A second-hand book-seller secured, in the ordinary way of business, a manuscript of his story, "Love Among the Artists." The book-seller told Mr. Shaw that he held it, thinking, perhaps, that the author would be as keen a purchaser as anybody. "Excuse me, where did you get it? . . . Are you a book-seller by day and a burglar by night?" wrote "G.B.S." The book-seller is still asking one hundred guineas for his "find"; the post card he will not part with.

Kitchener Wanted to Know.

With "carpet-knights" Lord Kitchener, naturally, has little patience. He likes a soldier to be one of the good old sort, sleeping on an iron bed and with a severe taste in "domestic accoutrements." The Kaiser once remarked, "The Hohenzollerns don't wear dressing-gowns!" And Lord Kitchener, viewing with displeasure a young lieutenant of his who had purchased for himself a very elaborate gold-fitted suit-case, asked of him "What is your taste in hairpins?"

Woman's World

Dr. Julia Sears Founds City of New Thought.

DR. JULIA SEARS.

Oscawana-on-the-Hudson is to be made a New Thought city this summer. One hundred and forty acres of land has been acquired there by Dr. Julia Seaton Sears' students as a school and rest home from early June to mid-September.

The summer colony is for the benefit of professional people bent on a vacation plus study. A metropolis does not appeal, according to Dr. Sears, because "a center of higher metaphysics and modern mysticism."

In explaining the purposes of the New Thought city at Oscawana, Dr. Sears recently said:

"We believe the new civilization is built on co-operation and not competition, and all teachers and workers will come under our New Thought law of attraction.

"We intend to have a city above competition. Each center or school or organization will open headquarters in the city and attract such workers as are interested in their own special line. All centers will have public lectures and conventions, to which the students of other centers will be invited.

"The New Thought city is to be built upon the fundamental principles of the highest brotherhood for the greatest good to the greatest number. It expects to gather to it teachers of every science, religion and branch of human thought. In the end it will stand for the temple of truth.

"No one particular person is doing this. It is doing itself. It will be the inevitable outgrowth of the association of co-operative minds, the natural result of the higher liberal co-operative spirit."

The site is about two miles from the New York railroad station. An auditorium has been built, and around it a tent colony is to be established.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, Jr., Gives Dresses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., takes keen delight in disposing of her gowns in a way different from most society women. She is interested in several young girls who do not belong to the wealthy set, and she is pleased to turn her gowns over to them. Naturally many of them scarcely are soiled, and with a few alterations they make charming dresses for girls and matrons whose tastes are not so expensive and who have not such large incomes. Her generosity keeps these girls in dresses the year round. Mrs. Vanderbilt was Grace Wilson, and because young Cornelius married her his father cut him off with an inheritance of $1,500,000. The brothers and sisters, however, shared with him a part of their inheritances. For eight years none of the brothers or sisters as well as the mother of Cornelius would speak to the young wife. She did not cross the threshold of the Breakers, the home of Mrs. Vanderbilt, Sr., in Newport, but she was dignified through it all, and her attitude was such that she finally won her husband's relatives to her side. A reconciliation was effected in 1908.

Attack on Smelling Salts.

Smelling salts are dangerous. This is the opinion of several physicians who have investigated the subject. They are said to be a prolific cause of deafness and, besides, destroy the sense of smell. "They irritate and inflame the olfactory nerve," said one physician the other day. "All smelling salts are composed largely of ammonia, the fumes of which inhaled through the nose, inflame one end of the eustachian tube and finally cause it to close. This tube connects with the mucous membrane at the back of the nose with the two auditory chambers leading from the eardrums. The part closing of these tubes results in deafness. Of course a great deal depends on one's constitution, but in a person not robust the use of strong smelling salts will cause deafness. To those of normal health the only danger lies in the too frequent use of the salts. Persons who suffer much from colds or chills or have a tendency toward catarrh should beware of them."

ASTONISHED THE QUEEN.

They Knew Their Bible But Not Their Court Etiquette.

Recently two little girls from London came down to spend the day at Windsor Castle with the little Battenbergs, Queen Victoria's grand children, and it so happened that Her Majesty paid a visit to the nursery and found them there.

The young visitors were taken aback; they had not expected to see the Queen, and had not been instructed how to conduct themselves in the presence of royalty; but they had been well brought up and knew their Bibles, and they thought at once of Daniel before King Darius. They decided that what Daniel had done must be correct, so the pair threw themselves on their faces on the floor at her astonished Majesty's feet, and cried out with a loud voice:

"Oh, Queen, live forever!"

However, this proved an excellent introduction, and presently the Queen and they became great friends. She took one of them on her knee, and all three chatted together in the friendliest way.

"And whereabout in London do you young people live?" asked the Queen.

"Oh, said the little girl on her knee, "we live just opposite W's,"—naming one of the new mammoth stores that had just been opened in London.

"But please won't you tell us where you live when you go to London?" said her little friend.

The Queen looked thoughtful for a moment, and then remembered that in Buckingham Palace road there is also a mommoth store. "Oh," said she, smiling, "when in London I live opposite Gerringe's."

An elaborate description of the airship of 1915 is given, and it is believed that within five years such an airliner will be capable of travelling 75 miles an hour ordinarily, and often 120 miles in the upper levels. Two miles above the Equator a planetary current encircles the globe at tremendous speed. The ashes of the eruption of Krakatoa were carried in this belt round the world in fourteen days. Ten years hence an airship driven fifty miles an hour may perchance make that trip in eight days, flying at a speed of 120 miles an hour, or 3,000 miles a day.

"Only Granny."

Sir Douglas Powell, one of the royal physicians-in-ordinary, tells a pretty story of how some years ago he was waiting in an ante-room to be summoned for an interview with Queen Victoria. Out of the royal apartment came tumbling two of King George's sons. "Why don't you go in?" inquired the elder prince. "Because," said Sir Douglas, "it might not be convenient." "Oh," was the cheerful response, "there's nobody there — only Granny."

An Unusual Attribute.

Little Johnnie, who cannot pronounce "s," has been frightened into keeping out of the attic by tales told him by his nurse of a dreadful ghost that lives in the dim recesses under the eaves. The other day he was overheard to say confidentially to a small friend:

"We've got an old gho't in our attic."

To which his friend, much interested, responded, "Do he butt?"

Sundials in China.

The Chinese have carried the art of sundials to perfection. One Chinese watchmaker has arranged his front porch in such a way the shadow of the posts tells the time by which to regulate the watches.

Rioting and Violence At Local Station Last Evening.

MOB CHASED AND SET UPON A G. T. R. EMPLOYEE IN THE AFTERNOON, AND MADE A VIOLENT ATTACK UPON STATION AGENT DONOVAN, OF BROCKVILLE, AT NIGHT — AN UNOFFENDING MAN ALSO ATTACKED —POLICE CALLED, BUT FOUND NOBODY TO ARREST — MAYOR WAS THERE, BUT FOUND NO ONE TO READ THE RIOT ACT TO — WHAT HIS WORSHIP SAYS ABOUT THE MATTER.

There was grim-visaged war at the local station yesterday afternoon and last night, and as a result more than one man is nursing bruises and cuts to-day, and the local police force and Mayor had a busy evening.

TROUBLE BEGAN IN AFTERNOON

The facts are that, yesterday afternoon, an employee was set upon by a mob, somewhat hurt and badly frightened, and at night, between 9 and 10 o'clock, a mob of about a dozen men set upon two who came off the local which had just come in from the west, and beat them into insensibility.

A peculiar feature of the case was that one of the men, named McMahon was only a passenger on the train, and had nothing to do with its running or management. The acting conductor of the train was Station Agent Donovon, of Brockville, who was knocked down and kicked, but is reported as doing nicely to-day.

MANY RUMORS ON THE STREET

The first intimation that people down town had of any trouble was hearing the sounding of police whistles and seeing the members of the force, who were on duty, hastening to the railway station on bicycles and in conveyances.

A rumor became freely circulated that one man had been fatally hurt another severely ill-treated and Doctor's Hotel wrecked.

This rumor was, to a certain extent, true, being only somewhat exgerated. That there was serious trouble there was no doubt, and as a result two men were severely ill-treated.

During the afternoon an employee of the railway named Oram was sent down in the east part of the yard to attend to a switch, when he was attacked by some parties. He was fortunate enough to escape without sustaining any serious injuries, though he was bruised and cut and badly frightened.

This was the commencement of trouble in this section, culminating in a small-sized riot at a later hour of the day.

DONOVAN ATTACKED BY A MOB

At a few minutes before 10 o'clock at night the passenger "local" from the west, which is due here at 9.10, and does not go any further eastward, arrival, being in charge of P. Donovan, Yardmaster at Brockville, who had been, so we are informed, acting in the capacity of conductor, since the strike commenced. Donovan left the train at the station and proceeded through the station ground He had hardly reached the street when he was attacked. There was a large number of persons in the vicinity at the time and Donovan had no means of escape. He was borne to the ground and was evidently severely kicked about the body and head.

McMAHON ALSO BEATEN.

About the time the mob had got through with Donovan they spied McMahon, who is an elderly man, and he was also severely maltreated. Then the crowd made for another man whom they took to be an employee of the train. He proved to them that he was a commercial traveller. and he, though somewhat roughly handled, was not hurt by the mob.

In the meantime Donovan had been picked up and conveyed into a place nearby and medical aid was summoned.

TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL

A physician from the city responded and after temporarily attending to Donovan had him removed to the hospital. The injuries the unfortunate man received were of such a nature as to render him unconscious for some time In addition to bruises about the body there were also bad bruises about the head.

His injuries fortunately are not considered of such a nature as to have fatal results.

..POLICE ARRIVE ON THE SCENE

It was during this rioting that the police were notified, and they soon appeared upon the scene, Before they arrived, however, some stones had been thrown through windows in the front portion of Docter's hotel. This was done, so it was stated in the vicinity of the station, because some non-union men were in the hotel. The hotel doors were immediately closed and no further manifestations of violence were made.

MOB MADE THEMSELVES SCARCE

When the police arrived upon the scene there were but few persons to be seen, those causing the trouble evidently considering discretion the better part of valor. So they made themselves scarce.

RIOT ACT NOT READ

At the height of the trouble Mayor Marsh was notified and as soon as possible His Worship hastened to the police station and had a consultation with Chief Newton. Fearing there might be further trouble the members of the force who had been on day duty were all called out, also special police officer Arnott. The men were all detailed for duty at the station. Some remained there until daylight this morning, but no further trouble ensued.

The Mayor, in company with the Chief and two other parties, drove to the station to be on hand if there was trouble His Worship was prepared to read the Riot Act, but this was not necessary, and it is to be hoped that such a step will not be necessary.

THE MAYOR'S STATEMENT

The Intelligencer saw Mayor Marsh this morning and asked him what he thought of the affair. His Worship said that he, in common with all citizens, was sorry that such a thing had occurred here. As Mayor, he would say that the local authorities would do their best to preserve order. He, personally, had stayed at the station till 3.30 this morning. Some special constables were appointed last night, and more are likely to be appointed today. It seems to be generally understood about the Grand Trunk station that Belleville men were not responsible for the trouble last night.

It is said that during the melee, some revolver shots were fired, but there was no sign of anyone being shot.

Everybody deplores the unfortunate occurrence of last night. It has given Belleville a bad advertisement from one end of Canada to the other.

It was reported by an employee of a train which came into Belleville yesterday, that a big stone was thrown through the window of a mail car between here and Toronto.

It is denied by railway men that any windows were broken in Docter's hotel. There is they say, no sign of a window being broken, neither is there a scratch on the building. The police said a big stone went through a window of the hotel.

Owing to the strike a local cheese exporting firm today had to unload 9 large cars filled with cheese and ship the same by boat.

The Palace.

Tonight

The Abbott Clyne Trio delighted a large crowd at the Palace last night. They are clever and can sing. It is first-class vaudeville and nothing cleaner or more entertaining has been seen at the Palace.

Mr. Abbott's solo number "My Cousin Caruso" is a gem and if you like a regular "Caruso tenor come and hear Mr. Abbott.

Mrs. Abbott has a very pleasing voice and splendid stage presence, while little "Norda" is a whole show in herself. She is the smallest little tot and the cutest you ever saw on the stage. You will not be sorry after you have heard her sing, "I Remember You." Pictures A-1. Children 5c, adults 10c, matinee Saturday, 5c.

LATEST STRIKE REPORTS

Both Claim Victory.

Montreal, July 22.—There is little or no change in the strike situation. Both sides claim to be winning, but their claims show a wide divergence of opinion. The company succeeded in running all their through trains yesterday, while a couple of big freight trains were also started from the Point St. Charles yards. A message received at the head office of the company announced that the beef train, which left here for Portland Wednesday night, arrived safely at its destination at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and that there was no further danger of a meat famine in that city.

An official announcement was made by the company yesterday afternoon that if the situation continues as favorable as at present the shops will be reopened all over the Grand Trunk System on Monday morning.

Trains Running at Brantford.

Brantford, July 22.—The Grand Trunk yesterday succeeded in getting the trains running on the Brantford and Tillsonburg and Buffalo and Goderich branch lines, crews having arrived yesterday morning. The mail service to these places, which was cancelled for two days, will be resumed to-day.

Several large industrial concerns situated exclusively on Grand Trunk sidings are hauling coal and raw material at big expense from the T., H. & B. Railway.

The crowds gathering at the local depot in the evening have become so great that last night ten special constables arrived from London and Toronto as a safeguard.

Brockville Is Peaceful.

Brockville, July 22.—As the result of a strike development, the Brockville Town Council held a special meeting yesterday afternoon, when Mayor Patterson read a communication from Supt. Whittenberger of Montreal calling attention to the reports of disturbances at the Brockville depot in connection with the operation of passenger trains, and asking that proper steps be taken to maintain order.

The councillors were at a loss to know how the erroneous report as to any lawlessness had reached that official, as excellent order has been maintained since the strike became operative.

G.T.R. Demands Protection.

Niagara Fals, Ont., July 22.—There is practically no change in the strike situation here, passenger trains moving, but freight tied up completely. Trouble is feared when an attempt is made to move freight, but Mayor Dores says he will call out the militia if any more trouble occurs.

Mayor Dores has received what he terms an "impertinent telegram from solicitors of the Grand Trunk, threatening to bring legal action against the mayor if the best of police protection is not given the Grand Trunk. In reply, he said the city police had the situation well under control.

Conductor Assaulted.

Windsor, July 22.—Robert McMurray, a Windsor train conductor on the G.T.R., between Detroit and Chicago, was assaulted by union strikers or sympathizers in the latter city on Wednesday night while sticking to his run. He is now in a hospital in that city in a serious condition.

Ontario Likely to Win.

Toronto, July 22.—That the judgments in the appeals against Ontario made to the Privy Council, one by the Dominion Government in respect to the Indian treaty, and the other by the Province of Quebec in the common school fund case, will be in favor of this province is evident from the fact that counsel representing Ontario were not called upon to present their arguments. Two cables were received to this effect by Attorney-General Foy yesterday.

In the first case the Supreme Court held that where a dispute between the Dominion and the province comes before the Exchequer Court, it should be decided on a rule or principle of law, and not merely on what the judge of the court considers fair and just between the parties. Its judgment, which is evidently upheld by the Privy Council, held that the Province of Ontario was not liable for the claim of the Dominion, that the treaty was not made for the benefit of Ontario, but in pursuance of the general policy of the Dominion in dealing with Indians and with a view to maintaining peace, order and good government in the territory effected, and that no rule or principle in law made the province responsible for expenses incurred in carrying out an agreement with the Indians to which it was not a party and for which it gave no mandate.

Big Gun Exploded.

Fort Monroe, Va., July 22.—Eleven artillerymen are dead, one fatally and several slightly injured as the result of the premature ignition of a powder charge in a 12-inch shore gun at the De Russy Battery during the coast artillery practice here yesterday.

The accident occurred while student officers were endeavoring to sink a fleet of towed targets, representing an imaginary hostile fleet proceeding towards Washington. The bodies of the dead artillerymen were terribly mangled.

The disaster was witnessed by a number of prominent officers of the army and navy, who were here to see the battle practice. The wives and children of several of the men killed saw them meet their terrible death.

First Train Through Michigan Tunnel

Detroit, July 22.—The first train has gone through the Michigan Central tunnel under the Detroit River. It was not drawn by one of the new electric locomotives intended for the submarine traffic. A regulation steam locomotive went through, with two freight cars attached, and came out on the Windsor side with a load of supplies for the contractors. No ceremonies attended the event, although it was the actual, if not the official, inauguration of the big $12,000,000 double-barreled Detroit tunnel.

Indians Were Swindled.

Ottawa, July 22.—It is stated here to-day that the notorious St. Peter's Indian reserve case, by which a band of Manitoba Indians are alleged to have been swindled out of their homes and lands, and in which deal Frank Pedley, superintendent of Indian affairs, is alleged to have used bribery, will be taken into the courts this fall. TO HURRY PREFERENCE

Balfour Urges British Government to Do Something.

Leader of Opposition Says That the Colonial Dominions Are Waiting For England to Make a Move In the Work of Unifying the Empire—Asquith Replies That Action Has Been Taken on Every Occasion.

London, July 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Commons, Rt. Hon. Arthur Balfour took the last opportunity, before the next Imperial Conference to raise the question of the Imperial preference. He remarked the consistency wherewith every colonial statesman, since Canada made the first appeal for a fiscal arrangement in 1843, had pressed on the Mother Country the one policy, and declared that the views of these great colonial statesmen were not merely commercial. They had in view the idea of Empire, with mutual good offices in the matter of tariffs as one of its bonds. The leader of the Opposition in emphasizing the fact that the colonies had developed into great nations, warned the Government that they had also fully realized the value of tariff negotiations. He urged that the result of Canada's treaties with France, Germany and the United States had been the diminution of preferential advantages to Britain. The Government and those who supported them appeared to think that they could remain outside this network of treaties, which more and more meant arranging channels where into international trade was to go to Canada, had left as an impossibility the policy of isolation, and it was quite certain that the great dominions, which had entered upon this course of independent fiscal negotiation, could not, in the force of circumstances, stop where they were. The process just beginning must go on.

Concluding, he made a strong appeal that the policy of preference should become the policy of all British statesmen instead of the policy of only one party.

Premier Asquith, who replied immediately, said he had heard with great satisfaction that the question which had slumbered so long would be raised again. It had been suggested that the Government was insensible and unresponsive to the wishes expressed at the Colonial Conference of 1907. That conference had passed twenty resolutions and in regard to seventeen the Government had taken action.

Donald Macmaster said that there was a firm determination in Canada to build up, with the co-operation of Britain, a great and powerful nation The true policy was to lend all encouragement possible to a settlement with Canada, by giving her a reasonable preference.

Col. Seeley said that if Britain's refusal to adopt a policy of preference led, as Mr. Balfour claimed, towards disseverance, rather than unification surely the signs of disseverance should begin to appear, but he declared that the exact opposite was the case.

Played For a Pup.

Kingston, July 22.—The death of "Toy," a twelve-year-old fox terrier, at the summer home of Chas. Lewis of Watertown, N.Y., at Bartlett's Point, among the Thousand Islands, was the occasion of a remarkable funeral. A band of twelve pieces from Clayton played dirges and an orator related the canine's history and another recited as much of the burial service as he knew. A handsome slab of wood marks the resting place and later a marble stone will replace it. Owing to convulsions, the pet dog was finally chloroformed. The funeral was the first ever given at the Thousand Islands, where $100 bulldogs and $500 cats are no uncommon thing in the homes of the millionaire colony. The band played "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," as the mourners quietly dispersed.

Had to Swim In Storm.

Cobalt, July 22.—S. R. Heakes, manager of Kerr Lake and Wettlauger mines, and his secretary, Mr. Bellingham, were forced to swim three-quarters of a mile, when the launch they were sailing swamped in a heavy sea on Lake Temiskaming Wednesday. The two men missed the boat for South Lorraine and chartered the launch.

When well down the lake, a storm arose. In spite of constant bailing it was soon seen that the little craft could not stand the storm, and it was decided to abandon her. It was fully three-quarters of a mile to shore, but after a hard fight they landed safely. Then they walked some two miles around the beach to Silver Centre and reached there just in time to catch the boat to Haileybury.

Will Continue the Fight.

New York, July 22.—The American Anti-boycott Association yesterday declined to abandon on its part the litigation between the American Federation of Labor and the Buck Stove Co., settlement of which between the federation and the company was recently reached.

Interurban Cars Collide.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 22.—Five persons were injured, none seriously, yesterday when two interurban cars on the Cleveland-Painsville & Eastern electric line, met in a head-on collision near Willoughby. The accident is said to have been due to a misunderstanding of orders.

Foster Spoke at Borden Picnic.

St. John, N.B., July 22.—Hon. George E. Foster was the principal speaker at the Borden Club excursion on the river Wednesday night and was greeted with hearty applause. Foster, in opening his speech, said he was not dead, but very much alive.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

No Shortage of Pulpwood.

A BELIEF IN GHOSTS.

Finds Lodgment In Many Minds Despite Scientific Denials.

Are there such things as ghosts? The incredulity with which the question is often asked is paralleled by the passionate belief with which the affirmative answer is often stated. That there are apparitions is granted even by the most skeptical investigators. But whereas the impressionable seer of ghosts believes they are supernatural the colder scientist says they are nothing but hallucinations. Frank Podmore, the English "ghost hunter" has much to say of the attendant circumstances in most ghost seeing, circumstances which do much to weaken the value of the testimony of the seer. Almost invariably there are mysterious noises, by which the witness is put in a state of nervous alarm. Then comes the vision, which often takes terrifying form. Is the ghost seer viewing something objective and external or is he merely contemplating an image created by his own imagination? Of the good faith of many people who say they have seen ghosts there can be no question, but Mr. Podmore shakes his head as to their credibility.

And yet when the testimony of people who believe they have seen ghosts has been attenuated to the utmost people will still believe. Science may discredit evidence, but it cannot prove that ghosts do not exist. Throughout the ages there is a cumulative mass of testimony which, though it does not amount to proof, yet commands shuddering respect. The sternest materialism will not eliminate from people's minds that credence in the unknown and the undemonstrable which has been handed down to them from the beginnings of time.

Plato himself accepted the existence of ghosts, and he makes Socrates explain their frequenting of graveyards. These ghosts, says the great Athenian, long to re-enter the body in which they could gratify their desires. It is hopeless, but memory tortures them with vain affection for the fleshly abode in which they formerly dwelt. Shakespeare is full of allusions to the dwellers in the realm of shadows. But he, too, knows the meaning of philosophic doubt, for he makes Hamlet wonder whether the image of his father may not be some coinage of his fancy. He hesitates between contrary opinions, but inclines toward belief in the supernatural. He says to his friend:

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in thy philosophy.

From Shakespeare's day to now we have advanced in one particular. We know more of the composition of the brain and the susceptibilities of nervous tissue. We are assured to-day that a man may honestly believe he sees a ghost and yet see nothing but the projection of an image within his own brain. But as to the existence or non-existence of ghosts we are as ignorant as the ancient Egyptian or the modern redskin. Reason learnedly as we may, we cannot eradicate from our mind that vague feeling, half fear, half hope, that ghosts may be. Sir Thomas Browne touches on this matter with characteristic quaintness. Some people, he says, hope to see a ghost that they may be persuaded of the immortality of the soul. But he adds that the devil will never let them see one, for that would be to turn them away from himself.

Hon. Mackenzie King Thinks Strike Will Soon Be Over

BROCKVILLE STATION WRECKED BY WILD MOB

A Dozen Strike-Breakers Are Assaulted by a Mob Numbering a Thousand Men, and Two Are So Badly Injured That They Are Forced to Go to the Hospital — Arbitration Offers Still Refused.

Brockville, July 23.—A mob, estimated to number about 1,000 persons, late Friday attacked a number of non-union Grand Trunk employes in the station here, severely assaulted about a dozen of them and badly wrecked the building. Two men had to go to the hospital.

At one o'clock this morning the crowd is still hovering around the depot, awaiting the arrival of the Montreal local, which was due at 11.25 p.m., but which is apparently being held down the line until the crowd disperses. Station Agent Patton has asked the mayor to call out a militia company, but nothing has been done.

Although the crowd had been gathering around the station from about eleven o'clock, only two town policemen were on the job, and they were useless. The chief himself left the station a few minutes before the rioting broke out.

The disorder followed the arrival of the local passenger train from Toronto and a freight. Half a dozen Thiel detectives, a couple of trainmen and Road Foreman Szammen of Belleville were in the station agent's office, when the crowd made an ominous movement in that direction. Those inside bolted the door, but, while some of the crowd used a baggage truck for a battering ram, others began to stone the windows, and others again got out the company's hose and began to flood the office.

The occupants, unable to withstand the siege, came out on the platform, when they were surrounded by the crowd, and struck and kicked and generally assaulted.

Then the crowd moved against the telegraph office, where P. F. Wilcox of Toronto, the conductor of the local from Toronto, with two other Toronto men and a despatcher named Johnson of Belleville, so it is said, were sitting. Somebody in the office fired a revolver shot through the window to scare the invaders, but they came right on, forced the men out, and set upon them so savagely that Wilcox had to go to the hospital, suffering from cuts about the head and body.

E. Course, a private detective from Montreal, is also in the hospital. His shirt was soaked with blood when he was admitted. He said he had been hired to act as a special officer to protect trains along the line to Montreal. Wilcox says he was out of employment when he was engaged by the railway in Toronto.

The windows, doors and furniture of the station are practically destroyed.

Great excitement prevails in the town. Although a crowd has been gathering nightly at the station it has heretofore been only in a curious mood.

Wants Straight Reply.

Ottawa, July 23.—Annoyed by the evasive answers received from both parties to the G.T.R. strike, Hon. Mr. King, Minister of Labor, yesterday sent telegrams to Messrs. Hays and Murdock, saying:

"Referring further to my letter of the 20th instant and the replies received, I would respectfully point out that neither the reply from the president of the company, nor the reply from the representative of the general committee of the employes, answers the question it asks, which is, whether, as representing one of the parties to the present dispute, you will not be willing to refer the existing differences to arbitration, provided a board of arbitrators mutually acceptable can be secured, and the necessary expense incidental to such a board be met by the Government."

Police on Every Bridge.

Toronto, July 23.—Freight will move to-day if the plans of the Grand Trunk do not miscarry. The only fear of officialdom is that strikers or sympathizers may become belligerent, and to guard against interference the police authorities along the lines where traffic is to re-open have been asked to be particularly vigilant and afford the company's employes proper protection.

"We can start a through freight service from Brockville and Belleville at any time the authorities are able to furnish proper protection for our men against the mob which continues to molest them around the stations and yards," read General Manager Brownlee from a report received from the east yesterday.

Yesterday a policeman was placed upon every bridge in the city over the G.T.R. tracks. This is following the company's allegation that the wreck of the Muskoka express Thursday morning immediately north of the Dundas street bridges, was caused by tampering with the tracks.

Thirty extra policemen were sworn in by the company.

A Boston sewage purifying station utilizes for fuel the screenings from sewage, dried and compressed into briquettes.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Montreal, July 23.—It is stated here that Hon. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, has expressed the opinion that Grand Trunk officials and representatives of the men will within a day or two arrive at some agreement regarding arbitration.

He regards this as the only possible chance of settlement.

THINK DR. CRIPPEN HAS COME TO CANADA.

(Intelligencer Special)

London, Eng., July 23.—Inspector Drew, of Scotland Yard, sailed away this morning for Quebec, Canada, the authorities admitting that he was following an important clue, as to the whereabouts of Dr. Crippen, wanted for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore.

It is believed here that the boat Crippen is supposed to be on is the Allan liner Corsican, sailing from Liverpool, July twelfth, arriving in Montreal yesterday.

FORTY-FIRST REGIMENT CALLED OUT IN BROCKVILLE.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 23.—There is a report that the Forty-First Regiment has been called out and is on duty at Brockville on account of strike riots. There is no confirmation from either Brockville or Ottawa about it.

THREATENED RIOTS IN BUFFALO PREVENTED

(Intelligencer Special.)

Buffalo, July 23.—There were threatenings of rioting when Grand Trunk strikebreakers started out to move freight trains this morning; but the police had the situation well in hand, and so far all that has happened is the growling of strike sympathizers in restaurants and streets adjacent to the yards.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF SPANISH EX-PREMIER

(Intelligencer Special.)

Madrid, Spain, July 23.—There is a tendency throughout rebellious Spain this morning to exalt and make a hero patriot of Posas Roca, delivery waggon driver, who shot and nearly killed Senor Antonio Maura, the hated ex-premier, when on his way with his family to their summer home yesterday

Maura received bullets in his leg and amputation may be necessary.

Only the intervention of a female relative, who grabbed Roca, and misdirected his aim, saved Maura from assassination.

It was just the other day that Deputy J. S. Gelias, in the Chamber, after a vitriolic speech, demanded Maura's death for causing the Barcelona massacres last year.

Maura's bodyguard of soldiers yesterday were too indifferent or too cowardly to prevent the shooting.

PRESS ON PREFERENCE.

Pros and Cons of Balfour's Speech In London.

London, July 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Referring to the debate in the Commons, The Daily News says the colonies mean to control their own affairs, and Imperial preferentialists mean they will not. For that reason an Imperial preference is an insidious attack upon the integrity of the Empire. What Canada thinks of protection and preference the farmers' memorial shows. We would not add one word to it save this, that it is the farmers who are destined to control the Canadian policy.

The London Express says that party spirit has stood blindly in the way of tariff reform and the Empire has to suffer for it. Soon our chance of Imperial salvation will have passed from us; when it has passed it will have passed irrevocably and the Empire will pass with it.

The Morning Post says the French-Canadian treaty has been the severest blow at preferential prospects for the future. In discussing fiscal relations between Germany and Canada, Asquith carefully avoided the slightest reference to the real cause of that dispute.

The Leader says it is an odd coincidence that the Western Canadian farmers were protesting against the evils of protection on the very day that Balfour was preaching its advantages in England.

The Glasgow Herald says that Canada cannot give away a preference and keep it, therefore the danger of delay should be obvious to a Canadian. Canada's action as a separatist would be futile, even if it were accurate.

The Scotsman declares that even those who are unwilling or tardy converts recognize that tariff reform, with colonial preference is inevitable.

The London Daily Mail, in reference to Asquith's point about the difficulty of instituting a preference without causing jealousy, says that the dominions are not animated by the dog-in-the-manger temper which Asquith so unjustly ascribed to them, and declares that behind the acceptance or rejection of the offer of the oversea states lies the even larger issue of the union or disintegration of the Empire.

The American Contention.

The Hague, July 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Continuing his argument for the United States, Elder affirmed that, notwithstanding Lord Elgin's warning to the governor of Newfoundland to conform to the modus vivendi concluded between Britain and America in 1906, the Newfoundland law prohibiting the sale of herrings to American fishermen for use as bait, which had for its object to render it impossible for Americans to fish for cod, was carried out with the utmost vigor against American vessels and those inhabitants of Newfoundland who had procured bait for them.

Elder further said that Newfoundland fishermen had demanded the abolition of the law, which did them great harm, and had also addressed petitions to the same effect to the Newfoundland Parliament. The Newfoundland law forbidding inhabitants of the colony to take service on foreign craft was repealed in the case of American vessels by a royal decree, but Newfoundland had, in spite of this, enforced its provisions.

He contended that owners of United States fishing vessels could engage foreigners to fish for them under the protection of the American flag. This contention gave rise to considerable discussion between counsel and several members of the tribunal, who appeared to dissent from the view of Elder.

Innocent Man Suffered.

Tours, France, July 23.—A rag-picker namel Joseph has confessed to the assassination, April 21, 1901, of five children of a farmer named Briere, in the vicinity of Chartres. The father of the children was found guilty of the murders and sentenced to life imprisonment. He died in prison.

The trial of Briere attracted the attention of the whole of France. Four of his daughters, aged respectively 14, 11, 5 and 4, and his son, aged 7 years, were found in bed one morning, stabbed and beaten to death. The farmer was arrested and charged by the police with the crime. According to a theory advanced by the police to provide for the crime, Briere, who owned a small farm near Cerancez, wished to marry a woman of considerable wealth.

Circumstantial evidence led to the conviction that the farmer, considering his family an encumbrance, murdered his five children in order to carry out his wishes.

Auto Struck by Trolley.

Olean, N.Y., July 23.—An auto, driven by Max Lang, and carrying four little children, was struck by a Lake Shore trolley here yesterday afternoon. Irene Meder is dead. Lina Heath is dying from a fractured skull; Garrett Henan and Marion Ball are badly hurt, but will live. Lang is badly bruised and delirious from mental strain. He had taken the children out for a ride and was running fast when the accident happened. The auto turned turtle and the children were thrown clear.

ANGUS IS PRESIDENT

Financier Becomes Head of the Bank of Montreal.

Magnate Who Started With the Institution as a Clerk at $600 Fifty-Three Years Ago Is Back Again In Its Executive Affairs—He is a Patron of Art and a Generous Supporter of McGill University.

Montreal, July 23.—The financial community is jubilant over the appointment of R. B. Angus, senior director, as president of the Bank of Montreal, the choice having been made yesterday at noon. The same meeting of directors also elected H. Vincent Meredith, manager of the Montreal branch, and assistant general manager, to a seat on the board of directors, both appointments being made necessary by the death of Sir George A. Drummond.

Mr. Angus entered the Bank of Montreal in 1857, and although he was a married man his salary was then $600 per annum. He worked up to the position of general manager, leaving the bank in 1879 to accept the position of manager of the then newly-acquired St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. He was made a director of the bank in 1891. Mr. Angus is a director of the C.P.R. and is generally considered the financial genius behind Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

R. B. ANGUS.

Mr. Angus is known as a generous patron of art, and has one of the finest private art collection in Canada. He has also been prominently identified with the Royal Victoria Hospital, McGill University and various charitable organizations. It is understood that he will soon be knighted.

H. Vincent Meredith, who entered the bank in Hamilton in 1867, is also a safe banker and his promotion a well-merited one.

Regulate Sale of Poisons.

Toronto, July 23.—That the sale of poisons by hardware stores should be subject to regulation, was the recommendation of the jury empanelled by Coroner Gilmour of West Toronto to enquire into the death of James Doyle.

Doyle, who was living apart from his wife, had been drinking heavily, and on July 13 committed suicide in his boarding-house by taking paris green, which he obtained at a hardware store.

The jury did not attach any blame to the proprietor of the establishment, but thought it would be wise to impose restrictions somewhat similar to those which regulate the sale of poisons in drug stores.

Railways to Amalgamate.

Ottawa, July 23.—As soon as the Railway Commissioners meet in September, applications will be made on behalf of the Ontario & Ottawa Railway Co., Irondale, Bancroft & Ottawa Railway Co., Marmora Railway & Mining Co., Central Ontario Railway Co. and the Brockville, Westport & Northwestern Railway Co., for recommendations to the governor-in-council for the sanction of agreements for the selling and conveying to the Ontario & Ottawa Railway Co. by the other companies of their railways, powers and undertakings.

Tied Twine on Sunday.

London, Ont., July 23.—Five employes of the International Harvester Co. were in the Police Court yesterday morning charged with a breach of the Lords' Day Act in working on Sunday. The men were at work last Sunday tying up and getting ready for shipment packages of binder twine. The manager pleaded that, at this time of the year it was a work of urgency and necessity to meet the needs of the farmers so that the farmers might get in their crops. The magistrate dismissed the case.

Inspecting the Canals.

Brockville, July 23.—On a tour of inspection of the St. Lawrence and Welland canals, the Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, W. A. Stewart, and Col. A. Bertram of Dundas, arrived here during the night aboard the Government steamer Speedy. Yesterday morning they left for Welland.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Home, Sweet Home!

◆ ◆ ◆

Welcome to the Old Boys and Girls.

◆ ◆ ◆

O, Willie, we have missed you.

◆ ◆ ◆

Make yourself at home. The old town belongs to you.

◆ ◆ ◆

Sakes alive, Maria! Why you haven't changed a bit.

◆ ◆ ◆

Get into the old pews to-morrow, boys and girls, and sing the old hymns that mother used to sing. There's nothing better than religion of the home-made brand..

◆ ◆ ◆

Hope you brought your camera to take a snap shot of the decorations. Aren't they fine?

◆ ◆ ◆

Goodness! But hasn't little Mary grown since you left!

"The railroads these days are public utilities," says a gentleman of this city who is well versed in public affairs.' "That being the case, why should not the Government compel each employee to sign an agreement to work under a yearly contract, and compel the railroads to pay wages on a scale fixed by the Government". That seems to be the only fair way to prevent such calamities as that which is crippling Canada at present.

◆ ◆ ◆

The railroads or their employers can do the striking. Why, then shouldn't the general public be the umpire.

◆ ◆ ◆

"For the land's sake," said a lady, "do you suppose Halley's comet had anything to do with the strike."

◆ ◆ ◆

A good many old familiar faces are seen on the street these days, but a good many more are missed owing to the G. T. R. strike. We have heard of dozens of families whose expected visitors are not coming owing to their fear of travelling on the railroad at present.

◆ ◆ ◆

If the Grand Trunk management and strikers want to hear three hearty cheers from this city they will cut their strike short.

◆ ◆ ◆

Welcome home, ladies and gentlemen. And you are all the more welcome because you made a home run and didn't go out on strike.

◆ ◆ ◆

These are the days when Bellevillians can slightly alter the words of the hymn: "Every prospect pleases, and only the strike is disappointing."

◆ ◆ ◆

Well, here's looking at you, Old Boys and Girls. As they say in the Green Isle:

You're welcome all, heartily welcome. Gramachree welcome, every one.

◆ ◆ ◆

By the last British budget we learn that the Customs duties are estimated at 32,000,000 pounds out of a total of 142,445,000 pounds. The excise duties at 34,270,000 pounds, the death duties at 25,650,000 ponuds and the income tax at 37,550,000. The British opposition propose as an alternative the levying of Customs duties on a wider range of articles, and expect and desire that these duties will be protective as well as revenue—producing.

◆ ◆ ◆

Sir Wilfrid in a speech delivered in Winnipeg, told his audience that he expected to win a couple of seats in Toronto at the next election. He should have added "after we have gerrymandered the city," which no doubt will be attempted after the next census is taken.

◆ ◆ ◆

Sir Wilfrid declared in one of his speeches in the west that there is no graft in connection with the Transcontinental Railway, and that every dollar expended upon the project has been epended honestly. He challenges investigation. Why, then, did he and his Ministry block the inquiries instituted by the Opposition in Parliament and Parliamentary committees Answer that.

◆ ◆ ◆

In discussing the "whooping up" expedition of Sir Wilfrid to the west. The Toronto News calls attention to the fact that "Sir Wilfrid has not told "the people of the West what became "of the platform of 1893. He has not "deigned to refer to principles of any "kind, least of all Liberal principles." How could he refer to what the Liberal party, since the days of the old Reforms ceased to exist, have not got.

Yesterday several members of the W. C. A. Trustee Board, with the inspector and contractors, and the architect, Mr. Chas. Work on both buildings will be started at once and the Association bespeaks the generous support of both the city and adjacent counties in carrying forward to completion this much needed institution.

The Strike

Everything Quiet At Local Station.

A fair sized crowd collected at the local station last night, to watch the locals from the east and west come in. After the disturbances on Thursday night people thought that there might be another act to the drama, but they were disappointed. The police force were on hand in force, and Mayor Marsh was also on the platform. The police unceremoniously hustled everybody off the platform except those who had business there. It was as quiet as a Quaker's meeting when the trains arrived, and not even an insinuation was thrown. Both trains crews reported everything quiet all along the line.

The Grand Trunk pay car arrived yesterday, and the paying was done in Graham's siding.

SUPERINTENDENT BROWNLEE SAYS.

Toronto, July 22 — Superintendent Brownlee, of the G. T. R., discussing strike matters, said:

Freights can be started from Belleville and Brockville any time the authorities can furnish the proper protection against the strikers, who are apt to cut the hose bags on a freight before it gets under way, and this would put the train out of commission until the hose was repaired.

The men who are working for the company around Point St. Charles and other yards will have Dominion Government police protection in the sixth and seventh districts. Everything is quiet around Montreal and points east this morning, and the sooner the strike is over the better for everybody. The men working in the Belleville and Brockville yards have been molested around the station yards, but the police have promised protection there, ad everything is quiet in these places this morning.

Continuing, Mr. Brownlee said:"With the exception of a little rioting at Belleville three times yesterday, and a little interference at York last night with passenger trains, we have, as yet, received no notification of any trouble at all on the system.

A MEAN TRICK.

"I do wish, though, that the strikers would leave the wives of the men working on the road for us alone, there have been several instances at where the strikers have notified these women that their husbands were coming home all maimed and with broken bones, etc., as the result of collisions with the strikers, and these reports have been base lies.

"This is a most contemptible trick and a very unfair way of using the women in this fight. If the men will only let us alone we will not bother them, but it is a shame to have the wives of our employees brought into this strike in this low manner, and something should be done to put a stop to it.

The Port Hope Guide has this to say of Mr. McMahon, who was injured in the riot here on Thursday night:

"The Mr. McMahon referred to in despatches is Joshua McMahon, (not John), and is a resident of Port Hope, living on Smith street. He returned from Belleville on the 1.07 train today, and while badly used up, his condition is not critical. When going to the hotel in Belleville last evening Mr. McMahon noticed a large crowd of men standing near the building, but did not suspect that anything was wrong. As he passed he was struck on the head with a large stone and his ear was severely cut. Then he was grabbed by one of the men and while endeavoring to free himself, was pounced upon by several others. His shoulder and back were badly bruised by the kicking he received and one eye is almost closed Mr .McMahan will be confined to his home for some days.

It is rumored that Charles Adams, one of the conductors who refused to go with the strikers, was roughly handled at Madoc yesterday and has not been working since. Mr. Richard Boundy, the other conductor who remained on duty, is confined to his home through illness.

Toronto Official Hurt at Picton.

Toronto, July 22.—Word reached the city today of an accident in which Mr. G. Frederick W. Price, assistant City Architect, was badly shaken up at Picton, Prince Edward County, while driving his automobile with a party of relatives, near that place, yesterday afternoon. The machine struck a stone and stopping suddenly, Mr. Price was hurled through the glass window. The other members of the party were jarred somewhat, but not injured. The assistant City Architect's condition is not serious.

Lore of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. Of the five leaved clover it is declared that if it be worn on the left side of a maiden's dress or fastened behind the hall door the Christian name of the first man who enters will be the same as that of the future husband. The power of the four leaved shamrock for good is familiar to all from Lover's pretty and once popular song, the speaker in which pictures what she would do should she find the magic plant:

I would play the enchanter's part and scatter bliss around,
And not a tear or aching heart should in the world be found.

—London Globe.

The Nature of Friendship.

Friendship may be fostered, but cannot be forced. Two are as one, not because it is in the will of either, but because it is in the nature of both. When souls of similar fiber encounter each other the gods preside at the meeting. I may not cockily say, "I will make this man my friend." He either is or is not my friend without any decision of mine or his. The ages have been shaping the two of us, and if we fit into each other well and good; if not, we know it instinctively and are worlds apart though we toast our shins at the same fire and bandy words till doomsday.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

Consolation.

There had been a little quarrel after the honeymoon.

"And just look at my pretty linen collar," sobbed the young wife; "the tears have trickled down and wilted it out of shape. You haven't a bit of feeling."

"Indeed I have," laughed the big husband; "I'm going to fix things up."

"H-how, George?"

"Why, the next time I go downtown I am going to buy you a waterproof collar."—Chicago News.

A Special Brand.

Mrs. Recentmarrie—I want half a dozen red lemons. The Fruiterer—Red lemons? Mrs. Recentmarrie—Yes, sir; I want to surprise my husband by making him some red lemonade.—Chicago News.

The Two Periods.

The career of every successful man may be divided into two periods—first, when he is not given credit for what he knows and, second, when he is given credit for what he doesn't know.—Life.

Do not talk about disgrace from a thing being known when the disgrace is that the thing should exist.—Falconer.

A SERIOUS DINER.

The Way the Great Emperor Charles V. Ate His Meals.

The diary of a German gentleman, Bartholomew Sastrow, who lived in the time of the Emperor Charles V., gives us a good idea of the gastronomic customs of those times. Sastrow's description of the table habits of the greatest ruler in his day is very interesting.

Young princes and counts served the repast. There were invariably four courses of six dishes. The emperor had no one to carve for him. He began by cutting his bread in pieces large enough for one mouthful, then attacked his plate. He often used his fingers while he held the plate under his chin with the other hand.

When he felt thirsty he made a sign to the "doctor" standing by the table; then they went to the sideboard for two silver flagons and filled a goblet which held about a measure and a half. The emperor drained it to the last drop, practically at one draft.

During the meal he never uttered a syllable, scarcely smiled at the most amusing sallies of the jesters behind his chair, finally picked his teeth with quills and, after washing his hands, retired to a window recess, where anybody could approach him with a petition.

SALT WATER.

Deep Seas Are More Saline Than Those That Are Shallow.

The density of sea water depends upon the quantity of saline matter it contains. The proportion is generally about 3 or 4 per cent, though it varies in different places. The ocean contains more salt in the southern than in the northern hemisphere, and the Atlantic contains more than the Pacific. The greatest proportion of salt in the Pacific is in the parallels of 22 degrees north latitude and 17 degrees south latitude. Near the equator it is less, and in the polar seas it is least, from the melting of the ice.

The saltness varies with the seasons in these regions, and the fresh water, being lighter, is uppermost. Rain makes the surface of the sea fresher than the interior parts, and the influx of rivers renders the ocean less salt at their estuaries.

Deep seas are more saline than those that are shallow, and inland seas communicating with the main are less salt, from the rivers that flow into them. To this, however, the Mediterranean is an exception, owing to great evaporation and the influx of salt currents from the Black sea and the Atlantic. The water in the strait of Gibraltar at the depth of 670 fathoms is four times as salt as that at the surface.—St. James' Gazette.

The German Navy.

It is quite evident that Germany intends to have a navy equal, if possible, to that of Britain. During the debate on naval expenditure in the House of Commons on the 14th, Premier Asquith reiterated that it was the desire of the British Government to come to a friendly agreement with Germany looking to the curtailment of armaments. "I wish," said the Prime Minister, "that an agreement could be reached with Germany for a reduction of the vast naval expenditure. This Government has approached the German Government on the subject, but the latter can do nothing, owing to the navy law on their statute books. That being so, we must make our programme accordingly. He added by April, 1913, Great Britain would only have 25 Dreadnoughts to Germany's 21, which could not be regarded as an inflated jingo programme.

The Little Case.

In the case of Ernest Little accused of taking away and marrying Ethel Povey, a girl under 18 years of age, against the will or consent of her parents, Magistrate Masson considered the accused guilty on some points but deferred sentence. This was owing to the fact that Mr. Carnew, for the accused, desired to present some points of law, which the Magistrate said he would permit to be given. Little, in the meantime, is in jail. The bail was fixed at two sureties of $500 each which were not forthcoming.

MODELS OF WARSHIP

Splendid Display of Various Kinds in Britain's Fleet.

When you talk of the British navy do you fully realize what a variety of styles of vessels it takes to make up Britain's mighty fleet? At the Canadian National Exhibition this year you will see a display of warship models that will be at once interesting and educative. It will consist of models of submarines, torpedo boat destroyers and battleships. These models are furnished by the great shipbuilding firms of Vickers, Sons & Maxim and R. and W. Hawthorne, Leslie, & Co., and are beauties, some of them being sixteen feet long.

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices Is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hodges in New York Tribune.

In Doubt.

Editor—Look here, what sort of writing is this in your story?

Reporter—What's wrong with it, sir?

Editor—You say in your account of this party where they had fun with a bashful guest, "As his intended partner swept past gracefully the others brushed by to scour the place for the timid victim of the game, who had lost courage and dusted." Say, are you writing about a social party or a housecleaning exhibition?—New York Journal.

A Lesson In Anatomy.

A professor at one of our universities is very witty upon occasion.

She touches up her face.

The Broken Trust

"What is to be done?" asked Lord Damar whose inclination to sneer had died a natural death.

"I propose," said Captain Chandos "that we go all together, and at once, to Belgrave Lodge, and demand an interview with this man. If he is innocent, we can then make amends. You will go with us, Lord Damar?"

"Certainly," was the prompt reply. "I can't learn the truth too quick, for Blanche's sake."

"And you, Mr. Westerne?" asked Captain Chandos.

But the artist sank back with a pale, scared look.

"He has been kind to me," he said pitifully; "so kind that I cannot bear to see him struck down, even in justice."

"But it demands it," said Vivian; "and justice is a sacred name. Pity for the living must not deprive you of pity for the dead."

He consented then to go, but gentle, tender hearted Paul Westerne would rather have suffered any torture than have stood by while a fellow creature went through the ordeal that awaited the man who had loaded him with kindness.

Mr. Grey called a cab, and the four gentlemen entered it; the artist still carrying the little picture painted so many years under the blue skies of far-off Wabash.

It so happened that Esther Bruce, unable to rest without warning Sir Alan, had, despite her rebuff of the previous night, started off again for Belgrave Lodge.

At first she had been angry and so indignant—her pride was so thoroughly aroused — that she said, he might suffer as he would, she would not help him again; but Esther was a true woman, and after a time more generous thoughts came to her. She remembered what he had been, and for the sake of that old love was true to him still.

She walked to Belgrave Lodge, determined to see him, to advise him, to persuade him to fly, and do justice; but even as she reached the door, the cab stopped and the four gentlemen alighted.

In one moment the conviction came to her that she was too late — he was hunted down. Ah! if he had but seen her when she sent for him!

They had hunted him down. Why else should they go together, with grave faces, to his house? He was in danger. She forgot all in that thought When the ponderous hall door closed behind the gentlemen and the cab was driven away Esther went timidly up the steps. She expected to be dismissed again with words such as she could ill brook to hear; but it was a strange face that appeared at the door. The hall porter and butler, having been up the greater part of the night, were still asleep.

The man replied civilly enough that his master was engaged, but if the lady liked to wait she could do so.

Esther's white face and eyes, so full of terrible sorrow, startled the man. He placed a chair for her, and left her. She sat quite still. Ah, never while life lasts will Esther Bruce forget the torture of that hour in which she knew Paul Lynne's agony had begun.

The silence was unbroken.

Sir Alan had risen with his mind full of pleasant thoughts.

He went down to the breakfast room, when it was laid.

He felt particularly well and happy that morning, for nothing but honor seemed to await him.

He passed the morning pleasantly, then a footman came to tell him several gentlemen were waiting for him in the library.

"Several gentlemen," replied Sir Alan, with a smile—he was always affable to his inferiors. "Have they sent neither names nor cards?"

"Neither, sir," replied the man. "If I might take the liberty, sir, I should say it was a deputation. I lived with Lord Heavystone last year, and he had deputations almost every day."

A deputation, thought Sir Alan, come, doubtless, to offer one of those good things that he felt would fall to his share. A deputation—the first he had ever received. Sir Alan went quickly up to his room. A deputation must be received in a becoming toilet. He went up, with a smile on his face — the last ever seen there!

Life a Nightmare.

HELPLESS AND BROKEN DOWN, DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS CAME TO THE RESCUE

There are many who think anaemia is a trouble confined to growing girls and women, but this is not the case. Thousands of men are anaemic, and attribute their growing weakness to mental or physical overwork, or worry, and who do not appear to realize that they are swiftly passing into that condition known as general debility, and that their trouble is due entirely to the fact that their blood is watery and impure. If the trouble is not taken in time, they pass from one stage to another until the trouble is complete, and often until a cure is beyond hope. To men in all walks of life there is no medicine so valuable as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you feel jaded, weak or worn out, these Pills will make that rich, red blood that puts vim and energy into every portion of the body. Making good blood is the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and good blood is the one secret of good health and vigorous life. An excellent case in point is that of Mr. R. W. Ellis, of Balcarres, Sask., who says:—"Just four years ago I was in England making preparations to fulfill the long cherished ambition of coming to Canada. My health at that time was normal, though I was never very strong. Three weeks before the time of my departure I was overcome with a feeling of general weakness and faintness which rendered me so inert and lifeless that my days were shrouded in gloom. Consultation with a doctor brought me no consolation. Debility was my trouble and I was on the point of a breakdown. 'Canada, in your condition means death,' said the doctor. 'You must have a complete rest'. A rest, however, was out of the question, a fortnight's holiday I had, and then back to earn my daily bread. The next years were a series of misery and despair, body and brain undermined with a complaint the doctor could only call debility, but apparently could not cure. Snatching holidays when I could I struggled on until the opening of 1909, when completely prostrated I was compelled to go to my parents and become a burden to them. My life was simply an existence and friends said, behind my back, 'consumption.'

"In April, 1909, I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Three months later, on July 1st, I sailed from Liverpool on the Tunisian for Montreal, full of new life, energy and hope. In this great country I am making good and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In three months they changed me from a nervous wreck to a healthy man. When doctors failed they succeeded, and I honestly believe they saved my life."

You can procure this great health-giving medicine from any dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CURE FOR LOSS OF MEMORY.

Case of an American Woman Married Abroad and an Accent.

"Nothing disgusts me more," said a woman who goes abroad every summer, "than to meet in Europe Americans who seem to be ashamed of their own language. I have often come across them, but a woman I met in Carlsbad last year took the palm.

"She was introduced to me as the Countess Komoffsky or some name that sounded like that. She married a Russian or a Pole about three years before, and so far as I can gather she had hardly been any nearer Europe than a New York table d'hote before that time. She looked American, but her English was all broken into bits. She did not even say 'the,' but pronounced it 'ze.' She had great difficulty in recollecting phrases, and the result at times was a lot of French.

"Next morning I was breakfasting in the Kaiserpark with a party of shawl wrapped Americans who had drunk the requisite number of glasses from the Sprudel or the Marktbrunnen and had walked out according to prescription. One of those at the table was a New York physician who is none the less popular because he is frank in speech almost to brutality and will not stand for affectation. The countess came along and was invited to join the party. The doctor, it turned out, had known her since she was a child.

"Somebody asked her a question, and she started to reply with that accent of hers. I saw the doctor fidget. Then she made another remark in half French. The doctor said something that sounded like a swear. Then he blurted out:

"'For heaven's sake, Maria Smith, you don't mean to say that three years in Europe have made you forget your native tongue?'

"There was a hush, and then some of the women in the party smiled, but when the countess next spoke it was in purest United States.—New York Sun.

Hard to Check.

It was the young hubby's first tour through the big department store.

"What room is that?" he asked innocently when they reached the second floor.

"Why, that is where they check babies," elucidated his wife.

And then young hubby looked at the struggling infant in his arms and the buttons and pins it had dislocated and said simply:

"I wish they'd try to check this one."—Chicago News.

This, Madam, is the question:—

Can you make Puff Paste that is p-u-f-f-y?

Pastries that raise away up, crisp, mellow-flavoured?

With a clear, delicate creaminess, a golden bloom that is tooth-teasing, mouth-watering?

With a crinkly, close-grained texture that is tender all over, melting away on the tongue tip, leaving a lingering moreish taste on the soft spot of the pleased palate?

And that long—sought quality, the envy of the good cooks,—an even flakiness?

The kind mother tried so hard to make, you know. Madam, you simply must use FIVE ROSES.

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found In the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curasson. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto esta aqui" (the corpse lies here).

"It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its retreat, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It can then be cautiously approached and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It is very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most pugnacious of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it meets them. Often the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fiercest parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

An indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was dexterously caught by Grasso. Raising it aloft in his hand and as if it were accursed, Grasso smashed it in two and then stamped upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had climbed back to the boards, with the victim in his arms.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long entreaty for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed playgoer, who on his side begged to be allowed to return to his seat.

But this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

The action was greeted with loud cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully bowed his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.

Blows His Own Horn.

"What kind of a fellow is Griggs?"

"He's one of those chaps who can do anything."

"How delightful!"

"Yes, but he likes to tell of it."

"Oh!"—Boston Herald.

FREEZING CAVERNS.

Subterranean Caves That Are Lined With Crystalline Ice.

There are deep cavities and tunneled recesses in the earth far away from sunlight and held in the tight embrace of rocky strata where secret hoards of glittering ice find habitation all the year round. Yet down in these queer places the ice is as clear and chrystalline as any that nature maintains in the open air. Moreover, it occurs on a truly grand and massive scale.

Imagine thick underground ice walls and floors and craftily fissured columns beautiful in shape and color streaming from roof to floor of lofty rock chambers! And under the slow drip, drip, drip of percolating water this same ice learns to fashion itself into cave adornments—frozen water drops, curling slopes, stalactites and stalagmites of fantastic shape and rainbow hues.

Subterranean cold waves, or "glaciers," as they are frequently called, crop up in some 300 scattered localities in Europe, Asia and America, but all, with rare exceptions, whether true ice caverns or grottoes and deep hollows, are confined to the north temperate regions of these continents—that is, to places where there is a sufficiently low temperature at some portion of the year to reach freezing point and render snowfall possible.—Pearson's Magazine.

THEY SIT AND LOOK.

Women Who Watch For Celebrities In a New York Restaurant.

"I always wonder," said a New York woman who lunches out a good deal, "what satisfaction the women get out of life who flock to a certain fashionable uptown restaurant at lunchtime just to see celebrities.

"They look as if they cannot afford to be there, and the truth is they do not apparently go there for food. I have watched them ordering and noted what was brought them, and almost invariably it is some such thing as cafe parfait, or an ice of some kind, or a cup of tea or of chocolate and a sandwich.

"They sit and look. The moment some stage celebrity comes in there is a craning of necks, and you hear excited whisperings, 'Oh, there's So-and-so!' mentioning an actress or a matinee idol, and the neck craning keeps on until a fresh subject for scrutiny comes in.

"You can see this sort of thing every lunchtime at this restaurant. There is a regular contingent of these rubberneckers, and they are not visitors from the far west, either."—New York Sun.

Growing Corn For Cob Pipes.

Probably not one smoker in a hundred who likes the "real American pipe"—the corncob—is aware of the fact that many acres in Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska are devoted to raising corn for the especial purpose of producing cobs suitable for fashioning into pipe bowls. The grain itself is marketed, of course, but the cob on which it grows is the real harvest and is cut carefully into proper lengths, smoothed and polished, the soft inner pulp being gouged out by specially constructed machinery. The corncob pipe goes to every country in the world where men smoke and is especially in favor in Australia and New Zealand, where it is regarded as characteristically American, because it suggests the idea of Yankee ingenuity. The brier is the favorite with Englishmen, who are probably the greatest pipe smokers in the world.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Waiting For the Note.

An English churchman tells the following:

"At one of our cathedrals the minor canon was ill and could not sing. A suffragan bishop had a good voice and volunteered to sing the litany. 'Go,' he said to the verger, 'and tell the organist that I will sing the litany and ask him to give me the reciting note.' 'Please, sir,' said the verger to the organist, 'the bishop 'as sent me to you to say he will sing the litany.' 'All right,' said the organist. Seeing the verger remain, he said, 'You need not stay.' 'Please, sir, the bishop asked me to to ask you if you would give him a something—I didn't quite catch—note.' 'You mean the reciting note.' 'That's it, sir; that's it.' Seeing the verger still remaining, he said, 'You need not stay.' To which the verger said, 'Please, sir, shall I take it to his lordship?'"

Camel Carriages.

Camel carriages are not common conveyances in most parts of India, but on the great trunk road leading to Delhi they are frequently to be seen. They are large, double story wagons, drawn sometimes by one, sometimes by two or even three camels, according to their size. Iron bars which give them a cagelike appearance were originally intended as a defense against robbers, and the carts were probably also used for the conveyance of prisoners.

Her Sad Fate.

"What a beautiful little girl she is!"

"Yes, and, just think, she'll have to marry a mere American unless her father chirks up and exhibits more ability as a financier than he has ever shown thus far."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Stingy.

"He is a stingy old curmudgeon, isn't he?"

"The worst I ever saw. Why, he'd haggle over the cost of building a spite fence."—Exchange.

He who flatters you is your enemy.—Cardan.

DISCREDITS THEIR CAUSE.

(Toronto Star)

The worst enemies of the G. T. R. strikers are the sympathizers, so-called, who incite lawlessness such as characterized the attack on a train crew at Belleville last night. Nothing will so soon and so surely discredit the strikers in the eyes of the general public as unwarranted attacks upon the men who have taken their places. Unfortunately there seems to be, in every community an element which regards a strike as an excuse for a riot.

The affair at Belleville was particularly brutal. The men attacked were both officers in the employ of the Grand Trunk Company; they were not professional strike-breakers; they did not invite violence. One of them was the aged superintendent of the bridge department and he is quite seriously hurt.

Sympathy which finds expression in violence is the kind of sympathy which the majority of the strikers do not desire. They know as well as anyone knows, that it will only discredit their cause in the eyes of the public. In Belleville and other centres dependent wholly upon the Grand Trunk for service, feeling is likely to run high. It is unfortunate, however, that such feeling should manifest itself in an outbreak of lawlessness, and doubly unfortunate that an aged man should be one of the victims.

ROSE TO THE OCCASION.

It Was the Chance of a Lifetime, and She Made the Most of It.

The burglar hesitated. Back of him was a sheer drop of twenty-five feet to the ground. In front of him was a determined woman, grasping in her hand a huge revolver. She covered him steadily.

"I won't shoot," she said, "if you will remain still."

She advanced upon him and, poking the muzzle of the gun in his face, reached into his pocket and pulled out his revolver.

"Come in."

The burglar obediently stepped inside the room. All his courage was gone.

"Sit down," said the woman.

He sat down.

She got a huge ball of heavy cord from her bureau and spent the next twenty minutes in tying him up.

Then she pointed out of the window. "Is that your wagon out there behind the barn?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Thought you would carry away my silver in it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

The woman called her husband, who had been hiding behind the baby's crib in the next room.

"Here, John," she said, "take some of this furniture out."

John came in and got to work. The burglar watched with curious eyes. Suddenly his face blanched. He looked out of the window and saw in the light of the moon what John was carrying.

"What are you doing to me?" he asked.

The woman began cutting his cords.

"I'm going to load you up with all of the old eyesores that we have had in the house for these many years," she said merrily—"all the furniture presented to us at Christmas by kind hearted relatives, all the prizes we have taken at card parties, all the family portraits—everything that we have been simply dying to get rid of."—Life.

Perils of the Hair Cut.

"Ouch!" cried the barber and something besides. He stuck the end of his thumb in his mouth and began sucking it.

"Cut yourself?" asked the man in the chair.

"No; it's an ingrowing hair," replied the barber—"an ingrowing hair under my thumb nail."

The man in the chair laughed.

"Fact," said the barber. "It isn't an uncommon thing either. In giving a customer a hair cut a bit of hair often lodges under the finger nail, and if it isn't removed it is apt to fester and get sore. Sometimes we don't even know it's there until it begins to get in its fine work. It hurts like the dickens sometimes. If you don't believe me, ask any barber and he'll tell you the same thing."—New York Times.

A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari, a tall, slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdali's chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, which the Abdali does by hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 125 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.88. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.—Consular and Trade Reports.

Fairly Warned.

"Mr. Smith," spoke up the young lawyer, "I come here as a representative of your neighbor, Tom Jones, with the commission to collect a debt due him."

"I congratulate you," answered Mr. Smith, "on obtaining so permanent a job at such an early stage in your career."—Success.

FLAGS FLYING, BANDS PLAYING--IN RIOT OF COLOR, JOY AND HARMONY OLD BOYS CAME HOME.

OLD BOYS' REUNION OFF TO A GOOD START TO-DAY — CITY ALREADY THRONGED WITH VISITORS — "NEVER SAW THE OLD PLACE LOOK SO PRETTY," THEY SAY — TO-DAY'S DOINGS.

O, darkies, how my heart grows weary,
Far from the old folks at home.

When the Fifteenth Band, 24 strong played the above well-known melody on Front street this morning, the echo found a responsive chord in the breast of many an old Boy and Girl.

There's no place quite like Home. Home is where the heart lies, and the eyes of many a wanderer, who has been called away by self-interest or fortune's changes, grew misty as they listened to the strains of "The Old Folks at Home."

And did the Old Town put her best foot forward to-day to welcome the returned wanderers?

Well, didn't she?

Flags a-flying, bands a-playing, faces of loved ones a-smiling, the Glad Hand everywhere. Surely Good Old Belleville did herself proud to-day, and the Fatted Calf went to the slaughter without a murmur.

Which was quite right and proper. The ties of blood are the strongest ties in this old workaday world, after all. And if people wouldn't hand out their best for their own kith and kin who would they do it for.

So let us, for the next few days throw dull care to the winds and eat and drink and be merry with those we love, who have returned "Home."

THIS MORNING'S DOINGS.

There was a busy time at the O. B. R. committee rooms, on Bridge st. this morning, and Col. Ponton and his staff of assistants were busy as beavers. Old Boys and Girls from Everywhere, almost, dropped in to register and get their tickets vised. The only fly in the ointment was the G. T. R. strike. But for that we would have have hundreds—perhaps thousands— more visitors. But goodness knows, to look at Front street, you wouldn' think many had stayed away.

At 10.30 the Fifteenth Regimental band marched out from the Armories and played at different places on Front st. Then they went up to the Station to meet the special train from Toronto, which was bringing down the Old Belleville Boys and Girls from that city.

ADMIRED THE DECORATIONS

The visitors, one and all, were enthusiastic over the street decorations. "It was worth coming to see them alone," said one sunburned visitor. And indeed; it was. Belleville, in all her history, never put up such a good "front" before.

There were some amusing scenes. One lady was making her way through the crowds with six chickens hanging from one hand and a big market basket over the other arm. She was a fair sample of many others.

And it did one good to see the cheery happy looks on all faces. The smile that refused to come off was visible everywhere.

The Abbott Clyne Trio delighted a large crowd at the Palace last night. They are clever and can sing. It is first-class vaudeville and nothing cleaner or more entertaining has been seen at the Palace.

Mr. Abbott's solo number "My Cousin Caruso" is a gem and if you like a regular "Caruso tenor come and hear Mr. Abbott.

Mrs. Abbott has a very pleasing voice and splendid stage presence, while little "Norda" is a whole show in herself. She is the smallest little tot and the cutest you ever saw on the stage. You will not be sorry after you have heard her sing, "I Remember You." Pictures A-1. Children 5c, adults 10c, matinee Saturday, 5c.

TORONTO EXCURSION ARRIVES

It was about 12 o'clock when the Toronto special bringing about 14 hundred of the Belleville Old Boys and Girls of that city arrived. There was a large crowd on the platform to meet them, the Band played "Home, Sweet Home," the Glad Hand stuck out like a pump-handle everywhere and jollity and good nature reigned supreme.

The Chicago Old Boys, fifty strong, came in on the regular train. To look at them they may be safely sized up by the classical expression "A Pretty Warm Bunch."

The Toronto special consisted of ten coaches and a baggage car. It was said, that hundreds more would have come had there been accommodation.

"I FEEL IT MY DUTY

To Give You a Statement In Regard To 'Fruit-a-tives'"

HARDWICKE, MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world an unsolicited statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.

I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefits derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices.

WAS NO COLLUSION.

Lindsay Business No Affair of Head Office, Says Home Bank.

Toronto, July 23.—Referring to the Lindsay despatch in yesterday's newspapers, Col. James Mason, general manager of the Home Bank of Canada makes the following statement:

"The Home Bank of Canada has been considering the possibilities of opening a branch in Lindsay for some time. In September, 1908, the matter was under discussion through the solicitation that had come to us from a prominent business man in that town, and since then the matter of locating in Lindsay has been before us at different times.

"In the application which Mr. McGill sent to us, dated 22nd June, he stated that he had resigned from the Farmers' Bank on June 4. We did not open the branch until the 29th.

"Of course, we have no knowledge of what Mr. McGill may have said to his friends in Lindsay regarding the Farmers' Bank. If it had been intimated to us by the Farmers' Bank that he was injuring their credit in order to get business for the Home Bank, we would have at once cautioned him. The only instruction he received from us in the solicitation of business was in the form of a letter to be sent out to the people of Lindsay generally, announcing that the Home Bank had opened a branch. In this letter there was no reference whatsoever to the Farmers' Bank.

"The newspaper reports on this matter seem to give the idea that the Home Bank secured the staff from the Farmers' Bank and opened the branch, making a deliberate set for connection, at five o'clock yesterday not the fact—as I have said before, the matter of opening a branch in Lindsay has been under consideration for the past two years. Mr. McGill was, as far as we were aware at the time he was engaged, without employment in Lindsay, and he was engaged by the Home Bank upon recommendations which showed that he was an honest and trustworthy young man and was very well and favorably known in Lindsay and throughout the township. His work in Lindsay so far, has been what we would have expected from any competent manager opening a new branch of the Home Bank.

TOWN IS ENDANGERED

Forest Fires at Rainy River Are Beyond Control.

Roundhouse Is Threatened by Flames and Many Residents of Community Are Leaving—Winnipeg Rushes Detail of Men and Apparatus by Special Train—Bush Fires Within the City Limits of Kenora.

Beaudette, Minn., July 23.—Forest fires, which were fanned by a strong wind Thursday, were under control Thursday night, when the wind dropped, and regained headway again yesterday and are threatening the Canadian Northern Railway's round-house at Rainy River. The C.N.R., have a large gang of men on hand to protect their buildings.

The fire, which was burning in the vicinity of Spooner, a small village across the river from Rainy River, burned out several settlers, many of them losing all their belongings. The party who were fighting the fire were forced to the river on account of the heat becoming too much for them to stand. Apparently the fires die out at night and burn underground, but as soon as the wind rises in the morning regain force. The air in the Towns of Beaudette and Rainy River is dense with smoke, it being almost too thick to see a hundred feet in any direction.

Many of the people are leaving the Town of Rainy River. Yesterday afternoon it is expected the town will be saved, as it looks as though the fire had been checked at right-of-way. Thousands of cords of pulpwood have been burned and the cabins of twenty settlers have been destroyed. It is reported that two little girls in the Rainy River district wandered into the forest and were burned.

The fire to the south of Beaudette is almost burned out and was under control last night.

Help From Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 23.—A small crowd of curious spectators saw the embarkation of a steam engine whose wagon and detail of six picked men were sent by special yesterday morning to the relief of Rainy River, at the urgent request of the mayor of that town. The party was in charge of Assistant Chief Code.

Within Limits of Kenora.

Kenora, July 23.—Bush fires continue to burn in this vicinity. One outbreak has been checked on Old Fort Island within the corporation limits. A fire is burning one mile north, but it is believed the greater danger is passed. Fires were burning fiercely along the west shore of the Winnipeg River, north of Keewatin, yesterday afternoon. Houses were in danger and much valuable timber was destroyed.

Five Men Nearly Asphyxiated.

Toronto, July 23.—Five men came close to death by asphyxiation in a trench at Sherbourne and Duchess street, where they were making a gas connection, at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. They were Gordon, James and Alex. Thompson, 107 Yarmouth road, Alfred Baker, 49 Jones avenue, and Jack Crest, Garden avenue, employes of the Consumers' Gas Co.

They had stopped off the gas from a section of the main by the insertion of a big rubber bag inflated to block the pipe, and were cutting off the emptied end when the bag was punctured, allowing the gas to escape.

The men were immediately overcome and it was with difficulty that they were withdrawn from the trench. So rapidly did the gas escape that it soon filled the street, and even loiterers who hung about were made dizzy. The police ambulance was summoned, but when it arrived Drs. Simpson and Glendenning had all the men returned to consciousness.

The escape of the gas became dangerous because of the possibility of ignition, and John Laxton, superintendent of the company, undertook to shut it off. He descended into the trench with his head swathed in sacking and finally succeeded in doing so; but was in a serious condition at the end of his strenuous task.

Thought He'd Killed Mother-in-Law.

New York, July 23.—Apparently believing that a shot he had fired through a glass door at his mother-in-law had killed or seriously injured her, Richard Solle, a young westsider, went into the basement of the house on West 55th street yesterday and sent a revolver bullet into his own brain, dying instantly.

The Rainbow sails the first week in August, and the Admiralty has agreed to lend men of skilled ratings and an instructional staff of officers for the safe conduct of the ship. Admiral Kingsmill states that enquiries are now being made among firms on the Admiralty list for tenders for the construction of four Bristols and six destroyers.

Barge Rammed Gates.

Cornwall, July 23.—Every available man of the Cornwall canal staff is working night and day to repair the damaged lock 18, caused by the Geo. Hall Co.'s steam barge Phoenix, which rammed two gates out of that lock yesterday afternoon.

The rush of the water into the lower level resulted in several thousand dollars' worth of damage to the plant and stock of the Dundas Mill, into the card room of which the water rose to the height of four feet. The office was also flooded to a certain extent.

A big staff is working on the repairs, which will require from two to four days.

A Big Diamond.

New York, July 23.—Maiden Lane heard yesterday from Johannesburg of the finding of a pure white flawless diamond at the Premier Mine, said to weigh 191 karats. It is said to be two inches long and three-fourths of an inch thick, tapering from one and a quarter to three-fourths of an inch. It is estimated to be worth $150,000 uncut.

Graft In Railroad Circles.

Chicago, July 23.—A system of long-standing graft and corruption in Chicago railroad circles, by means of which stockholders of railroad companies have been defrauded out of hundreds of thousands of dollars may be brought to the surface as a result of the scandal which sprung up following the tragic death of President Rawn of the Monon road.

Long Trip For Dredge.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 23.—One of the longest trips ever made from here by a dredge started yesterday afternoon, when Edwards Brothers' dredge No. 1, towed by the tugboats Bues and Edwards, started on the long trip for the coast of Cape Breton, N.S., where she has been bought. She is to be towed as far as Quebec, where she will be taken over by her new owners, who will continue the trip, which is about 2,000 miles long.

No Advice From Americans.

Melville, Sask., July 23.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's meeting yesterday was not without incident. Prior to the public meeting in the afternoon the Prime Minister met a deputation of grain-growers. Charles Lunn represented that American settlers were opposed to the naval policy of the Government, and objected to a grant to the Imperial navy. He characterized the bridging of the Saskatchewan River as a mere bluff, in lieu of the building of the Hudson Bay Railway.

Sir Wilfrid replied to the point, saying that he did not propose to take advice on the navy from American settlers.

Wireless Overland.

New York, July 23.—Although the plan of sending wireless messages on land for a distance of more than 100 miles has been declared impracticable in a commercial way, a scheme is now on foot to form a company for this purpose. IS CRIPPEN ON LINER?

Montreal Police Are Instructed to Meet Sardinian.

Wireless Conveys Information That Steward on Board Steamship Has Discovered Crippen and Miss Leneve In Disguise of a Minister and His "Boy"—Has False Eyebrows and Is In Full Clericals.

London, July 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—While the chase was proceeding hotfoot in the neighborhood of the Pyrenes, particulars obtained by wireless from the Allan liner Sardinian lead the Scotland Yard officials firmly to believe that Dr. Crippen, wanted in connection with the Callous-Camdentown murder, the details whereof horrified the world, and his companion, Miss Leneve, were on board, en route to Montreal. Inspector Dow, who had charge of the case since suspicion was aroused against the United States quack, sailed on the Baltic the first boat available, on Saturday night. The Sardinian left Havre on Monday last. It is stated that the couple joined her two hours before she sailed without attracting, under the names of Rev. Robinson and son, till the alleged discovery, subsequently told by wireless to the French police.

It seems that the steward who attended the couple in their second-class cabin, noticed that the clergyman wore false eyebrows. When his attention was attracted to the pair he observed other peculiarities, especially about the boy. Watching, by permission, the latter perform his toilet, he concluded that certainly the alleged boy was a girl, and, moreover, that her height and features corresponded with those of the missing typist. Minute descriptions of the reverend gentleman and his son were sent by wireless to the French police, and subsequently Scotland Yard was also informed via Browhead.

The latter, as stated, attached the fullest importance to the news and despatched Inspector Dow immediately, while the Canadian police were cabled full instructions.

The Sardinian, having only a short range wireless installation, further information will be unobtainable until she gets within range of Canada. The couple will probably know first of the suspicions concerning them when the Canadian police board the liner at Montreal, the greatest care having been urged on the captain of the Sardinian to instruct his crew not to alarm them.

According to the description given the French police, the suspected man was wearing a full clerical suit. He has heavy brown eyebrows, now known to be false, a short sprouting brown beard, running up the sides of his cheeks, evidently a recent growth, and a clean-shaven upper lip. He also walks with a slouching gait, with head a little thrown back. The "boy" is of rather stout build and very pale, with a particularly broad nose and wearing a smartly cut suit of dark tweed.

Conflicting reports are current anent the alleged discovery of Crippen and his typist en route to Canada, but it seems agreed that they sailed on the Montrose. The story of the discovery already cabled, was based on a circumstantial despatch from Havre.

It is not altogether correct that the couple that sailed as Rev. Robinson and son, were subsequently suspected. Scotland Yard was informed by wireless, and Inspector Dow was ordered to catch the fastest boat to Canada.

Scotland Yard have issued a guarded announcement, stating that they have been ordered not to handicap Dow. No details of his journey will be divulged.

Castle For Composer.

New York, July 25.—High on a crag of the Orange Mountains, not far from the Harriman estates at Arden, J. Pierpont Morgan is building a greystone castle in miniature, which, both for the spirit in which it was conceived and the manner in which the gift is being carried out, is perhaps without counterpart.

Mr. Morgan for many years has been a close personal friend of Homer A. Norris, the composer, who is also organist of St. George's Episcopal Church in Stuyvesant Square, New York, of which Mr. Morgan is senior warden. He believes that, free from the daily grind of city life, Mr. Norris can compose better music than in his town studio, and, in proof of his belief, he is building for the composer a $20,000 retreat in the forest.

Drowned In Lindsay.

Lindsay, July 25.—A drowning fatality occurred here yesterday morning about ten o'clock, in which Philip Walberg, a Jew, was the unfortunate victim. It appears that he and Mr. Applebaum, another Jew, with whom he was staying, went out to Tulley's Landing, a point situated about a mile north of the town, for a bath. There were a number of young men on the shore, but only one, Bert Johnston, made any attempt to save the drowning man, although he made several outcries for aid. The body was soon recovered.

C.N.R. Makes Progress.

Cobourg, July 26.—The grading on the Canadian Northern is now about completed between Trenton and the outskirts of the town, and the steel is laid between Trenton and Colborne, 14 miles east of here.

Graceful Letter From A Former Resident.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

My Dear Sir,—I enclose a copy of a letter received from a former publisher of the Intelligencer," written to a lady friend in the city. I am sure its publication will bring up many memories of the past, not unmixed with sorrow for those who have gone from us never to eb seen again in beautiful Belleville, their beloved home.—I am, yours,

John J. B. Flint,

(Enclosure.)

My Dear Friend,—And so the "old boys" are going to have another reunion, the second since I came west. I cannot attend in person but will in spirit, and will hear the band playing "The boys come marching home again, hurrah, hurrah!" Some of them are scarred and battered, and their hair has turned grey, but their hearts are as young as ever, for are they not "home again" under the grand old Union Jack, for its "ma ain countrie." How it stirs up the voices which cry out in the night, and I feel as if was there in the glory of youth, as I meet a broad-shouldered upright man, who reaches out his hand and, with a grip as of yore, says, "how are you, old cock?" Dear old Danie Robertson. If it's at the corner of the old Defoe House, could mortal man withstand the temptation of his suggestion of a "hill riser" by way of a bracer. And then Bill Hamilton comes in view—grand old Bill, and whose latch key was always on the outside for his friends. We meet Mat Thompson, no kinder heart ever beat; as Jim Stirling used to say, "Mat's smile was a benediction." And I can hear him tell of a church wedding when the clergyman asked "who gives away the bride?" an urchin in the gallery cried out, "I could give her away, but I won't." Or I fancy I am sitting at Phippens office and see the whole of the population file past to market—"rich man, poor man, beggar man, hief," and behind me I hear Bob Thomson chaffing Donald Graham about some old pranky 'long ago," and I hear Charlie Davie taking Donald's part; then there's a flash, and a clay pipe flies to the ceiling because John or Sam Phippen had loaded in a few grains of powder to create a slight sensation. But as Nat Falkener used to say, "All things pass away," and the whole gang who used to foregather there have "passed away." Belleville and the Bay of Quinte are charming words to any one who has lived in your midst, and it was there I was born, it was there I was married, and it was we had children born unto us. Yes, and there the destroying angel entered our home and called two little children, and they plumed their snowy wings and soared away to the bosom of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." And now as I near three score and ten I feel that these tired feet will before long trend thitherward. Could any other city afford such St. Andrew's nights as Belleville. The bagpipes, the sword dance, and Maggie Barr singing "Baby Mine." I remember a dinner at Danny Coyle's, with Dr. Wright in the chair and Donald McLean in the vice-chair. Then the haggis and the "ferens." It was a gran' nicht." I met Allan ePtrie when the sun began to appear in the early morn, and he said, "if my wife says a word I'll take the next train to Kingston." But I am prating like an old man of the past, when we are, or should be, living for the present. So, trusting you will haev a glorious time at the reunion, I remain your old-time friend,

James Jamieson.

Terrible Accident on Transcontinental Ry.

Mr. John Donovan, of thic city, received word that on Friday afternoo last a most lamentable accident occurred on the line of construction of the Transcontinental Railway, at a point about 230 miles north of Quebec City.

Mr. Donovan and Mr. Doheny are contractors for the construction of the new railway in that section.

As the result of the accident 9 men were killed and several injured, some of the latter to such an extent that their lives are despaired of.

All the victims were foreigners, which will relieve the minds of many in this city and vicinity, who have relatives at work in the section of construction above named.

It appears that an explosion occurred of a large quantity of dynamite and giant powder.

Mr. Donovan, who was home here at the time, left this morning for the scene of the disaster.

Found Drowned.

SHOCKING DEATH WHICH CAME TO JAMES ALEXANDER HORAN, A CALL-BOY AT THE LOCAL STATION.

At about 8 o'clock on Monday morning the body of a man was found floating in the river in rear of No. 2 fire hall. Owing to decomposition having advanced to a considerable stage, identification was not soon established, but upon being brought to shore shortly after the discovery it was learned that the body was that of James Alexander Horan. The deceased who was 21 years of age, had been for the past two years engaged as a call-boy at the Grand Trunk Railway station here and was very popular with local G. T. R. employees. On Friday last Horan received his monthly pay cheque, which was found in a pocket of his clothing. Friday evening the deceased was about the streets, which was the last seen of him alive. It is surmised that Horan fell into the water near the upper bridge. The body was conveyed to Tickell's & Sons undertaking establishment and prepared for burial, an inquest being considered unnecessary.

The unfortunate young man was the only child of the late Mr. Michael Horan, of this city. His mother who survives, is ill at the hospital. The remains were interred in the afternoon, services being held at St. Michael's church, being conducted by the Rev. Father Spratt. Interment took place at St. James' cemetery.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL

PARK NINE BEAT ONTARIOS.

A very exciting City League Base ball match was played on the league diamond on Saturday afternoon, before a large crowd, the opposing teams being the Park Nine and Ontarios. The Park Nine won by an 8-6 score. Phelps, for the winners, pitched a good steady game, but the wildness of Moore, first pitcher for the Ontarios, lost the game for them. He had an off-day. McGie, who replaced him in the fifth, held the Park Nine scoreless for four innings. Following were the teams:

PARK NINE WON

Yesterday morning headed by Blea's band, of Toronto, the members of the City Baseball league, in uniform, marched to the Coleman Flat's diamond, where an interesting game took place between teams representing the G. T. R. and Park Nine. The game was not scheduled, but was an exhibition one, the proceeds of which were for the three players, Young, Carter and Pepper, who unfortunately received injuries whilst playing. There was a large crowd of spectators who apparently took much interest in the game. Seven innings were played, and the score was 8 to 4 in favor of the Park Nine. Messrs. W. Cochrane and R. Gillespie umpired the game. Gerow and Brown were the battery for the winners, and Hopkins and Marks for the G. T. R.

Old Boys' Reunion.

you can't lose the Boys of the Old Brigade.

The 15th turnout was not large, but the men looked trim and neat.

The 15th Band had a fine turnout and played splendid marching music.

The little cadets caught the ladies' eyes. "O, you little soldier boy."

There were only 12 in Blea's Toronto Band, but they made fine music. One singularly appropriate tune they played was: "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town To-night."

The Salvation Army Band made a hit with "The Old Folks at Home."

The "Canada" float was all right. The design was good and the girls pretty.

The Chicago Old Boys were surely a lot of warm sports. They had a handsome silk banner, and every one carried a pretty streamer with the word "Chicago" on it. As an enthusiastic bunch of old Belleville lads they will take a lot of beating.

The Irish float was a peach, and it had a lot of little peaches in it, all singing, "There's Nothing too Good for the Irish."

The Rochester ladies and gentlemen made a fine show in their handsome autos.

The Hospital float was unique and striking. Man a man, whether he were sick or not, wouldn't have objected to reposing in one of those cots, with the handsome nurses to watch over him.

The Sons of Scotland float was immense. Girls and boys of the clan McIntosh were there, as well as grown-up folks in picturesque Highland costume, while Piper McIntosh was playing "The Laird o' Cockpen," or some other voluntary.

Oxford Lodge, Sons of England, had a fine float. Soldiers and sailors were grouped together in a pretty tableau, while little Baden-Powell Scouts completed the picture.

The I.O.O.F. band, 23 strong, played in splendid style, and the Canton made a grand appearance.

The Marsh and Hawthorne floats certainly made a big hit with the crowd. Nothing better of the kind was ever seen in Belleville.

The Holton Timber Company's float deserved a medal, too. It was well designed.

Stroud's float looked like a scene from "The eGisha." A Japanese tea room, with cute little Jap girls ready to serve. It was great. A Teddy Bear drove the horse.

Thompson and Co.'s float and furniture wagon full of merry little girls was a favorite, and deserved to be. There's nothing quite so nice as a little girl—unless it is, a big one.

The Fire Department looked business-like, and evoked many favorable comments from visitors.

There were many other fine floats, too, but space forbids mention of them all. Taking it all together, the Old Boys' Reunion Procession of 1910 will be remembered as "the best ever" for many a year.

A SAMPLE INCIDENT.

A stalwart, grey-haired man was walking the street, in company with an old Bellevillian.

"Yes," said the one first-mentioned, "I've just been over to see the old home, and I wouldn't have missed it for anything. I came all the way from Minnesota for this reunion, and it was worth the trip here and back. Haven't been here for 24 years, but I love the old place still. Yes, indeed you've got a mighty fine little city here now. I hope to see more of it before the undertaker takes me for my last ride."

The Official Reception.

One of the most pleasant incidents in connection with the Reunion was the official reception to the Old Boys and Girls, held in the Armories last evening. There was a large attendance, and things passed off very pleasantly

Mr. D. V. Sinclair, president of the Reunion, was chairman, and after the 15th Band had played patriotic airs Mr. Sinclair, in a neat little speech, welcomed the visitors. He knew they had enjoyed themselves. The Reunion had been a pleasure to all, and was the forerunner of a better one in the future.

THE MAYOR'S WELCOME.

Mayor Marsh tendered a welcome on behalf of the city and council. The Mayor gave instances showing Belleville's growth. In population Belleville had grown 20 per cent. in four years, and many new industries had been established. Belleville was being improved in many ways, and her citizens were proud of the good old city. He welcomed the visitors and hoped they'd come back often.

Mr. S. Burrows sang "When There's Love at Home."

A POPULAR OLD BOY.

In introducing Sir Mackenzie Bowell the chairman referred to him as the one man Belleville folks delighted to honor. Sir Mackenzie was given a great reception, and three thunderous cheers. He said he wished his voice was as strong as it was 40 years ago, then he could fill the hall. He welcomed the visitors and especially the Older Old Boys, many of whom had been young men with him years ago. If the Reunion had been as pleasant to the visitors as it had been to Bellevillians, then the latter were well rewarded for their efforts. Belleville boys everywhere had done credit to themselves and their birthplace. He hoped the visitors would all come back in five years and that he would be here to welcome them. (Cheers.) He promised them it would not be his fault if he was not. (Laughter and Cheers.)

A CHICAGO OLD BOY.

Mr. Thomas Lynch, of Chicago, was the next speaker, and the Chicago Old Boys gave him a red-hot reception. He responded by making a graceful and graphic speech, full of warm-hearted references to old days in Belleville and the gratitude felt by the Chicago Old Boys and Girls for their warm welcome. The air was heavily charged with welcome, and there was only one touch of sorrow—some of the old faces were missing; to their memories we cast a loving thought. The Belleville club of Chicago hoped to do big things. Once more he returned thanks for the grand welcome.

MR. E. GUSS PORTER, M. P.

As a citizen of Belleville and M. P. for West Hastings Mr. Porter extended a welcome to the visiting Old Boys and Girls. He had lived 37 years in Belleville and there had been many changes — some pleasant, some painful, but it was good to think that Belleville was going ahead. In the last five years over three millions of foreign capital had been invested in and around Belleville. He hoped the visitors would all be back in five years.

Mrs. Allen sang, in a delightful way, "In Dear Old Belleville, City by the Bay," and was rapturously applauded.

A VOICE FROM SALT LAKE.

Mr. Kehoe, an old Belleville boy, now of Salt Lake City, said he had travelled 3000 miles to come back to the Reunion, and he wished all the Old Boys and Girls good luck. (Cheers.)

A TORONTO OLD BOY.

Mr. William Wallbridge, of Toronto, made a neat little speech of reminiscence and optimism. He was pleased to see that he had been missed while away, for he had seen the streamer on the street, "O, Willie, we have missed you." (Laughter) Only for the strike they would have brought 1500 from Toronto. The present decorations of Belleville's streets beat anything he had ever seen anywhere. (Cheers.) There was no hospitality like Belleville hospitality. He hoped they would all meet again in five years.

OVER THREE HUNDRED FROM ROCHESTER.

Mr. Clement, a Rochester Old Boy, returned thanks for the warm welcome. He had worked hard, and had succeeded in getting 325 to come from Rochester. Next time he meant to double that. (Cheers.)

Miss Bawden sang, in beautiful voice, "My Rosary."

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

Mr. George Hanwell, of Vancouver, said he had never made a speech in Belleville before. He thanked them for the warm reception given him, which was, he was sure, meant for all the Belleville boys and girls in Vancouver. It had touched his heart. Though many miles away, the old boys and girls never forgot Belleville.

Miss Anna Ponton sang in a most charming way "Thoughts of Home, Sweet Home."

MR. W. J. HUDSON.

Mr. Hudson, chairman of the Reception Committee, extended a warm welcome to the visitors. Love at home and love of home had brought them He hoped all would live till the next Reunion.

MR. HARRY GRIER.

Mr. Harry Grier, son of a former Belleville divine, said he saw many improvements in Belleville. There was no deadness about the old city now. It was alive and up-to-date, and he urged all Belleville Old Boys everywhere to "Root for Belleville."

ANOTHER CHICAGO OLD BOY.

Mr. Miles Wilkinson, another Chicago old boy, was given a grand reception. He thanked everybody for the hearty greetings given, and made a hit by saying they had better hurry up and get through and go and see the fireworks.

THE POPULAR SECRETARY.

In introducing Col. Ponton, Mr. Sinclair, said he was the one man who had made the Reunion possible. He had worked like a Trojan early and late. The virile and popular Colonel received a hurricane reception, and responded by making one of his characteristic speeches, full of graceful references and poetic polish, and fairly brimming with welcome to the Old Boys and Girls who had come from far and near. The kindly voices and old familiar faces he said, would be an inspiration for the future. He hoped to see them all again in five years.

The National Anthem closed the proceedings.

AQUATIC EVENTS

The officials were as follows:—

W. Rogers, starter and judge.

W. Carnew and A. C. McFee, judges.

R. S. Bell and J. D. Clarke, time keepers.

JENNINGS WAS FINE.

During the progress of the aquatic sports yesterday afternoon, Mr. Pat Jennings, of this city, gave an exhibition of swimming which was thoroughly enjoyed by those who witnessed it. Pat is certainly at home in the water, executing many novel features in a most surprising way. The exhibition, whilst novel, was also of an instructive nature, demonstrating what can be done by one who is an expert swimmer.

FIREWORKS WERE SPLENDID

The fireworks on the park last night put on by Prof. Hand, of Hamilton, were easily the best ever seen in the city. A crowd of between seven and eight thousand people watched them some from near, some from far, and all thoroughly apepreciated the glorious spectacle. The fire balloons, rockets, bombs, set pieces, etc., were miles in advance of anything of the kind ever seen in this neck of the woods before. The display was well worth the $500 said to be paid for it.

RUBES WERE IMMENSE.

Sandy Burrows and George Jones, dressed as "Rubes," made a lot of fun for people yesterday. Seated in a rig which came out of the ark, the lads "cut up" in a style which created tons of fun. If there are any medals left over, a few should be hung on "Sandy" and "Jonesie."

ORGAN RECITALS.

On Saturday evening a pleasing organ recital was given in St. Thomas' church, given by Prof. Spooner, assisted by Mrs. Carre and Mr. Harry McKay, vocalists. Mr. Spooner played with the artistic taste for which he is noted. Mrs. Carre sang "Thy Will be Done" and "Help Me, O Lord," and Mr. McKay gave "O Lord, Correct Me" and "The Gentle Shepherd" Both sang with beautiful effect. The attendance was large.

At St. Andrew's church, on Sunday evening, Mr. Leo Riggs, of New York gave a sacred organ recital at the close of the evening service. His playing was greatly admired. Mrs. Wilmot, soloist at St. Andrew's sang a beautiful solo.

AT ST. AGNES' SCHOOL

The ladies' reception to the visitors was held yesterday at St. Agnes' school grounds and was a most enjoyable function.

The grounds were appropriately and tastefully decorated for the occasion. A number of prominent ladies of the city were present to extend a hearty welcome to the hundreds of guests who invaded the grounds. Many new friends were made and the many old friends were most cordially received. Blea's band, of Toronto, was present, and rendered a programme which was thoroughly enjoyed, and Mrs. Allen sang delightfully. Refreshments were served by a bevy of young ladies who were kept busy. The pleasing affair was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

"A HOT TIME IN THE OLD TOWN"

The Calithumpian procession and burlesque display by Blea's band, of Toronto, was the finest thing ever seen in good old Belleville. There were some good costumes, but the members of the band were the chief offenders. Dressed as Dutchmen, Coons, burlesque Kings, etc., they cut up till people shrieked with laughter. All the popular airs were played, and the band made a tremendous hit.

At night, after sober-minded people had gone to bed, hundreds of "Indians" paraded the streets, shouting their war cries and enjoying themselves in a noisy but harmless way. With megaphones they made no secret of their opinion that Belleville was all right. Cinders on the street this morning showed, where bonfires had been built and joy had been unconfined. There was surely a hot time in the old town last night.

THE BAND CONCERTS

The three local bands have had a busy time of it in the last few days, playing in different places. The boys have added immensely to their enjoyment of the festive occasion, and have received warm praises from visitors as well as local holiday-makers. "You folks should be proud to think that you have three bands such as that in a little city like this," said a visitor, who is something of a musician himself.

AT ST. MICHAEL'S TO-NIGHT

An intellectual and oratorical treat will be enjoyed to-night at St. Michael's Academy. Mr. Thos. J. Lynch, founder of the Belleville Club of Chicago, will deliver an illustrated lecture in the large assembly room, and those who heard his eloquent speech at the Armouries last night, know that all who go may anticipate a delightful hour. Mr. Lynch is a born orator and has the good Bay of Quinte heart. He will give his famous lecture on Yellow Stone Park, in St. Michael's Academy this evening. Mr. Lynch is one of the Old Boys who is making the name of Belleville famous. A treat is in store for those who attend. Joe Doyle, another of the Bay of Quinte boys to win fame for the old timers, will also take part.

OLD BOYS' RE-UNION NOTES

The weather was certainly made to order.

Belleville has certainly set a new record for Old Boys' Reunions everywhere.

Everybody was enthusiastic over the procession.

Congratulations to all the officials and everybody connected with the Reunion. It was the best ever.

While honoring and recognizing the good work of the Administration of 1910, let us not forget the great service tendered Belleville by Wm. Johnson and Arthur McGinnis in the O. B. R. 1905.

A gracefully worded letter, full of pathetic feeling, was written by Will, Arthur and Jim Johnson, all home together, expressing regret that the illness of their mother debarred them from participating in all the pleasant functions of the reunion to which they had all looked forward.

Representing what are known as the old veterans, there were to be seen in one carriage, Col. Sir Mackenzie Bowell; Sergt.-Major Wm. Blaind; Sergt. William Johnson, and Corporal Wilson, formerly of Belleville, now of Stratford. Sergt.-Major Blaind saw service in the rebellion of 1836-7. The other three during the Fenian Raid. Their joint ages run up to the handsome figure of 325 years. All four are hale and hearty.

For sixty years we have brewed by the old English methods adopted by BASS & CO. and GUINNESS & CO. WE DO NOT CARBONIZE, and by so doing destroy Nature's best and finest health-giving properties of barley, malt and Bohemian hops.

No fads, no new methods, as used by some brewers who can't compete with genuine methods.

Friendly to Organized Labor.

St. Louis, July 25.—Formal announcement was made Saturday night by J. T. Templeton, secretary of the Bucks Stove & Range Co., of the end of the fight with organized labor. The employes of the plant are to be organized. The secretary, however, did not state if the present workmen would be required to join the union.

The announcement in part says: "The present management is and always have been friendly to organized labor. We believe labor has a right to organize for its protection and advancement."

Harriman's Estate $71,053,737.

New York, July 25.—The records of the state comptroller's office show that the transfer tax paid on E. H. Harriman's estate was $675,000. This means that the estate was valued at $71,053,737. Many estimates had placed it at from $100,000,000 to $140,000,000. Few, even of friends of the family, thought it would fall below $80,000,000.

SIR WILFRID IS WARY

Is Not Willing to Go Into System of Public Elevators.

Tells Farmers of Melville, Sask., That He Is Providing Transportation Competition In the Form of the H. B. Railway, But Refused to Be Stampeded Into State Ownership of Elevator Facilities.

Lanigan, Sask., July 25.—The apparent calm with which Sir Wilfrid Laurier's assurances with respect to the grain growers' demands have been received during the past week does not seem to have satisfied a large constituency of farmers, and something more than his academic utterances were sought at Melville on Friday, and again Saturday at Lanigan, when straight questions were asked as to the Government's intention as to the Hudson Bay Railway and terminal elevators and tariff.

The Prime Minister's train only stopped here two hours, but during that time much business was done. A crowd had gathered in the Town Hall, and after the introductory remarks were over, David Ross, president of the Strasburg Grain-Growers' Association, made a pointed reference to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway and its subsequent opposition by the Government. He claimed that this railway ranked first in the estimation of the farmers and business men of western Canada, not for selfish purposes, but for the interest of the country as a whole.

"We want competition on transportation," he said, "and we have not got it. The situation has become intolerable. The reason why we are so intense with regard to the Hudson Bay Railway is that we want a competitive trade route to regulate the excessive freight rates throughout the West.

"If a private corporation should get control of the last trade route we have in the West, where are we to get our competition?" he asked. "There is no other way that we can get competition, unless the Hudson Bay Railway is owned, controlled and operated by the Dominion Government. They did not ask for Government ownership of railways, but believed it was essential, as a check on excessive freight rates. He declared that no analogy could be drawn from the Intercolonial, as that was part of the Confederation compact."

The same line of argument was taken by Richard Fletcher, president of Lake Centre Association, in regard to terminal elevators. He, too, said that relief from the abominable oppression of grain manipulators could only be secured by Government ownership and operation of the elevators at terminal points. The abuse which exists to-day affected the farmers like pinching a man on the jugular vein. The present law was not sufficient.

Edward Anderson of the Lanigan Association, voiced the sentiments of the free traders. He said he had some difficulty in speaking on the tariff, because he was a free trader.

"So am I," quickly countered the Premier.

Mr. Anderson declared that the manufacturer was always a free trader for what he wanted to buy. The raw material of the farmer was his farm implements, without which he could not raise a bushel of grain. The agricultural interests should have the first consideration of the Government. It was the interest that was producing the wealth of the country. He realized what the Government had done, but would like to see it do a little more. He was of the Manchester school of free traders and wanted to see the Liberals carry out the program of 1893.

"We would not be Liberals, if there was not room for improvement," said Sir Wilfrid. England herself had not reached perfection in tariff matters, he went on, but in matters of politics and trade, England was a shining example to the world. Canada could not arrive in one year at the same place that it had taken England eight centuries to reach. If he had his way, and did not have the farmers as well as the manufacturing and professional interests to look after, he would go further. He believed with Mr. Anderson that the tariff should be gradually reduced, and would have a commission, composed probably of Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Wm. Paterson and another, study the matter, but he did not say when.

Sir Wilfrid would not be stampeded into declaring outright for state ownership and operation of terminal elevators. He could not enunciate a policy on such short notice. He reiterated the principle that the buyer of the wheat should not elevate it. The reason why the C.P.R. had not been guilty of the practice was because it was interested only as a carrier, and not a purchaser. Government ownership might be the remedy, but he thought if the State of Minnesota could legislate so that the manipulators were driven out of Duluth to Port Arthur and Fort William, Canada could accomplish the same results by similar legislation.

Saskatoon, Sask., July 25.—Sir Wilfrid passed a quiet Sunday, attending high mass in the morning. In the afternoon he received an address from the Catholic population in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the new St. Paul's Church, at which Bishop Pascal officiated.

Thunder showers are general throughout the Saskatchewan district.

Train Severed Both Legs.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 25.—John Verrick rode a bicycle across the New York Central tracks Saturday night and was struck by a freight train. Both legs were severed. He was rushed to a hospital, but his recovery is doubtful.

RELIEF SUPPLIES SHORT.

Campbellton Authorities Are In Very Great Difficulties.

Campbellton, July 25.—With more than 1,500 people to feed every day, the provisions at the disposal of the Campbellton relief committee are rapidly running short, and, unless the supply comes in in greater quantities, the daily allowances will have to be curtailed. In addition to the people fed by the committee, there are many trying to order their own provisions, or else boarding on vessels at the wharf.

Among the cash donations received Saturday was $5,000 from the Quebec Government, with a letter from Sir Lomer Gouin. Apart from the $20,000 donation from the New Brunswick Government, this was the first contribution from any Provincial Legislature. The cash contributions totalled over $27,000 on Saturday. In addition, several orders were received to draw on banks, which, with the recent Quebec contribution, brings the total up to $38,133. Just now it is difficult to estimate how much relief money will be needed.

In every tent, however, there is real suffering. The officials who made a tour on Saturday morning after the heavy rain witnessed piteous sights. Some of the women and children had been sleeping on boughs cut from the trees; others on hay, and many on the hard ground.

Downpour Saves Rainy River.

Rainy River, July 25.—Providence intervened in behalf of the fire-swept district of Rainy River and northern Minnesota yesterday morning. Rain is pouring down, and the thunder is booming its welcome flashes over the heads of the two places. A steady downpour started at 9.30 a.m., and a few hours of it completely put the town of Rainy River out of the danger zone.

During the early hours of yesterday morning things looked ominous, and at four o'clock Chief Code inspected the defences of the residential district, and with Mayor Hugh Carson took horse and rode for fifteen minutes through the black stumps along the river front, in cedar swamps and cordwood camps, and returned to the King Edward Hotel, the headquarters of the brigade, with the intention of putting all men on duty, but the rain descended and a great feeling of relief and thankfulness prevails in the community.

At one o'clock yesterday the mayor and council met the fire chief to decide whether under the circumstances the Winnipeg contingent will be kept over Sunday. This morning the Merryweather engine, hose wagon and equipment will be hitched on to the morning's regular passenger for Winnipeg.

Fall Wheat Thrives.

Winnipeg, July 25.—Yesterday's advices show that rains were general over the entire prairie country, and the benefit to grains in filling and quality cannot be accurately measured. Of course, however, this rain, while benefiting grains and fodder, is altogether too late to materially affect the quantity of the crop. Other than that the plump grain will weigh and bulk more than shrivelled or undeveloped grain, indeed, fall wheat cutting has started in Prince Albert, where the crop is good, and it will very shortly start in southern Alberta, the only place in the west where winter wheat is extensively grown. The rain will greatly benefit the farmers, who, despairing of obtaining a crop, have not plowed down portions of their grain, which it was hopeless to expect to head, in hope to eke out a scanty fodder crop.

Thought He Was Drowned.

Toronto, July 25.—Edward G. Verrall, 23 Allan avenue, a decorator, threw a scare into the police without disturbing his own comfort yesterday morning.

He had gone to sleep on the west bank of the Don, just south of the Winchester street bridge Saturday night, after removing his coat and hat. After sleeping for a time he arose and sauntered home, leaving the coat and hat behind him.

They were later found and it was thought that he had ended his life in the river. When enquiries were made at his home by Policeman Greenwood, the supposed suicide was found to have peacefully continued his slumbers in his bed, and to be on his way to take a swim.

Caused Loss of $3,000,000.

Victoria, B.C., July 25.—Advices to Premier McBride declares that forest fires are extinguished throughout the province. The official estimates place the loss at $3,000,000.

But my father, sir, and my grandfather!" said Willie. "It is in my blood by right of inheritance."

"Nonsense!" frowned the doctor. "You may as well tell one you have a broken leg in your veins by inheritance."

DARING ROBBERS.

Quartette Hold Up Immigrant Coach Near New York.

New York, July 25.—Within sight of the lights of Manhattan, four men held up a coach load of immigrants Saturday night at the point of the pistol, and robbed them of perhaps $500 in cash, while their train was standing in the West Shore terminal at Weehawken, N.J. A cry of "Police" from the lookout gave the gang warning, who were able to mingle with the crowd and lose their identities. The lookout was felled by the night stick of a patrolman and is now locked up.

There were perhaps a hundred immigrants in the car. The order for "all aboard" had been given and many had their hands outside the windows waving good-bye to friends, when two men stepped on the rear end of the last car of the train and two on the front platform.

All four whipped out revolvers and shouted "Hands up," "Shell out." Most of the immigrants did not understand the language, but the revolvers were wholly intelligible. The four men walked down the middle aisle of the car from either end, taking toll in jewelry and cash. They might have got more if a trainman had not stepped to the rear platform and taken in the situation at a glance. He ran to the station yelling to the police.

But the robbers had been warned by their lookout and bolted for the waiting-room, where a thousand persons from the ferry were waiting for other trains. A man in a hurry is not conspicuous in a railroad station, and the four were soon able to lose themselves.

Work of British Parliament.

London, July 25.—The secrets of the conference regarding the veto power of the Lords are locked up in the Prime Minister's private room. He may open the door on Monday, when an explanation is promised, but more probably Parliament will adjourn early in August, with the understanding that the conference was a roving holiday commission to effect a compromise during the intervals between rounds of golf, grouse drives and yachting cruises.

Augustine Birrell is the most hopeful member of the council of eight, and he may be actively employed as negotiator until November. An agreement on the financial articles is in sight, if intimate associates of the leaders can be trusted, but the remaining problems of constitutional revision are considered hopeless by practical politicians in the existing condition of partisanship.

Opposition to the declaration bill is increasing on both sides of the Commons, but its passage on second reading next Wednesday is virtually assured by an agreement between Premier Asquith and Mr. Balfour, who are equally anxious to dispose of the vexatious religious question. The ministers are determined to send the bill to the Lords by the end of the week, and while there are signs of bigotry and irreconciliable hostility among the extremists, they will probably force the enactment of the measure before the recess.

Investigating Graft Charges.

Woodstock, July 26.—The special committee of the County Council, appointed to investigate the graft charges, have had detectives working in the county, and it is said that some incriminating evidence has been hung up. The council will be called together in a few days to receive report of committee, when developments are looked for.

Earthquake In Wyoming.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 26.—A series of severe earthquake shocks at Rock Springs, Wyo., beginning Sunday night and continuing yesterday. They were so severe that houses were rocked, and the walls of a coal mine moved so badly that work at the mine had to be abandoned. The first shock was felt at 6.30 p.m. Sunday, and the last at noon yesterday.

A Race Feud In Steel Mill.

Pittsburg, July 25.—Lorrie Long aged 14 years, a "puller" employed in the Park Steel Mill here, was horribly burned Saturday while asleep on a bench by a four-inch white hot billet of steel, which, the boy says, was placed inside his shirt against his back by a crowd of negro boys also employed at the plant, and with whom there had been a feud of long standing.

Six colored boys, from 16 to 18 years of age, have been placed under arrest charged with the offence. It is said the feud had been made more bitter by the outcome of the Reno prizefight.

Slaughter of Seals.

Washington, July 25.—Replying to the charges made against Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, by the Camp Fire Club of America, that the seals on the Pribylof Islands are to be slaughtered by the United States Government in the name of "protection," Benjamin S. Cable, secretary, in Mr. Nagel's absence in Alaska, has issued a statement, in which he declares that the course of the department has the support of the highest authorities on seal life in the United States, whose knowledge is derived from personal study of the seal islands.

Whitney Cannot Attend.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 25.—Arthur C. Jackson, president of the National Good Roads Congress, who was expected to arrive Saturday, has been detained in Chicago and will not reach here until Monday.

Word was received from Sir James Whitney that he would be unable to attend the congress, but an attempt will be made by Mayor Dores of Niagara Fals, Ont., and E. R. Dewart members of the Canadian invitation committee, to have the Premier name an Ontario official to represent him. Col. Roosevelt is also unable to come.

Kingston, N.Y., July 25.—Louis V. CONSPIRES WITH G.T.R.

Men Blame Government For Suspending Alien Act.

The Lifting of the Bars to Contract Railway Workers on Pretext That It Was for Construction Work In the West Is Said to Have Been Inspired by the Grand Trunk—Mr. Brownlee Charges Wreck to Men.

Niagara Falls, July 25.—Canadian immigration officers received notification Saturday that the rule requiring all immigrants to have $25 would be suspended, providing applicants for admission to Canada had contract to work for a railroad. Indignation is felt over the order here. The men say that it is inspired by the Grand Trunk.

"Toronto, July 25.—"I can hardly believe that the Government would compel us to think it is unfair in this connection," said Vice-President S. M. Berry of the O.R.C., when seen on the C.P.R. train for Montreal last night, "therefore I am inclined to believe it must be an erroneous report.

"I have nothing more than what I saw in the paper last evening to go by. Of course, it is the Government, but nevertheless we will be compelled to believe that it is unfriendly toward railroad men, if it is as the despatch says.

"We regard it as unfortunate that industrial wars are necessary, while they do create a certain amount of trouble for the innocent; but it would be far more serious if the hundreds of thousands of laboring men were given to understand that they have no rights whatever.

"A strike is the only weapon they have got to insist on getting what they are justly entitled to, and this is the first time that the organizations concerned in the present difficulty have been forced to enter into industrial warfare in years."

When told that General Superintendent Brownlee of the Grand Trunk had blamed the strikers for three attempts to wreck trains since Saturday night, Mr. Berry replied:

"We find out that in matters of this kind the company themselves have been known to do this sort of work and blame it on to the strikers for the purpose of turning public sentiment against the strikers. I'll venture to say that he can't prove that this is the work of the strikers."

Mr. Berry went to Montreal to have a conference with Mr. Murdock. He had received no word from Chairman Mabee of the Railway Board in reply to his letter of three days ago. He said his trip to the metropolis had nothing to do with negotiations to arbitrate, and had no intimation that the strike was nearing an end.

Toronto, July 25.—Two attempts on Saturday night to wreck passenger trains and one to cripple a freight train between stations was officially declared by W. G. Brownlee, general master of transportation for the Grand Trunk, last evening. Luckily, in no case was the result serious.

The passenger trains were derailed by the throwing of switches, and the freight was forced to back a few miles into a station to allow a passenger to pass on ahead of it.

"In connection with the derailment of the passenger trains," said Mr. Brownlee, "we have every reason to believe they were strikers, as they must have had switch keys.

"These derailments indicate that the strikers, realizing the hopelessness of their efforts to stop the running of trains, are resorting to this method of blocking lines, having no regard for the lives of the passengers on the trains."

It was at four o'clock yesterday morning, at South Dunham, Que., that the derailment occurred of a train running from Portland, Me., to Montreal.

"Some one threw the switch and derailed three coaches, causing a delay of three hours," said Mr. Brownlee. "We believe it was done by some strikers from Richmond, as the switch was set and locked a short time prior to the accident.

The switch was in a rock cutting, and the man who opened the switch stood in the shadow of the rock until after the engine passed over and then threw the switch under the train. It was pulling out of South Dunham."

A similar derailment happened to a passenger train entering the Brockville yards at nine o'clock Saturday night.

Considerable light is thrown upon the derailment of the G.T.R. Muskoka express near the Dundas street bridges early Thursday morning by the statement of a striking yardman yesterday that he had been on a train on that track a month ago when two cars were derailed by the switch at just that place after the first part of the train had passed safely over it.

Train Cut Up.

South Bend, Ind., July 25.—The first freight train on the G.T.R. that had been started in this city since the strike was called was halted on Saturday night by strikers, who cut it into two sections. So many cars were uncoupled that the train was strung out along the track for blocks. Despairing of making headway, the train crew ran the engine into a roundhouse.

Firemen Buried Under Walls.

Cincinnati, July 25.—Two explosions early yesterday wrecked a manufacturing plant at Central avenue and Friday street, starting a fire that destroyed three adjoining plants. Five firemen were buried by falling walls and were taken out seriously injured.

The combined losses by the fire are estimated at $250,000.

Only Forty Saved.

Tokio, July 25.—The Tetsurei Meru plying between Kobe and Darien, sank Saturday night off Chindo, Korea. The steamer had 246 passengers on board, of whom 40 were saved. The others are missing.

Warships have been sent to the rescue.

Bees in Warfare.

Certain Nigerian tribes find bees very useful in warfare. The villagers on retiring before an enemy excite the bees and set them free, and painful is the experience of the man who is attacked by them in the labyrinths of cactus which surround the villages.

Try Mooney's Biscuits with all the rest.
See how much more flavory, crisper Mooney's are.
Their superiority is due to our painstaking methods—our modern facilities and using the costliest materials. We get the finest cream and butter from the famous Western Ontario farms because we pay top prices. Our flour is a special blend.
Yet they cost no more than common kinds.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN.

Less Inclined to Grog and Nicotine Than Ever Before.

The traditional man-of-war's man who made it a practice to roll his quid to the other side of his cheek and spit on his hands before taking to the guns is decidedly a thing of the past, according to the reports of the navy department.

The quid of chewing tobacco is no longer an essential characteristic of the man behind the guns. He is coming to the conclusion that he doesn't care for chewing tobacco or that it is not a nice habit or that he hasn't time to chew and be about his business too.

Last year the navy department contracted for 220,000 pounds of chewing tobacco for the use of the men of the fleet. This year the contracts will call for about 70,000, less than one-third of that amount.

There was a time when chewing tobacco was as important a feature of the ship's commissary as the allowances of grog was to Captain Kidd's crew and Captain Marryat's sailors. But the modern sailor has changed his habits.

He is a daintier sort of person by far, a cleaner cut, more orderly being who has not lost altogether his social perspective. Nowadays the sailor is less inclined to both nicotine and grog than he has ever been before.—Bluejacket.

COLLECTOR OF HAIRPINS.

Odd Hobby of Secretary to the Mayor of Indianapolis.

Hairpins are the special hobby of Luman K. Babcock, private secretary of Mayor Shank of Indianapolis. Mr. Babcock has hairpins by the hundreds and thousands—from the ordinary little wire affair that can be bought two dozen for 5 cents to the more elaborate tortoise shell effects that can be bought at a price as high as the buyer wishes to go. For years Mr. Babcock, who is a modest young bachelor, has been collecting hairpins until now he has approximately 3,000.

"I always wanted to make a collection of some sort," he says, "but I did not wish to collect something every one else was interested in. So far as I know there is only one other man in the country who collects hairpins, and he lives in Grand Rapids. My collection is probably the largest of its kind in the United States."

Included in the collection are 535 hairpins that he found in the streets during a tour of Europe in 1903. Every pin is labeled to show when and where it was found.

A Bird's Curiosity.

Professor Guy A. Bailey, a member of the faculty of the Geneseo State Normal school, relates a little incident which might be doubted were it not for the fact that he has the proof to show for the story. Mr. Bailey was on Temple hill with his camera attempting to get a picture of a horned lark. The lark evidently thought that Mr. Bailey was providing it with a bird house, as it hopped on to the camera, back into the trees and then back on the camera again. The bird repeated this performance several times, refusing to remain in the trees long enough to be snapped. Finally Mr. Bailey left the camera where he had located it, went and got another camera, and when he returned he secured a splendid picture of the bird perched on camera No. 1. Curiosity got the best of the bird, and the result was a novel picture.—Geneseo Cor. Rochester Herald.

Dogs of Other Times.

Swiss naturalists have recently presented to the Helvetian Society of Natural Science the results of their studies of the remains of dogs found among the ancient lake dwellings of Switzerland, the earliest of which date from the age of stone. It has been found that three different races of dogs existed there at that time, one of which resembled the Siberian sledge dog of today. Later, when the age of bronze dawned upon the Alps, two new species appeared, one being a shepherd dog and the other a hunting dog. All of these dogs were of northern origin, the canine types of the Mediterranean lands not having crossed the Alps.—Philadelphia Record.

A Card Sharp's Trick.

A Moscow card sharp has confessed that he has been winning money at the chief clubs for thirty years past by the following trick: On the pretext that his eyes were weak he invariably wore dark spectacles at night. His favorite game was one called "bank," in which the eights and nines are the most important cards. In his waistcoat pocket he kept a preparation of phosphorus and by touching the backs of cards which he wished to mark he made them slightly luminous. His dark spectacles enabled him to see the small phosphorous marks, which were invisible to the other players. After a few deals with a pack he could play with absolute certainty.

Intensive Cultivation.

"Intensive cultivation," so called, has reached its highest state of perfection in the market gardens lying about Paris, where land rent runs to $250 an acre or more a year and four crops are taken from the soil between February and November, and on the island of Guernsey, in the English channel, where farming land is valued at $1,200 an acre—two instances that move all writers upon agricultural topics to wondering awe—and yet in the near vicinity of Boston gardeners growing lettuce, radishes and cucumbers under glass are clearing $3,000 to $4,000 an acre a year without attracting more than passing notice.—National Magazine.

The American Contention.

The Hague, July 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Continuing his argument for the United States, Elder affirmed that, notwithstanding Lord Elgin's warning to the governor of Newfoundland to conform to the modus vivendi concluded between Britain and America in 1906, the Newfoundland law prohibiting the sale of herrings to American fishermen for use as bait, which had for its object to render it impossible for Americans to fish for cod, was carried out with the utmost vigor against American vessels and those inhabitants of Newfoundland who had procured bait for them.

Elder further said that Newfoundland fishermen had demanded the abolition of the law, which did them great harm, and had also addressed petitions to the same effect to the Newfoundland Parliament. The Newfoundland law forbidding inhabitants of the colony to take service on foreign craft was repealed in the case of American vessels by a royal decree, but Newfoundland had, in spite of this, enforced its provisions.

He contended that owners of United States fishing vessels could engage foreigners to fish for them under the protection of the American flag. This contention gave rise to considerable discussion between counsel and several members of the tribunal, who appeared to dissent from the view of Elder.

Innocent Man Suffered.

Tours, France, July 23.—A rag-picker named Joseph has confessed to the assassination, April 21, 1901, of five children of a farmer named Briere, in the vicinity of Chartres. The father of the children was found guilty of the murders and sentenced to life imprisonment. He died in prison.

The trial of Briere attracted the attention of the whole of France. Four of his daughters, aged respectively 14, 11, 5 and 4, and his son, aged 7 years, were found in bed one morning, stabbed and beaten to death. The farmer was arrested and charged by the police with the crime. According to a theory advanced by the police to provide for the crime, Briere, who owned a small farm near Ceranсez, wished to marry a woman of considerable wealth.

TWO STOCK DEALS.

Sherwood Took Flood's Boast and Later Handed It Back.

In Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board" is this story of Flood and Sherwood:

In the early days, in the seventies, quite a number of operators would gather together in Cahill's office on Montgomery street, near California. Among them were Mr. James C. Flood and Mr. Robert Sherwood. Sherwood had 1,000 Consolidated Virginia, the stock selling at about $100. One day Sherwood, on looking at the prices, remarked that he was getting tired of that Consolidated Virginia; it did not move much. Mr. Flood said: "What are you growling about? If you are tired of that stock I will take it off your hands at $100." "Sold," said Sherwood, and the stock changed hands.

In course of time the Nevada bank building was erected on the corner of Pine and Montgomery streets. On meeting Sherwood one day Mr. Flood remarked, "We built that Nevada block on the profits of that 1,000 shares of Consolidated Virginia you sold us."

Subsequently, in the Sierra Nevada and Union deal, Mr. Flood approached Sherwood on the street and bought from him 5,000 Union at $200 a share, the transaction footing up $1,000,000.

Sherwood built the Union block, on the gore corner of Pine, Davis and Market streets. Meeting Flood one day, he remarked, "I built that Union block with the profits of that 5,000 Union I sold you."

A WARM GREETING.

She Overcame the Rules and Met Him at the Station.

She was rushing through the gate past Bill Gibson, the gateman, like a passenger train by a flag station, but Gibson stopped her.

"Let's see your ticket, lady," he asked politely enough.

"Oh, I have no ticket," she said, "but won't you please let me through. I want to"—

"It's against the rules," cut in Gibson.

"Yes, but I want to be there on the platform"—all this breathlessly—"I'm so anxious to meet him."

"Well, go on through," Gibson told her. "I guess it'll be all right." Then to himself he soliloquized: "Why not? Perhaps she won't always be so keen to meet him; probably hasn't been married but a month or so; mebby isn't married yet at all. Far be it from me to interrupt her in such nice little attentions."

The train came in. Gibson sort of looked out of the tail of his eye for a chance to witness the happy reunion. Such sights illumine the dark recesses of the dingy old depot.

In a moment he caught sight of her. But her husband or sweetheart—if she had one or the other—was not with her. However, she was not alone. Under her arm she clutched tightly a compact brindle English bulldog with a countenance like a dissipated gargoyle.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Price of Eloquence.

The auctioneer held up a battered fiddle.

"What am I offered for this antique violin?" he pathetically inquired. "Look it over. See the blurred finger marks of remorseless time. Note the stains of the hurrying years. To the merry notes of this fine old instrument the brocaded dames of fair France may have danced the minuet in glittering Versailles. Perhaps the vestal virgins marched to its stirring rhythms in the feasts of Lupercalia. Ha, it bears an abrasion—perhaps a touch of fire. Why, this may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played when Rome burned."

"Thirty cents," said a red nosed man in the front row.

"It's yours!" cried the auctioneer cheerfully. "What next?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"FUN" WITH THE CARDS.

How an Evening in the Parlor May Be Sacrificed.

Is there anything in the world so pathetic as the spectacle of a young man showing his favorite card trick to a bunch of girls? The slaughter goes like this—man speaks first:

"I used to know a clever trick with cards. Miss Ellen, choose a card from this pack."

"I am to choose? Which one?"

"Any one you like."

"But how can I tell when you show me only the backs and the backs are all exactly alike?"

"Just take one at random."

"Oh, is that fair? Well, here—I've got the queen of diamonds."

"Oh, you mustn't tell me what you have. I'm to tell you that, you know. Put it back and take another."

"Why can't I keep this one? I can remember it better."

"There wouldn't be any trick. You see, you are to take a card that I don't see, and then I'm to find out the one you looked at."

"Oh! Why, I don't believe you can do it! All right; I've another one."

"Look at it and put it back in the pack."

"What part of the pack shall I put it in?"

"Anywhere you wish."

"But I should think you'd want to know, so you could tell which card it is. Well—there!"

"Now I shuffle them, so. Presto! Is this the card you chose?"

"Oh, I don't know. I forgot to look and see what one I took. Oh! Here's May. Now there are enough to play bridge. May, you should have been here sooner. Mr. Jones has been showing us the most wonderful card tricks!"—Cleveland Leader.

She Made Rapid Progress.

The feminine will out even in the case of children. This was amusingly shown not long ago when little Caroline, seven years old, and her brother, six years old, were sent to school on the same day.

For a week they attended regularly, and on Saturday night the proud father called them to him. With one on each knee, he asked what they had learned in school.

"Well," said the boy, "I learned dat de worl' is round. I can count up to five and say my alferbet."

His father beamed and by careful questioning got quite a remarkable amount of knowledge out of his small son.

"I'm proud of you, Freddie," he said, smiling. "Now, Caroline, have you learned lots too?"

"Uh, huh," answered Caroline shyly.

"Well," encouraged her father, "tell us what you have learned."

"I learned the names of all the boys in Freddie's class," she answered, proudly and wept when her father laughed.—Philadelphia Times.

The Firstborn.

Young Father—I am amazed, shocked, my dear, to hear you say you intend to give the baby some paregoric. Don't you know paregoric is opium, and opium stunts the growth, enfeebles the constitution, weakens the brain, destroys the nerves and produces rickets, marasmus, consumption, insanity and death?

Young Mother—Horrors! I never heard a word about that. I won't give the little ducky darling a drop, no indeedy. But something must be done to stop his yelling. You carry him awhile.

Father (after an hour's steady stamping with the squalling infant)—Where in thunder is that paregoric?—New York Weekly.

Glances.

He would have been glad to exchange glances with her.

But a fair exchange were no robbery.

And she chose rather to steal a glance when she thought he wasn't looking.

"Oh, woman, woman!" he murmured, but dared not reproach her openly.—Puck.

Brutal.

The Wife—I've been to a bridge party, and I have a splitting headache.

The Brute—Well, I don't understand it. Your tongue might ache or your stomach, but why your head?—Cleveland Leader.

While the Ball Twirled.

Vassar Girl—Why do they call that man the pitcher? Carafe would be much nicer.

Coach—There is no bottle holder in this game. You're thinking of a prizefight.

When the Devil Baits the Hook.

Watch out, Mr. Fisherman!
Keep yo' eyes an' look!

Dar's trouble in de ocean,

Old Boys' Reunion A Huge Success.

THOUSANDS OF VISITORS IN THE CITY FROM ALL PARTS OF THE CONTINENT —THOSE REGISTERED AT THE COMMITTEE ROOMS —THE BIG PROCESSION — OTHER FEATURES — MOST SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION EVER HELD IN THIS CITY.

No doubt about it, the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion of 1910 must be writen a Success, with a capital S. Everything, so far, has gone off without the shadow of a hitch. In the words of the programme—"Belleville for the past four days has been one big family." Old friends wept and fell on each other's necks; children greeted relatives some of whom they had never seen before; school girls and school boys (of old) met and bubbled over with laughter while they talked of old times, and everyone felt "It was good to be here." Front street on Saturday night was surely a sight for sore eyes. Myriads of lights and flags; music of all kinds filling the air; and on the streets gaes of anybody in this city before. "On with the dance—let joy be unconfined." That was the spirit which seemed to animate everybody, and the throng on our main aisle who were in a hurry took the road—that was the only way to get along. Sunday was quietly spent, and the visitors were calling on their old friends, after they had visited the church "where mother used to go." The rain in the evening did a lot of good to the country, and did the reunion no harm, laying the dust for the big procession on Monday. The holiday-makers were at it bright and early on Monday, and between baseball matches, sailing races, receptions and band concerts, were kept pretty busy. A delightful feature was the reception at St. Agnes' school. The official reception in Armories at night was looked on as the chief feature of the Reunion, and those who were present will not contradict those who say it was. The calithumpian parade and a grand display of fireworks made up up a really delightful day.

Saturday's Doings

PLEASING FUNCTION AT THE COURT HOUSE.

The first formal function of the Reunion, after the welcome of the Toronto and Chicago contingents at the Station, was the gathering on the beautiful Court House Terrace, where the Oddfellows Band played from 3 to 5 p.m. to a delighted audience

At 3.30 a large number repaired to the splendidly equipped new Court House Wing, and the spacious Library and Assembly Room was well filled by those who desired to receive the first greetings in speeches from some of the most prominent of Belleville's citizens and to assist in the declaring open of the new Halls of the Administration of Justice.

Mr. N. Vermilyea, chairman of the Building committee, in the absence of the Warden of the County occupied the chair most acceptably and all the County and City officials were present.

After detailing the progressive work of the County Council in the erection of this structure and of the House of Refuge on the Kingston Road, the Chairman welcomed all the visitors as old friends, and then called on Miss Smart to present a very fine portrait of her father Judge Smart, who when appointed was the youngest Judge on the Canadian Bench.

Miss Smart performed this pleasing duty most gracefully.

Colonel Y. N. Ponton, K. C., President of the Law Association, accepted this and the other portraits on behalf of the Bar of Belleville and Hastings, assuring the donors of the appreciation of not merely the Profession but also the Public, and of the honor which would be accorded to these links with the past, fruitful in memories.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell spoke eloquently ad feelingly.

The portrait of Judge Sherwood was presented by Col. S. S. Lazier, on behalf of Col. Percy Sherwood, C. M. G., Chief of Dominion Police, in a fitting speech; and a tribute was incidentally paid not merely to Judge Sherwood but also to the late Judge Lazier (who had left no photograph) by the President of the Association.

The portrait of Chief Justice Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, in his robes as Speaker of the Commons, was presented by Messrs. F. S. Wallbridge and W. H. Wallbridge, Barristers, and many interesting facts regarding the public and professional life of one who had filled a large place in the development of Canada, was referred to in acknowledging the gift.

Mr. W. B. Northrup, K. C., M. P., presented the portrait of the late Mr. A. G. Northrup, who as Deputy Clerk of the Crown for many years had been brought into intimate touch with successive generations of lawyers.

The presentation was acknowledged in a very pleasing way by E. Guss Porter, K. C., M. P., on behalf of the Association.

After some congratulatory remarks by Mr. John J. B. Flint (the doyen of the Bar), Rev. A. M. Hubly, Mr. D. V. Sinclair and Mr. James Wallbridge, Barrister, of Edmonton, Colonel Ponton read telegrams, from Sir Gilbert Parker, M. P., Harry Corby, C. D. Macauley, the Hulmes and other Old Boys across Ocean and Continents.

The energetic and worthy work of Mr. N. Vermilyea, as Chairman of the Building Committee, who handed over the Library to the Law Association, and of Mr. M. Wright, the Secretary of the Committee, was fittingly praised, and the very satisfactory and pleasing meeting was brought to a close amid mutual congratulations and greetings.

SUNDAY'S DOINGS.

Hand-shaking was the order of the day on Sunday. Old Boys and Girls from north, south, east and west met other Old Boys and Girls whom they had not seen for years, and many were the stories told and reminiscences related. In several of the city churches Old Boy preachers filled the pulpits, the choirs sang appropriate music and the organists played "Home, Sweet Home," and "Auld Lang Syne" as voluntaries. The different visiting preachers were:

Bridge St.—Rev. A. H. Frost.

Christ Church — Rev. S. Daw, of Hamilton.

Baptist Church — Rev. Myers Gilbert.

In the afternoon the Salvation Army band gave a pleasing concert on Queen Victoria Park, which was well attended and much enjoyed.

The rain which began to fall early in the evening rather put a damper on outdoor proceedings, but most of the visitors were ready to rest, anyhow

Monday's Doings.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession, of course, was the chief feature of the Reunion, and it was surely "the real thing." That enthusiastic gentleman, Mr. J. J. B. Flint, had worked like a beaver to get things moving and keep them moving, and he had the satisfaction of seeing his efforts crowned with success. It is doubtful if Mr. Flint would have given up his position at the head of the procession for a good deal. This was the order of the parade as it passed down Front street, after coming down Victoria avenue:

15th Bugle and Drum Band.

NOTES OF THE PARADE.

The streets were lined with people standing three and four deep, who were unanimous in calling it the "best parade ever."

The old Bugle Band boys were out in force. Some of them came thousands of miles to attend.

The M.P.s for East and West Hastings are a handsome pair to draw to. Brains and manly beauty are their forte.

The City Dads looked immense, and their silk hats had just come from Christy's, London. Some of them, that is. Others wore the democratic Derby. But they all looked fine.

The carriage containing the veterans, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, the old Sergeant-Major, Corporal James Wilson, of Stratford, and that enthusiastic old boy, Mr. William Johnson, was loudly cheered. Some of the occupants are nearing the 90-year mark, but Suspension of Immigration Laws Does Not Mean Trainmen.

Department at Ottawa Vigorously Denies Charges of Collusion With Grand Trunk and Issues Orders to Its Officials on Boundary to See That Law Is Strictly Fulfilled—Company Alleges Undue Severity.

Ottawa, July 26.—At the Immigration Department yesterday, it was stated emphatically that there had been some misunderstanding as to the effect of the recent order which allows railway construction hands to come into Canada on the same terms as agricultural laborers, namely, without showing themselves possessed of $25.

"The company claims," said one of the officials, "that the immigration regulations have been enforced with undue severity against train hands coming from the States to seek positions, while the strikers assert that strikebreakers are being brought to Canada in open and flagrant disregard of the law."

He said the Immigration Department was enforcing the law strictly, and in proof of the assertion, pointed to the telegraphed instructions sent to the inspectors when the strike commenced.

These instructions read as follows: "Make no alteration on account of Grand Trunk strike in dealing with train crews bringing trains across international boundary. Regarding any persons entering Canada as passengers with intention of accepting work as trainmen, whether temporary or permanently, examine and admit if they comply with the regulations, otherwise reject."

It was pointed out that, under the act, the officers are powerless to reject a man simply because he is a strikebreaker, if he is otherwise desirable, but if he is a vagrant or a criminal, if he is coming from the country of his birth or naturalization on a ticket purchased therein, or if he has not $25 belonging to himself in his actual and personal possession, or if in any other way, he fails to fully comply with existing regulations, he will be immediately refused entry.

Asked as to what action they had taken on the rumor that strikebreakers were being furnished with transportation from one United States point to another, with instructions to drop off at a Canadian point, thus avoiding the examination of the officials, he showed telegraphed instructions reading as follows:

"Parties traveling through Canada on tickets between United States points, and remaining over and commencing work in the Dominion, are illegally in the country and liable to a fine of $100 and to be arrested without a warrant by any immigration officer and deported. Give full publicity, newspaper and otherwise, to this law, and do your best to have it enforced. Question all suspicious cases closely take ticket number and personal description, and wire or 'phone such to our officers at the points where they should leave Canada, requesting our officers to arrange with American immigration officials to check out the through traffic. In case of parties of suspicious cases, you are hereby authorized to engage, at Departmental expense, some person to accompany train to ascertain if those ticketed to the States really go there."

Mob Drowns Negress.

Munroe, La., July 26.—Undentified men broke into the jail here yesterday and carried off Laura Porter, a negro woman prisoner, keeper of a resort where several white men are reported to have been robbed. It is believed she was thrown into the Ouachita River and drowned.

The woman had been warned to leave town many times prior to her recent arrest for larceny. Officers declared they had unearthed a conspiracy which showed that the woman had lured intoxicated white men to her resort., where they were beaten and robbed by negroes. About the same time that the City Jail was broken open, five short term prisoners made their escape from the Ouachita parish jail. Two of these are negroes, the other three white men. This jail delivery has no apparent connection with the seizure of the negro woman.

Died From Pounding.

Sherbrooke, July 26.—L. B. Doherty died shortly after being attacked by Wm. Richards at Philipsburg Sunday, who is being held pending an investigation. Both men were employed in the marble quarry, and considerable drinking went on between Saturday night and Sunday morning. They got into an altercation and finally came to blows. Richards, who is 28 years of age, pounded the deceased, who is 45 years of age, unmercifully about the head with his fist.

Dog Gave the Alarm.

Sherbrooke, July 26.—Joseph Marchand, 26 years of age, committed suicide at Magog Sunday. He left his home with his dog and jumped into the lake with his dog, but the latter got away, returned home, and attracted the attention of people there. They followed the dog to the water and found the remains.

Believed to Be Murder Plot.

Cleveland, July 26.—Mrs. Mary Emerson, 52 years of age, who died in a hospital here on Thursday, is believed by the police to have been poisoned, as the result of a murder plot. Two women companions, who were with her when she was taken ill, have disappeared.

Searching For Andree.

Winnipeg, July 26.—Martin Rosendohl of Stockholm, Sweden, is in Winnipeg on his way north to see if he can find any trace of Andree, the Swedish explorer. A short time ago stories came down from the north that Indians had relics of the party.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

LITTLE CHANGE SEEN

Freight Trains Are Moved, But Only Small Percentage.

President Hays Refuses Hon. Mr. King's Last Offer to Intervene and Arbitrate Differences In G.T.R. Strike, and Declares That He Proposes to Fight It Out to a Finish With the Striking Employes.

Toronto, July 26.—Little change was effected yesterday in the railway topography at Mimico. Five freight trains were moved—two east and three west. But, barring one of the latter, which left at 10 p.m. with four threshing machines and two threshing engines of the American Abel Co. for the Northwest, all were lightly loaded. Nevertheless, R. H. Crew, the yardmaster, claims they carried off the residue of perishable stuff. In the morning, between 8 and 11, two pulled out for London and Stratford, and one passed through from Sarnia to Belleville, while at 6.15 p.m. a second came in from Sarnia on its way to York.

No less than thirty-eight special constables were picketed about the yards, several of whom were out on their posts without shelter throughout the greater part of Sunday night's storm. Everything seemed peaceful, running smoothly and in an almost harmonious way. A group of strikers, ex-switch, yard and brakemen, loitered about the Church street crossing, chatting amicably with the pickets and throwing jocose Billingsgate at passing strikebreakers.

Some alarm was taken in the yard office near 5.30 p.m. when the report of a shot rang out from a neighboring field, just as a locomotive shunted a caboose past that locality. Where it came from no one could exactly ascertain.

Early in the morning a switch tender, who had never written the rules, was dismissed from the G.T.R. service for refusing to flag yard engine 1,560 on the main line. The yardmaster says the reason of the latter's dismissal was because the man became so scared of the strikers that he was unable to obey orders.

The night yardman has given in his resignation, and has been replaced by the car checker, A. Hawthorn.

The reopening of the G.T.R. shops here yesterday gave resumed employment to 645 men, divided: machinists, 125; blacksmiths and helpers, 220; freight sheds, Simcoe street, 300.

Want's Militia's Help.

Brockville wants twenty regular soldiers to protect G.T.R. property, to relieve the militiamen, who want to get back to their jobs. Four summonses have been executed charging disorderly conduct on Friday night. One defendant pleaded guilty and paid $1 and costs. Two of the other parties charged cannot be found. The authorities have the names of several others against whom action will be taken for a breach of the peace, including a number of women, who were more active than the men in inciting the law-breakers. William H. Kerr, a hockey and lacrosse player of note, was arrested yesterday charged under a section of the criminal code with "acting in a manner likely to cause damage to valuable property." He is held without bail.

Murdoch Scornful.

Montreal, July 26.—"Eighteen freight trains? Why, that isn't two per cent. of their freight business," said Mr. Murdock, when shown the Grand Trunk freight statement in which that number of trains was scheduled as moving yesterday.

Will Not Arbitrate.

Ottawa, July 26.—The Minister of Labor stated yesterday morning that in view of President Hays' refusal to submit the strike differences to a board of arbitration, as suggested by the Government, there was little further that the Department could do at present beyond awaiting the result of the pressure of public opinion, which is on all sides demanding a speedy settlement of the strike. There is no law to compel the company to accept the principle of arbitration, and if, as is apparent from President Hays' last reply to the Minister, the company is now prepared to fight the strikers to a finish, the Government has no power to intervene and compel the appointment of a board of arbitrators. President Hays' reply to Hon. Mr. King's third request for a definite statement of the company's attitude is apparently final.

The Minister, in acknowledging it yesterday morning, calls the attention of the Grand Trunk president to the fact that so far as the records of the Government show there has never been any real offer of arbitration from the company. Mr. King notes that President Hays' request for a board under the railway and labor disputes act did not involve any binding arbitration proceedings, as proposed by the Government, but merely a second investigation, which would in all probability have simply duplicated the work of the board of conciliation and investigation under the Lemieux act. The chief result of the correspondence of the past week between the Minister and the two parties to the strike is now the enabling of the public to determine better who is responsible for the refusal to settle the strike by arbitration. Hon. Mr. King states that the good offices of his Department are still volunteered for any mediation possible, but at present a deadlock seems to have been reached.

New C.N.R. Line.

Victoria, B.C., July 26.—The Canadian Northern has applied for a Dominion charter for a line of railway which it is proposed to run from Edmonton to Bear River, situated on Portland Canal. This will provide a shorter route to tidewater than the Grand Trunk Pacific's line to Prince Rupert.

N. B. London Offices Opened.

London, July 26.—Lord Strathcona opened the New Brunswick offices in Southampton street, Strand, yesterday afternoon.

Because the native, two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1914.

MUST CAMPBELLTON GO?

Judge McLachy Says It Will If No Help Is Sent.

Campbellton, N.B., July 26.—In a statement yesterday, Judge McLachy, chairman of the Campbellton finance committee, asks: "Do the people of Canada think it worth while to save this town, or do they calmly contemplate its extinction? Before the 11th of this month, we had an enterprising and energetic municipality with a happy population. Now many of them have gone away, never to return, and the remainder are living in tents, looking to the public to provide them against the winter. What has been done for them already is totally insufficient, but I have faith in the response of the people of the Dominion, if they are made aware of the actual suffering here."

Although none of the cash contributions received yesterday were large, they indicate sympathy with the town's position. The total cash received is now $40,273.

Makes Wife Trademark.

Baltimore, Md., July 26.—"The American man makes his wife the trade mark of his bank account. He uses her books, her clothes and her jewels to express his own business success," said Mrs. Donald Hooker, president of the Just Government League, yesterday.

"He himself cannot wear gems and elaborate clothes to prove to his associates that he has made money, so he urges extravagant costumes, extravagant homes and extravagant entertainments on his wife."

"Do you think, then, that fashionable women are useless?"

"As a whole and as a working body they are not worthy of consideration," replied Mrs. Hooker. "Some individuals who rise above the petty frivolities become wonderful powers for good and advancement. Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Mackay, for instance, have done much excellent work."

A Victim of Injustice.

Ottawa, July 26.—An error by an Ontario physician seems responsible for an apparent case of injustice by the immigration branch. A man named John Butler, who came out from Norwich, England, in 1905, spent three years in Canada and "went home" in 1908, returning in March, 1909. He then entered the employment of a farmer at Thorndale, near Toronto, but while at work in a hayfield he suddenly fainted. He claimed it was a sunstroke, but the local doctor, who was called in stated that he had an attack of epilepsy. The immigration regulations specifically debar epileptics, and Butler was taken to Montreal and held during investigation. He has just been released, the Government paying his expenses back to Thorndale.

Women and Children First.

London, July 26.—Tales of splendid heroism, in many cases resulting in death, were told in messages received yesterday from Tokio regarding the sinking of the Tetsurei Maru off Chindo, Korea, with the loss of 101 lives.

When the little vessel, fog-bound, crashed on the shore and began sinking there was no panic. Officers and men calmly began filling the lifeboats with passengers, women and children first, but there were not enough boats to hold all. When the last life raft had been shoved off from the sinking vessel the crew gathered on the highest deck and calmly stood there to await death in the sea. Survivors report that there was not a single instance of cowardice or panic in the wreck.

Surveyor Drowned.

Selkirk, Man., July 24.—Word reached here Saturday evening by steamer Wolverine of the drowning near Norway House on July 18 of Paul E. Findlay of Ottawa and an Indian named Charles Omen. The men belonged to a party working under J. K. McLean of Ottawa making surveys for the Dominion Government.

To Escort Earl Grey.

Winnipeg, July 25.—Sergt. Nichols of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police arrived here yesterday with several constables, who will act with him as an escort to Earl Grey on his overland trip to Fort Churchill. The men selected for the trip are all experienced travelers in the northern wilds.

Cotton Mills Closed.

St. John, N.B., July 26.—Both cotton mills at St. John will be closed down on Aug. 1 for one week. Manager Cudlip says the increasing price of raw material is responsible for the dullness in the cotton market.

HOT ON CRIPPEN CLUE

Eyes of World Are Focused on Steamer Montrose.

Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard Is Coming Along on S. S. Laurentic Behind the Montrose and Expects to Land on Same Day In Time to Make the Arrest at Montreal—Police Satisfied of Identity.

London, July 26.—That Dr. Howley H. Chippen and his former stenographer, Ethel Clara Leneve are aboard the Canadian Pacific steamer Montrose, now on the high seas bound for Montreal, is Scotland Yard's firm conviction. Of the many clues followed to the final ending, that which led to the docks at Antwerp, and to pursuit across the ocean, seems to hold out the best prospects for the capture of the two.

Inspector Dew is now aboard the steamer Laurentic, which is due to arrive at Montreal on July 30. That is the date also of the arrival of the Montrose, but the Scotland Yard officials hope the inspector will reach Rimouski in time to arrest the fugitives. The inspector knows both Dr. Crippen and the Leneve woman personally.

According to one despatch received here from Montreal, the Canadian Pacific Railway officials were in receipt of a wireless message from the Montrose, stating that the Leneve woman had been found and confessed. Another despatch from Montreal stated that the company had not been able to establish communication with the steamer.

Gave Names as Robinson.

Antwerp, July 26.—The two passengers on the steamer Montrose, who have been the object of inquiries by the London police, were booked at the steamship office as John Robinson and John Robinson, jr. The elder gave their ages as 50 and 17 years. They booked passage for Montreal on July 13 by the steamer Montrose, sailing on Aug. 31. Later Robinson asked that they be transferred to the same steamer sailing July 20, provided they could obtain a two-berth cabin.

The passenger agent for the line recalls their appearance. Upon being shown a photograph of Dr. Crippen, the passenger agent said:

"If Robinson is Crippen, the photograph flatters him."

He added that Dr. Robinson did not show any nervousness, and that the boy did not speak at all. Robinson wore a light grey suit and a grey hat. The agent did not detect any American accent.

No Fight Pictures For Chicago.

Chicago, July 26.—Moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno will probably not be shown here. Chief of Police Steward returned yesterday from his vacation, and immediately afterward issued an order placing a ban on all moving pictures showing illegal acts, such as murder, robbery, etc. As a prize fight is illegal in Illinois, the order is taken by the picture men to mean that the fight pictures are barred.

Fear Chinese Aggression.

London, July 26.—Strong reinforcements, reported from Simla, as joining the British garrisons along the Thibetan frontier, leave no doubt that the Government is anxious over the danger of Chinese aggression against India.

ONLY A PERMISSION.

Treaty Gave U. S. No Proprietorship In British Grounds.

London, July 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At The Hague fisheries dispute tribunal, Counsel Robson, dealing with the American assertion, said the treaty of 1818 accorded them sovereignty in British territorial waters, and maintained the historic arguments put forward by the Americans in support of the contention that the treaty accorded them an international "servitude."

He proceeded to argue that if America had the right to decide whether the legislation of the British colonies concerning the fisheries was reasonable, the arbitration tribunal could never examine whether America refuses, rightly or wrongly, to recognize such legislation.

He opposed the American view that such laws were unnecessary for the protection of the fisheries and the preservation of the fish and he argued that before 1783 fishermen in British colonies were everywhere subjected to the laws and regulations regarding the fishing treaty, which "accorded" to Americans the same right as they had formerly to come to fish in waters subject to local regulations. The right had not been increased by their independence, and in the course of the negotiations for the treaty of 1818 America had recognized that Britain had exclusive jurisdiction in those waters. In the treaty America had not been given a share in the fisheries as a co-proprietor with Britain, but only the "liberty," the permission, to fish; that is to say, under the same conditions as British fishermen in Australia.

A Grand Trunk engineer discovered the spikes pulled out of the ties in a stretch of track about one hundred feet long east of Brockville.

Scotland Yard has had no word of Dr. Crippen since the C.P.R. steamer Montrose got out of touch with the wireless stations on the east coast of the Atlantic.

A workman on the National Transcontinental Railway west of La Tuque tried to open a can of explosive with an axe. An explosion resulted, ten or eleven men were killed, and several others injured.

R. H. Campbell, chief of the Forestry Branch, blames the Canadian Northern Railway for the fires in Saskatchewan and Alberta, stating that the company disregarded orders to clean up its right of way.

Charged Apostacy From Race.

Ottawa, July 27.—H. N. Bourassa's campaign against Hon. L. P. Brodeur's son, who is a naval cadet, has somewhat fallen flat from the visiting card point of view. Mr. Bourassa accuses the lad of forsaking his mother tongue for the more plebeian language of the vile sassenach, and of disgracefully talking English instead of French in the city of Halifax. The Quebec Nationalist has stated also that young Brodeur's cards are printed in English. The card reads: "Cadet Victor Brodeur, C.G.S., Canada." This card is purely French, except the letter "S" for steamer, and if "C" for Croiseur had been used it would have been a card truly Parisian or Bourassite.

An official of the Marine Department naively suggests that there's nobody in Halifax to talk French to except R. L. Borden.

Preacher Has a Title.

New York, July 27.—Considerable attention has been attracted by the following newspaper advertisement.

"Preacher.—Rev. Sir Charles Dunbar, Bart., desires temporary or lenthened charge of preaching tour in U.S.A., Episcopal or other denomination; New York, Ramsgate, Eng."

He succeeded to the baronetcy last June, and in a letter says: "I would much like to visit America as an extempore preacher—a privilege I have never hitherto enjoyed, but have always desired."

TAKING DEAD FREIGHT

Grand Trunk Order Goes Out to Agents All Over Road.

Men Declare That In Spite of the Company's Statement of Increased Freight Service the Tie-Up Still Continues—Men Got Letters From Company Asking Them to Go Back to Work—Troops Go to Brockville.

Montreal, July 27.—The Grand Trunk strike situation shows little change, except that the claims of the company are more persistent than ever, while Mr. Murdock comes a good second. The strike leader will in fact admit nothing but continued evidences of the company's failure to overcome the tie-up.

The Grand Trunk says there were 200 more freight cars moving yesterday than the day before, and that a better showing will be reported to-day.

Vice-President Murdock again repudiated any connection between the strikers and those who are committing acts of violence.

Henri Bourassa's "for arbitration" article in Monday's Devoir brought several strikers to The Devoir office yesterday, who want the nationalist to intervene. They would also like Mr. Bourassa to see Mr. Hays, but the Grand Trunk president says there is nothing to arbitrate, and is sending out orders all over the system to refuse no freight except cattle and perishable goods.

Asked to Return.

Toronto, July 27.—A great number of the old employes of the Grand Trunk who are on strike had in their possession last night letters from the company demanding that they return to the service.

"The company has said that they have their road completely manned, but this doesn't look as though they had a complete staff of competent men, does it?" commented Vice-President Berry of the Order of Railway Conductors, dryly, when acknowledging that this was really the case.

Acting on instructions from the Militia Department at Ottawa, Gen. Cotton despatched two detachments R.R.C.I. from Toronto and London yesterday afternoon to the scene of thee Brockville riots.

A contingent of fifty-four men and five officers from Stanley Barracks left by train late in the afternoon under the command of Major Carpenter. The men were out at the Long Branch rifle ranges when notified to prepare for immediate departure. The non-commissioned officers are: Sergeant-Major Upton, C.M.S.; Instructor Blake Foster, Sergeant-Major Price, Q.M.S. O'Neill and Sergeant McGinnes. In Brockville the two corps will be under the authority of Col. Benson, D.O.C.

It is reported from Kingston that 40 men of A Battery, R.C.H.A., are in readiness to turn out for strike duty as cavalry, with carbines, wearing bandoliers and carrying ball cartridges. A special train will be kept prepared for their use, if the riot call comes from Brockville.

Only three freight trains were moved out of Mimico yesterday, the main endeavor being to meet the requirements of certain manufacturers in their imperative need of coal. A train of 23 cars, filled mostly with machinery, left for the west in the early hours of the morning under Conductor Sprigg, lately train despatcher of Montreal. Another, 20 cars all told, went west at 3 p.m. with a cargo of mixed freight, in charge of Conductor O'Connell, lately foreman of a Montreal steam shovel. Extra 692, the third train, came into the yards from Sarnia with 22 cars of dead freight at 6.40 p.m. The conductor and two brakemen were, it is said, in such a state that G.T.R. Detective Tutt was ordered to escort them back at once to Port Huron, Mich.

Pickets continue to hold the Mimico yards in the state of a beleaguered city. Trespassers are continually halted, rightabout-faced and turned off the company's premises. The pacific attitude of the strikers, however, has greatly relaxed the vigilance of the police, and, in fact, several of the special constables were sent back to the city yesterday morning.

Train Wrecked Near Sherbrooke.

Sherbrooke, July 27.—The G.T.R. train from Quebec, due at Richmond at 10 o'clock, was wrecked near Standfold Monday night. It is reported that a rail was placed across the track with the intention of wrecking the train. Several cars went off and the wrecking train from Richmond was called. No one was injured.

Held Up the Mayor.

St. Catharines, July 27.—Mayor Reyburn, Philadelphia, passing through here Monday evening in a motor car with a party of friends, was held up by the police for not having a back number on their car. The chauffeur said he was following instructions given him at Niagara Falls, so the party were allowed to proceed.

New Calgary College.

Calgary, July 27.—The new college to be started by the Methodist Church in Calgary will be ready to receive classes in September, and a staff of professors and teachers will be engaged at the earliest possible moment. Pending the erection of the proposed college building, the classes will be held in Blow's new block, on Eighth avenue, rent and heat free of cost.

FOR SKIN DISEASES

A Treatment that Costs Nothing Unless It Provides Satisfactory Relief

We have a grayish white ointment with a pleasant odor that is clean to use which we believe is the best known remedy for the relief of skin diseases. It is especially efficacious for overcoming eczema in all its various forms, ring worm, acne, pimples, blotches, insect bites, tetter, certain forms of ulcers, sores and wounds. It is strongly antiseptic, cleansing, soothing and healing. It stops all itching and burning caused by skin eruptions.

We are so positive that this ointment is unequalled that we offer it with the distinct understanding that if after having given it a reasonable trial, you are not satisfied with the results, you have only got to tell us and we will, without quibbling, return every cent paid us for it. We exact no promises or obligations whatever.

We want you to try Rexall Eczema Ointment. The first application gives a refreshing sense of relief, and because of its germ destroying power, it eradicates the germ or parasite which causes eczema and many other eruptions. It quickly allays the inflamation, gives protection to the inflamed surfaces, and helps restore healthy tissue. It is particularly active in relieving skin ailments peculiar to children. You certainly cannot lose anything by trying it. We would not dare make this offer unless we are positive Rexall Eczema Ointment will satisfactorily benefit you. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Remember, you can only obtain it at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

Kingston Says 15th May be Ordered Out

The Kingston Standard of last night contained this:—

"The G.T.R. strike was brought more nearly home by the action this morning of the company's representatives here in calling upon the local militia for aid in keeping under control the strikers and sympathizers in Brockville and Belleville. As a result of this action, "A" Battery, R.C.H.A., is being in readiness to be shipped on short notice to the scene of any possible disturbance. The batterymen have just returned from Petawawa and are in good shape for the emergency.

Lt.-Col. Hemming was notified at 1.30 this morning that trouble was threatened in Brockville and as a result "A" Battery is prepared to travel on the special train to be sent here. Telephonic communication from Belleville later this morning gave notification of trouble there and permission for the 15th P.L. D.G. to turn out there will be given by Lt.-Col. Hemming on short notice.

Kingston Masons Liked Belleville.

Kingston Standard:—The Kingston delegates to the Masonic Grand Lodge at Belleville have returned to the city, much pleased with their outing and much impressed with the manner in which Belleville took care of the 800 delegates. The city itself was splendidly illuminated, and the arrangements for the visitors were perfect. The Kingston men say that they are more than ever impressed with the fact that Kingston needs a new hotel.

Vessels Rushed With Freight These Days.

Kingston, July 26.—As a result of the strike on the G. T. R. the vessels running from Montreal and Toronto are being rushed with freight, also the boats running into Charlotte.

The steamer Alexandria is always rushed with freight, but since the strike was declared the amount of freight handled has been unusually heavy and as a result of this rush the boat was several hours late in reaching Folger's wharf on Friday night on her up trip. At every point the freight taken on was very heavy and it was impossible for the steamer to keep on her regular time.

A quiet wedding took place this morning at 11 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Foster, Meyers street, when their daughter, Miss Georgina, was united in marriage to Mr. Leon E. Walmsley, son of ex-Mayor Walmsley, of this city, Rev. H. B. Kenny, Pastor of the Tabernacle church, officiated. Miss L. A. Foster, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, whilst Mr. Harry Sharpe, of this city, did honors for the groom. Miss Mae Mills, of Brockville, played an appropriate wedding march. After a wedding repast had been partaken of Mr. and Mrs. Walmsley left for Toronto and other places on their honeymoon. Upon returning they will take up their residence on Coleman street. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. The many friends of the young couple will unite with the Intelligencer in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

A Poetic Tribute.

There is no place where e'er I roam
To me one-half so fair
As this my dear old childhood's home
And Bay of Quinte air—
You know the place for miles around
And all the people, too
Forever and forever
They seem the same to you.

In May you pick the violets
At Massassaga Park
You like to spend the summer there
And go fishing in a barque
You recall the many picnics
And the friends both tried and true
Forever and forever
They seem the same to you.

There's no place like your birthplace
With its spots familiar dear
There are no smiles like the friend's smile
Who greet you with good cheer
There is no home like the old home
And dear old parents, too
Forever and forever
They are still the same to you

Illegal Summer Duck Shooting.

A correspondent writes to the Picton Gazette as follows:

"During the last session of the Ontario Legislature a number of changes were made in the game laws, one of which was the changing of the opening day for duck shooting from Sept. 1st to Sept. 15th. At this late date the young ducks of the different varieties that breed in and around our marshes and swamps during the spring and summer will be larger, in better plumage, and if left unmolested up to that time in feeding upon the wild rice, etc., should be in prime condition.

It is well known that much duck shooting has been done the last few years before the open season in several localities in this county, among which might be mentioned Consecon, East and West Lakes. Some of this shooting has been done as early as the latter part of July, when the young ducks are only partly grown and hardly able to fly. The result of this is the migration of many ducks to localities where the close season is better observed, and consequently better shooting, when the season opens in these localities and poor where close season was not observed.

The writer has been informed that the attention of the Superintendent of Game and Fisheries of Toronto, and the District Warden of Belleville, have been drawn to the matter and assurance received that the different Game and Fisheries Overseers would receive instructions to direct their efforts toward the prevention of such alleged shooting this year.

It is the opinion of the writer that all duck shooters will find themselves amply repaid in rigidly observing the close season, when on September 15, and following days they will find ducks plentiful, of large size, and fat, a half dozen of which would be prized more highly than many times that number killed before the open season.

In several eastern cities street cars are being tried that have a rail running through the center for standing passengers to grasp instead of the usual straps. More persons can be carried than in the customary manner and at greater comfort.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Canadian Magazine for August is an unusually strong number. Perhaps the feature of most importance is a fine article by Prof. W. L. Grant, entitled "Goldwin Smith at Oxford." Professor Grant has been for some time lecturer on Colonial History at Oxford, and the researches for this article were made on the spot. There is also a splendid appreciation by Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, of the work and place of Goldwin Smith in Canada. These two articles are well illustrated. Professor Archibald MacMechan contributes an entertaining account of some early associations in Halifax. Mr. Arthur O. Wheler, President of the Canadian Alpine Club, has a beautifully illustrated article on "Canada's Wonderland." The second act of Arthur Stringer's play "The Blot" is in this number, as well as some fine short stories.

Soldiers Went East

A detatchment of Toronto and London regulars went through last night, their destination being Brockville. The men looked very fit and business-like. Accompanying them was at least one Toronto newspaper man.

To make it possible to reach the bottom of a trunk without stooping over, an Illinois man has patented a trunk with metal legs which slide in guideways on the corners to raise it.

Tariff Reduction.

The manufacturers who assisted Sir Wilfrid and his party in securing power, are likely at an early day, to receive their reward, that is if Sir Wilfrid's declarations and promises while in the West are of any value.

In reply to Free Traders in Manitoba, who interviewed him demanding a reduction in the tariff, particularly upon agricultural implements, and all other articles used by farmers, Sir Wilfrid, says the Toronto Star's reporter, made the statement that

"Mr. Fielding may not have done all he intended to do," said the Premier, amid prolonged applause, "and it is my intention to convey to him some of the many things I have seen and been told, and if we come to the conclusion that all he intended has not been done I shall say to him: "Stick in your hands and try again."

Commenting upon this implied promise of a reduction, the Star editorially says:—

"In this part of Canada we sometimes hear complaints that the tariff is too low, that it is not protective enough, and that it subjects our manufacturers to unfair competition from the United States and elsewhere. The voice of the Western farmer is a counterblast to these demands. It is a reminder that this is a country of great and varied interests, and that the tariff must be adjusted to the needs of all."

While the quesion is thus insidiously treated, no other inference can be drawn from it than that, if they dare a reduction in the protective tariff will at least be attempted. But as both Premier and Finance Minister are opportunists their action will depend altogether upon how such a policy will affect their retention of office.

Editorial Notes.

Some of the ruffians who created the disturbance in Brockville, which resulted in damage to property and injury to innocent men, were arrested in Brockville. Two acknowledged the offence, and were let off with a small fine; two others are out on bail. No arrests were made in Belleville. There should be no tampering with men who attempt to dynamite property, and interfere with switches and railway ties. Such men endanger lives, and should if caught receive condign punishment.

Some newspapers think and say that the Grand Trunk strikers are gaining the sympathy of the community because Mr. Hays refused a proposition to arbitrate. Mr. Hays would be a natural born idiot if he accepted arbitration upon the conditions imposed by the strikers, that they should have the selection of the arbitrators.

A detachment of the Royal Grenadiers on Saturday, the 23rd, marched from Toronto to Hamilton, a distance of 4 miles, in something under sixteen hours. The march was under active service conditions, and involved a test of the men's strength and capacity. If the Canadian militia is not all that its cost suggests it should be, the fault is not in the spirit of the men who compose it.

Are not some of our French friends carrying their antipathy too far? "Some of those who seek to make Quebec," says the Montreal Gazette, "appear as an anti-Imperialist, anti-naval, extremely French community have been censuring a French-speaking midshipman because on his visiting card he styles himself 'naval cadet.' It suggests that the naval policy Canada has undertaken to carry out, while opposed by some good men, is also objected to by some men of narrow and shallow mind, and that those who favor the maintenance of the French language might be more effective champions if they were more generous in selecting individuals against whom to tilt."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier as he proceeds westward on his tour relapses into his old time ways of talking. A few days ago he was telling the people he was a democrat to the hilt, a lover of plain methods of life and plain talk, and a despiser of what used to be known as tinpot titles. At Lanigan, Saskatchewan, on Saturday, he was a free trader among free traders and a reciprocitrian. This is news for the Liberal protectionists who support him.

The railway car men of the Canadian Northern at Winnipeg and westward have ended the strike by going back to work on the terms fixed by the conciliation board. This is what the Grand Trunk men would have done had they not been under the control of Yankee and labor manipulators.

Experts declare that the interior of Bolivia is one of the richest unexplored gold fields in the world, needing but the development of the country to be the centre of the world's gold supply.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Canadians Are Hopeful

Intelligencer Special.

Manchester, Wis., July 27.—The St. Lawrence, challenger for the Seawanhaka cup, beaten yesterday on triangular course on account of an accident, hooked up bright early to day for a race to windward and leeward. Canadians are very hopeful.

BASEBALL

Carmel Beat Canifton.

On Monday evening, July 18, the Canifton ball team was easily defeated by the score of 3 to 10 by the Carmel team at Carmel.

The game was just as one-sided as the score indicates as the Carmel boys played far the best game at the bat and on the field. The home team held the visitors without a run for the first three innings and they did not allow a visiting player to reach first base in the first and third innings.

Latta pitched an excellent game striking out the first three batters and six during the game. Hall did great work behind the bat, and Lemmon made some good catches in centre field. Mr. Honeywell gave good satisfaction as umpire.

The teams:—

Carmel		Canifton
	Pitcher
Latta		Barnes
	Catcher
Hall		Miller
	1st Base
Brintnell		Dunning
	2nd Base
Sullivan		Smith
	3rd Base
Lloyd		Hume
	Short Stop
Howes		Shorey
	Right Field
Hicks		White
	Centre Field
Lemmon		Smallhorne

Score by innings:—

BOXING

Jack Johnson Was Impeding Traffic.

New York, July 26.—Because he went too slow John Arthur Johnson, heavyweight champion of the world, found himself in Jefferson Market court today. It was a new experience of the giant black, whose proud boast it is that he can't get an automobile that will run fast enough for him. When questioned Johnson probably described his occupation as "an actor."

He was riding through Herald Square yesterday when arrested. According to the policeman he had halted his machine so far out from the curb that he was "interfering with traffic."

Arraigned before the desk Johnson looked mournful when he was told that he could go free on putting up $100 cash bail. He shook his head as he extracted from his pocket a wad big enough to "choke a bull." He dug through wrapper after wrapper of $1000 and $500 denominations. Finally he asked the lieutenant if he "couldn't raise the ante." Before he was done, however, he discovered a solitary hundred dollar bill in the middle of the wad and was turned loose.

Tragedy at a Funeral.

Kingston, July 27.—Mrs. Thomas Murphy of Wolfe Island was at the funeral of the late Michael Hennesy, drowned last week, on Monday at Wolfe Island Church, when she took a fainting fit. She was taken home and died during the night. Heart disease was the cause.

Verdict of Manslaughter.

Sherbrooke, July 27.—The coroner's jury at Philipsburg returned a verdict of manslaughter against William Richards in connection with L. B. Doherty's death at that place on Sunday. The doctors stated that Doherty died from hemorrhage caused by the blows on the head.

No King George Coins Yet.

Ottawa, July 27.—There will be no issue of a new coinage bearing the effigy of King George until January. The new dies are being designed in England, and Canada and Britain are expected to have the first coins of the new reign simultaneously.

The Siamese language is a great mixture of nearly all the dialects and languages of the far east—namely, Chinese, Malay, Mon, Cambodian, Sanskrit, Pali and others.

An English Superstition.

It is a favorite superstition in England that the bacon of swine killed in the waning of the moon will waste away in the process of curing or cooking much more than bacon of hogs killed while the moon is growing.

The Quail In France.

In France the quail is called the bird of prophecy, this from an idea that the number of his calls foretells the price of wheat. If he calls twice without resting the farmer expects but 2 francs per bushel for his grain; if the bird calls four times he expects to realize twice the price which two calls insure.

Manchuria.

There is no barren land in Manchuria. Almost every acre is cultivated. The yield of beans, the leading staple, is between 10,000,000 and 18,000,000 koku (koku—five bushels) a year.

Steel Pens.

A pen nib is a little thing, but more steel is used in the manufacture of pens than in all the sword and gun factories in the world.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

Dr. Julia Sears Founds City of New Thought.

DR. JULIA SEARS.

Oscawana-on-the-Hudson is to be made a New Thought city this summer. One hundred and forty acres of land has been acquired there by Dr. Julia Seaton Sears' students as a school and rest home from early June to mid-September.

The summer colony is for the benefit of professional people bent on a vacation plus study. A metropolis does not appeal, according to Dr. Sears, because "a center of higher metaphysics and modern mysticism."

In explaining the purposes of the New Thought city at Oscawana, Dr. Sears recently said:

"We believe the new civilization is built on co-operation and not competition, and all teachers and workers will come under our New Thought law of attraction.

"We intend to have a city above competition. Each center or school or organization will open headquarters in the city and attract such workers as are interested in their own special line. All centers will have public lectures and conventions, to which the students of other centers will be invited.

"The New Thought city is to be built upon the fundamental principles of the highest brotherhood for the greatest good to the greatest number. It expects to gather to it teachers of every science, religion and branch of human thought. In the end it will stand for the temple of truth.

"No one particular person is doing this. It is doing itself. It will be the inevitable outgrowth of the association of co-operative minds, the natural result of the higher liberal co-operative spirit."

The site is about two miles from the New York railroad station. An auditorium has been built, and around it a tent colony is to be established.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, Jr., Gives Dresses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., takes keen delight in disposing of her gowns in a way different from most society women. She is interested in several young girls who do not belong to the wealthy set, and she is pleased to turn her gowns over to them. Naturally many of them scarcely are soiled, and with a few alterations they make charming dresses for girls and matrons whose tastes are not so expensive and who have not such large incomes. Her generosity keeps these girls in dresses the year round. Mrs. Vanderbilt was Grace Wilson, and because young Cornelius married her his father cut him off with an inheritance of $1,500,000. The brothers and sisters, however, shared with him a part of their inheritances. For eight years none of the brothers or sisters as well as the mother of Cornelius would speak to the young wife. She did not cross the threshold of the Breakers, the home of Mrs. Vanderbilt, Sr., in Newport, but she was dignified through it all, and her attitude was such that she finally won her husband's relatives to her side. A reconciliation was effected in 1908.

Attack on Smelling Salts.

Smelling salts are dangerous. This is the opinion of several physicians who have investigated the subject. They are said to be a prolific cause of deafness and, besides, destroy the sense of smell. "They irritate and inflame the olfactory nerve," said one physician the other day. "All smelling salts are composed largely of ammonia, the fumes of which inhaled through the nose inflame one end of the eustachian tube and finally cause it to close. This tube connects with the mucous membrane at the back of the nose with the two auditory chambers leading from the eardrums. The part closing of these tubes results in deafness. Of course a great deal depends on one's constitution, but in a person not robust the use of strong smelling salts will cause deafness. To those of normal health the only danger lies in the too frequent use of the salts. Persons who suffer much from colds or chills or have a tendency toward catarrh should beware of them."

Electric lamps are inserted in the floors of pasenger elevators so a person entering a car at night will know just where he is to step. The light is switched on or off automatically as a car stops at or leaves a floor.

COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

OAK HILLS AND RIVER VALLEY

Owing to the strike on the G. T. R. things have been pretty dull.

Many of our local sports attended the ice cream social held at the Sidney Baptist church on Thursday evening, and everybody enjoyed an excellent time.

Mr. Walter Boardman attended the Masonic convention held in Belleville on Thursday and Friday of last week.

Mr. E. Wilkes remains very poorly these days.

COE HILL

It has often been foolishly asserted as some people know to their sorrow that there is no law back of Madoc. Some people find that indulging in blasphemy and foul language against God and man. A too ready use of fist and sticks and threatening to shoot is a dangerous amusement to be indulged in. An all night session of the magistrate's court was held here by Justice of the Peace Dr. J. Hardinge and Frank Gunter, Reeve of Wollaston. John Pattersen was the defendant in a case of blasphemy and foul lannguage against Hiram Keech. He partly admitted the truth of the charge and made out that there was great provocation. He appealed to the magistrates and told them that they too would swear if they found their garden destroyed by cattle trespassing upon it. Dr. Hardinge said there was no use for using bad language that he and many others would not swear even under greater provocation. He was fined $5 and costs. A more serious charge awaited John Pattersen that of maliciously assaulting Harum Keech, who appeared like a war worn veteran with bandaged head and arm in a sling. The ulna of right arm was broken by a blow in the fight with Pattersen. The fight arose as the outcome of cattle trespassing on the Pattersen land. There was a court of investigation on account of the serious nature of the charge against the defendant. Many witnesses belonging to both families were examined. Dr. Brown told in his evidence of the state of the injuries received by Keech in his fight with Patterson. There were two scalp wounds and the ulna of the right arm was broken. Patterson was committed for trial. He will be admitted to bail, providing sureties can be found for him.

A truant officer is required in North Hastings. A great many children fail to attend school, and some at irregular intervals when there is no work to be done at home. Some children will go if they like the teacher. It is a shame where there are so many good schools for children to be allowed to grow up unable even to write their names.

HALLOWAY ICE CREAM AND LAWN SOCIAL

The friends of the Sidney Baptist church gave an ice cream and lawn social on the grounds of their church on the evening of July 21, 1910. The gathering was large and good natured 40 gallons of ice cream were consumed by the company, together with large quantities of wholesome sandwiches, cakes, pies, etc. The programme was purely musical. A band from Foxboro played appropriate airs on the lawn during the serving of refreshments. After the inner man was satisfied, all those who could get in repaired to the church and listened to the singing of the Halloway quartette, which was of a high order. The Regent Zither Club, of Wallbridge, delighted the audience with five fine selections on their varied instruments. The weather was ideal everybody had a good time and all were glad to be there. Receipts for the evening $55.60.

UNDERGROUND NEW YORK.

Quicksands That Make Trouble In Building Operations.

The rock surface of Manhattan Island slopes from north to south and passes below the tide level at about Tenth street. From this point south and below the water level the island consists of a great blanket of sand and silt deposits, built up on the underlying rock by the tides and currents of recent geologic times. Beds of clay and sand vary in thickness, and in some places the clay does not appear at all. The sands vary to a considerable degree, from the coarsest gravel to the most treacherous quicksands.

To give an idea of the fineness of this sand some samples were passed through sieves with meshes of various sizes and finally through a 200 mesh sieve, the openings of which are about .035 of an inch in width. From 20 to 37 per cent passed through the 200 mesh sieve. Little may we wonder, then, that such fine material when saturated with water should flow as readily as water itself, passing through every crevice and seeking its level just like any liquid. Herein lies the reason for the difficulties encountered in excavating in quicksands, for should pumping be resorted to in order to drain a pit of water this fine material will invariably be pumped with the water and if the pumping be continued will finally be drawn from under adjoining structures, eventually undermining them.

What is probably the oldest piece of wood in existence was found overlying the bedrock at a depth of about forty feet below the street level on the site of the United States Express building in Greenwich street and was covered by a stratum of hardpan about eleven feet thick, above which was a layer of quicksand and muck about thirty feet thick. The specimen of wood is slightly brown in color and is believed to have belonged to a now extinct species of cedar. As there was no way in which the wood could have been brought into this niche in the bedrock after the hardpan stratum had been deposited by the glaciers it is evident that the tree of which this specimen formed a part had been growing before the glacial epoch.—Harper's Weekly.

Electrically Cured Meat.

A Cleveland packer explained a new process of curing meat recently to a convention of packers. With electricity, he said, he could do in from three to twenty-five days what under the old salt pickle system takes from 25 to 105 days. The discovery came about in this way: About ten years ago a man was testing an electric motor, using a vat of salt and water as a makeshift rheostat. One of the electrodes in the vat was weighted down with a brick, which after the test crumbled in the hand like dry cake. The electricity had driven the salt particles into and through the brick. As he was interested in the packing business, the experimenter wondered if electricity couldn't drive salt into meat. He tried it, and a great meat curing plant has been erected in Cleveland.—Collier's.

A Taxicab Economy.

"I'm planing on my braid," said the young woman who had been called to the telephone. "Oh, about twenty minutes, I guess."

"That is a trick," she said, "that came in with taxicabs. A man going anywhere with a woman in an old fashioned cab would have squandered half a week's salary before he would telephone to her about the stage of her toilet. But with taxicabs it is different. They eat up money faster than the old cabs, and it is nothing unusual now for an escort to ask how much longer it will take to get ready. Within fifteen or twenty minutes of the time set he calls a taxi and gets here just as you are going downstairs. Not very romantic, no, but it's sensible and saves money."—New York Sun.

Umbrella Sails.

Experiments have been made in England with a new kind of sail for boats. The sail when spread resembles a large umbrella. The mast, occupying a position similar to that of the stick in an umbrella, turns upon a pivot at the bottom. It is usually inclined about forty-five degrees to the horizon, but the inclination can be adjusted to suit the force of the wind. The inventors claim that with this sail "heeling of the boat" can be avoided, while at the same time the sail tends to lift the boat and thus enables it more easily to mount the waves.—Harper's Weekly.

Doesn't Sigh For Youth.

A person who would stand before you and advise you to get the most out of youth—that it is the happiest season of your life—is not telling you the truth. You grow happier as you get older. As I stand before you young folks I don't envy any one of you your youth. I had as fine a time as you when I was young, but I would not go back to my youth for anything. I'm much happier now. I really believe that by the time I'm eighty I'll be having the time of my life.—Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale.

Battle In East Africa.

Lorenzo Marques, Portuguese East Africa, June 21.—The Portuguese military occupation of the interior districts of Mozambique is meeting with fierce opposition by the present tribesmen. A pitched battle between the soldiers and natives took place June 15, at Celege, in which over 100 tribesmen were killed before the Portuguese captured the town.

"FUN" WITH THE CARDS.

How an Evening In the Parlor May Be Sacrificed.

Is there anything in the world so pathetic as the spectacle of a young man showing his favorite card trick to a bunch of girls? The slaughter goes like this—man speaks first:

"I used to know a clever trick with cards. Miss Ellen, choose a card from this pack."

"I am to choose? Which one?"

"Any one you like."

"But how can I tell when you show me only the backs and the backs are all exactly alike?"

"Just take one at random."

"Oh, is that fair? Well, here—I've got the queen of diamonds."

"Oh, you mustn't tell me what you have. I'm to tell you that, you know. Put it back and take another."

"Why can't I keep this one? I can remember it better."

"There wouldn't be any trick. You see, you are to take a card that I don't see, and then I'm to find out the one you looked at."

"Oh! Why, I don't believe you can do it! All right; I've another one."

"Look at it and put it back in the pack."

"What part of the pack shall I put it in?"

"Anywhere you wish."

"But I should think you'd want to know, so you could tell which card it is. Well—there!"

"Now I shuffle them, so. Presto! Is this the card you chose?"

"Oh, I don't know. I forgot to look and see what one I took. Oh! Here's May. Now there are enough to play bridge. May, you should have been here sooner. Mr. Jones has been showing us the most wonderful card tricks!"—Cleveland Leader.

She Made Rapid Progress.

The feminine will out even in the case of children. This was amusingly shown not long ago when little Caroline, seven years old, and her brother, six years old, were sent to school on the same day.

For a week they attended regularly, and on Saturday night the proud father called them to him. With one on each knee, he asked what they had learned in school.

"Well," said the boy, "I learned dat de worl' is round. I can count up to five and say my alferbet."

His father beamed and by careful questioning got quite a remarkable amount of knowledge out of his small son.

"I'm proud of you, Freddie," he said, smiling. "Now, Caroline, have you learned lots too?"

"Uh, huh," answered Caroline shyly.

"Well," encouraged her father, "tell us what you have learned."

"I learned the names of all the boys in Freddie's class," she answered, proudly and wept when her father laughed.—Philadelphia Times.

The Firstborn.

Young Father—I am amazed, shocked, my dear, to hear you say you intend to give the baby some paregoric. Don't you know paregoric is opium, and opium stunts the growth, enfeebles the constitution, weakens the brain, destroys the nerves and produces rickets, marasmus, consumption, insanity and death?

Young Mother—Horrors! I never heard a word about that. I won't give the little ducky darling a drop, no indeedy. But something must be done to stop his yelling. You carry him awhile.

Father (after an hour's steady stamping with the squalling infant)—Where in thunder is that paregoric?—New York Weekly.

Glances.

He would have been glad to exchange glances with her.

But a fair exchange were no robbery.

And she chose rather to steal a glance when she thought he wasn't looking.

"Oh, woman, woman!" he murmured, but dared not reproach her openly.—Puck.

A transformer built to test high voltage insulators in a German electric plant develops the enormous pressure of half a million volts across its terminals, the sound of the discharge being almost deafening.

A PAIR OF BOOTS.

They Figured In an Amusing Case of Mistaken Identity.

It may be doubted if there ever occurred a more amusing instance of mistaken identity than that afforded by Theodore Hook, the English humorist of his time, and it all came about through a pair of boots. Hook was traveling along the south coast of England and arrived in the course of his journey at Dover.

Alighting at the Ship hotel he changed his boots, ordered a slight dinner and went out for a stroll through the town. Returning at the appointed time, he was surprised to find the whole establishment in confusion. A crowd had collected outside the door. The master of the house was standing at the foot of the stairs with two candles in his hands, and on Theodore's entrance he walked backward before him and conducted him into the principal saloon, where all the waiters were standing and a magnificent repast had been provided. The wit was much amused at the dignity to which he had been promoted but, being an easy going fellow, made no scruples and, sitting down, did full justice to what was set before him. Next day he signified his intention of departing and ordered a coach, when, to his astonishment, a carriage and four drove up to convey him to his destination. He inquired with some apprehension what he was to pay for all this grandeur and was no less astonished than gratified on receiving the answer, "Nothing whatever, your royal highness." He was never more thoroughly mystified, but the next night, on taking off his boots, which he had bought ready made just before he went to Dover, he found "H. S. H. the Prince of Orange" written inside them. They had been originally made for the prince, who was then in England suing for the hand of Princess Charlotte, and notice had been given that all his expenses while in the country should be set down to the charge of the government.—Minneapolis News.

RUSSIAN AUDACITY.

The Coup That Made Persia a Financial Vassal of the Bear.

In 1892 the Imperial Bank of Persia, a British institution, lent the Persian government $2,500,000 on the security of the customs receipts of the gulf ports. In 1895 Persia, finding herself again hard up, desired to borrow $6,000,000 more from the same source and on the same ample security. But before the British bankers would grant the additional loan they must needs quibble and procrastinate and insist on still further conditions. Finally, however, $6,250,000 of Persian bonds were underwritten in London. Russia, hearing of the affair at the eleventh hour and fifty ninth minute, promptly offered Persia a much larger loan on much better terms, and she did no haggling either. Persia, finding herself in the embarrassing position of having two parties suing for her financial hand at the same time and not daring to offend either of them, thought to escape from the predicament by not borrowing at all.

But so persistently and skillfully did Russia urge her suit that in 1900 Persia timidly yielded to the ardent wooing and acknowledged her submission by accepting from Russia a loan of $11,875,000 for seventy-five years, at the same time agreeing that all previous loans should be paid off at once and no more incurred until this one was discharged without the permission of the Russian Banque Desprets de Perse. Within less than a month, therefore, 5,000,000 rubles ($2,500,000) were remitted to London to pay off the British loan of 1892, thereby freeing Persia from any British financial control. There has been no more audacious and successful stroke of diplomacy in modern times, for by it Persia became a financial vassal of the bear.—Everybody's Magazine.

Fate of the Great Auk.

The great auk, a northern diving bird, used to exist in the arctic regions also. Now, this splendid bird was seriously handicapped by the fact that it laid only one egg in a season and so could not afford to be slaughtered at all. But it was hunted and shot without discrimination. A few surviving hundreds took refuge on a desolate rock far out to sea, but one fatal day a vessel contrived to land on this rock, and the crew shot nearly the entire rookery. Finally nature herself rose up. There was a cataclysm, the rock sank into the sea, and that was the last of the great auk.

The Gobelin Factory.

The gobelin factory was founded in 1515 by Francis I., who scoured Europe for the artists and the makers of beautiful things who could bring luster to the capital of France. Under his auspices came Leonardo da Vinci, and he it was who laid the foundations for the collections of statuary and paintings that have made Paris famous. The gobelin tapestry factory was among the least of his undertakings.

Naming the Baby.

"Have you named the baby?" asked the admiring neighbor.

"Not yet," said the proud young mother. "We're going to christen him Sunday."

Does Your Flour Get Sticky Or Musty

When you dig into your flour bin and find it soft and sticky, or lumpy, musty, softish — when your flour sifts sluggishly. — Then, Madam, be sure it isn't FIVE ROSES.

For FIVE ROSES is a fine granular dust, unlike any other flour you've ever known.

Being the driest, soundest, the sweetest flour of all.

And when your flour is driest, just see what happens.

It is granular and free in the sack — nothing remains in your sifter—no waste, you see.

Bright, particularly glistening, creamy.

A lively flour, each particle freely absorbs a surprising amount of water.

Easier to work, fermenting uniformly, working soundly in dough and oven.

And when your dough is done, it's wonderfully light and silky.

Being driest, it takes less FIVE ROSES to fill each recipe—you pay for flour, not water.

And because it is driest, FIVE ROSES never gets lumpy, nor mouldy, nor musty — never in "bad odour" with finicky folks.

Keeps sweet and sound—FIVE ROSES "keeps".

Madam, don't you be the last to use FIVE ROSES.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The Mills of The Gods.

As then, justice should be
Tempered by sweet mercy.

Sir Alan Aynsley entered the library with his usual quick step and careless graceful bearing.

At one glance he took in the four faces, all so familiar, but now half averted from him. And Mr. Grey, watching him keenly, saw, for one half moment, his lips open and close—grow suddenly white, while a low, gasping sigh escaped them; for in that moment, looking at the men before him, the impostor felt his hour had come.

He had nerve and courage worthy of a better fate; he bit his lips fiercely, and clinched the fingers of his strong hands. Then he advanced to the table, cool and collected as of old.

"An unexpected pleasure gentlemen," he said, courteously. "My servant was mistaken; he told me a deputation awaited me — it is a deputation of friends, I hope."

But no smile looked back at him no lips answered his words; from Paul Westerne, the man he had loaded down with favors, there came a low cry that might have been a sob.

He looked from one to the other, and their faces wore the aspect of judges.

"I am at a loss, gentlemen," he said; "I bid you good morning, I bid you welcome to my house, and you have no word for me. What does it mean? Why this change? Yesterday I counted you among my friends; today you stand before me as strangers."

Mr. Grey came forward, and on his face there was deep emotion; his white head was bent for a moment before he spoke.

"I charge you, sir," he said, solemnly, "as you shall one day be judged by God, tell us the truth we come to seek—are you Paul Lynne or Alan Wayne."

With nerve that might have made a hero instead of serving a thief, he replied:

"I do not understand you. I am Alan Aynsley—I was Alan Wayne."

"On your oath?" asked Lord Damar.

"On my oath," he replied.

It was Vivian Chandos who spoke next.

"I am a soldier, and I like a fair fight—face to face. By the bright heavens above us, if you have cheated me, you shall pay a heavy reckoning; if I am wronging you, there will be no pardon too abject for me to ask. I might have struck you down once; I might have played with you as a spider would a fly; I prefer honestly telling you what I know and asking for your defence or your confession. I might have sent over to Australia and have brought fifty witnesses to identify you; I spared you that, and ask for the truth."

"I am really at a loss," replied the courteous voice, in which the keenest ear could detect no faltering; "some one mentioned the name of Paul Lynne, the young friend who lived with me at Otana and died there. If you want proofs of his death there are the certificates, the name upon his gravestone, the announcement of his death in the public papers; the young lady who loved him—to whom he was engaged—lives in England; ask her if Paul Lynne be living or dead!"

Think what his reliance on Esther was, when he dare say that — but there came to him a conviction in the hour of his danger, that she would give her life to save him.

Still the stern, grave faces did not relax, and no man present uttered a word.

"Why," he asked again, "am I

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found In the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curasson. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto esta aqui" (the corpse lies here).

"It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its retreat, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It can then be cautiously approached and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It is very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most pugnacious of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it meets them. Often the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fiercest parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

An indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was dexterously caught by Grasso. Raising it aloft in his hand and as if it were accursed, Grasso smashed it in two and then stamped upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had climbed back to the boards, with the victim in his arms.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long entreaty for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed playgoer, who on his side begged to be allowed to return to his seat.

But this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

The action was greeted with loud cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully bowed his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.

RUPTURE

J. Y. EGAN, Specialist of Toronto

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Procrastination is the most common error of ruptured people. In most cases they do not realize the risk they are running. You may have been ruptured for some time and not noticed any change for better or worse. But, remember, no rupture stands still. Even if not getting larger the bowel is growing fast to the inside, and any day your ordinary truss is liable to slip while lifting or coughing and let more of the bowel escape. In such a case strangulated hernia may result in death. Many people come to me constipated, nervous, irritable, suffering from indigestion and constant colds. They seldom charge this to their rupture, but that is where their ill-health originates. A rupture strains the whole physical organism and is a constant nerve irritant, a breeding place for the germs of typhoid, and frequently causes rheumatism, paralysis and sterility. Your rupture cured will make you feel like a new being; your nerves will recover their normal tone and your rundown condition replaced by vigorous, joyous health. Act at once and remove the daily danger of death which, like a threatening thundercloud, hangs over the head of every ruptured person. Don't delay, to suffer and die. Let me help you live and enjoy life. What I have done for thousands in the past fifty years I can do for you to-day. Awaken to the fact what a cure means to you—viz., immediate security, comfort and a perfect physical condition. This is all yours to-day for the asking. Out-of-town patients can consult me and return home same day relieved of all rupture trouble permanently. No operation, pain or loss of time. Tear off free coupon now.

Free Consultation Coupon.

This coupon, upon presentation to J. Y. Egan, rupture specialist, 321 West King Street, Toronto, who will visit the towns (on dates mentioned below) will entitle the bearer to free consultation and examination of his or her case. Ask at hotel office for number of my consulting room. Note dates.

THE MIRROR TONIC.

When a Peek Into a Hand Glass May Help a Patient.

The looking glass, whether a plus or a minus quantity, plays a more important part in the sickroom than most nurses and physicians give it credit for.

"All things considered, I think it a good plan to give a sick person a chance to look at himself occasionally," said a prominent doctor recently. "Of course the indulgence must be granted with discretion. If a patient is really looking seedy a turn at the looking glass is equivalent to signing his death warrant, but if taken at a time when braced up by some stimulant or a natural ebullition of vital force a few minutes of communion with his own visage beats any tonic I can prescribe. It thrills the patient with new hope. It makes him feel that he isn't quite so far gone as he has thought and that possibly a fight for life is, after all, worth while. Being thus sensitive, a persistent withholding of a mirror convinces the patient that he must be too horrible for contemplation, and he promptly decides that the best thing for him to do is to give up the ghost and get out of the way.

"That is one of the mistakes hospitals were apt to make up to a few years ago. When I was a young fellow getting my first practice after graduation I served on the staff of several hospitals, and in all, especially in the free wards, those aids to vanity were strictly forbidden."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It is said that some years ago a mayor of Toronto who was anxious to appear extremely busy, made a point of attempting to surprise certain officials, in order to catch them in neglect or idleness. This course of action on the part of the chief magistrate did not lead to an overwhelming popularity, and he soon found himself regarded with coldness. He persisted in his over-zealous vigilance, however, but made no alarming discoveries.

One morning he arrived at the City Hall at the hour of eight and proceeded to the office of Dr. Charles Sheard, to find that dignitary in his shirt sleeves absorbed in the toils of the day.

"Dear me," exclaimed His Worship mildly. "What are you doing here so early?"

"Minding my own business," was the laconic reply.

Want Monuments Collected.

Buried at the old cemeteries in Sandy Hill, Ottawa, which the city is converting into a public park, are ten or twelve British soldiers, former sappers and miners, who came here and built the Rideau Canal locks prior to 1830. Now the city is making the change, Mayor Hopewell has received the suggestion from Charles King and others that military men of the city should unite in collecting the monuments of these old soldiers, one of whom, Reuben Traveller, fought at Trafalgar under Nelson, and have them placed at Beechwood Cemetery.

HIS AUNTIE JULIA.

She Is Really a Wonderful Woman In Her Own Way.

A GREAT HAND WITH YARBS.

She Can Brew Them Into a Medicine That Hits the Spot Every Time and Is Better Than a Doctor's Visit. How She Made Old Pulsifer Jump.

"My Aunt Julia is really a wonderful woman," exclaimed the low browed man, placing his feet on the manager's desk. "She hasn't any diplomas from medical colleges, but when it comes to curing a sick man she can give the ordinary doctor a start of ten years and beat him around a block. Aunt Julia has firm faith in yarbs"—

"You mean herbs," interrupted the professor.

"I don't mean anything of the kind. I mean yarbs. You go over to Aunt Julia and mention yarbs, and her eyes will brighten up and she'll ask you to sit down and eat a piece of pie, but if you began talking about herbs she'd paste you one with her trusty saucepan and knock off a corner of your scalp. Aunt Julia is pretty touchy about some things.

"One day old Mrs. Doolittle blew into the house to spend the afternoon, and Aunt Julia happened to say that something happened in Aprile. Mrs. Doolittle thinks she knows more than Webster's unadulterated dictionary because she taught school about 150 years ago, when she was a young woman, and she called my aunt down and said that there was no such word as Aprile.

"'You mean April, my dear,' says she.

"'I don't mean any such doggone thing,' says my aunt. 'I mean Aprile, and if you don't like it, Mrs. Doolittle, you can lump it, and be blamed to you.'

"Well, they fanned away for five minutes or so, and their language began to make the shingles fall off the roof, and I was thinking of sending in a hurry call for the cops, when Mrs. Doolittle left the house by way of the window and jumped three fences without touching them in her haste to get home. A lot of saucepans and other household utensils whizzed past her ears and seemed to stimulate her.

"That's the sort of woman Aunt Julia is. Now, if you want to go over and talk to her about herbs I won't interfere.

"If there's anything my aunt delights in it is doctoring people. She hasn't a bit of use for drug store medicines. She brews her own remedies, and she doesn't think anything will help a sick person unless it tastes like the royal palace of Abyssinia. A dose of her colic medicine will make a man's insides feel as though he had swallowed a porcupine.

"I had the colic last summer, and the medicine she made for me had smoke on it. I can taste it yet. Sometimes I dream that Aunt Julia is handing me a spoonful of her colic medicine, and then I always wake with a yell. She is an old fashioned woman. She gathers her yarbs at certain stages of the moon, and when she is brewing her medicines she mutters incantations and makes passes with her hands and does a lot of tricks that make your blood run cold. But her remedies hit the spot.

"Old man Pulsifer, you know, was a hopeless invalid for a year. He sat in a wheeled chair, and his wife fed him with the fire shovel, and all the members of the family were kept so busy waiting on him that they hadn't time to wind the clock or prime the pump. He said he had paralysis of the worst kind, and everybody believed him. Aunt Julia went over there one day and looked at the old man's tongue and poked him in the ribs and tapped him with a tuning fork and said she could cure him up so quick it would make his head swim.

"'If you can cure that man so he'll be of some use in the world,' said Mrs. Pusifer, 'I'll give you the silk crazy quilt my grandmother gave me when she was dying.'

"Aunt Julia gathered a lot of yarbs at the dark of the moon in the southeast corner of a graveyard and stewed them over a slow fire, and the broth she made from them would have warped the armor plate of a battleship. I knew by the smell of it that it was the real stingo, and you can't imagine how glad I was that I didn't have to take it. When she went over to dope old Pulsifer she insisted on my going along to help hold him down.

"The old man didn't want to take it. Anybody could see that. He got a smell of the stuff when Aunt Julia took the cork from the bottle, and a pale green sweat broke out on his brow. But I seized him by the top of his head and pulled his mouth open, and my aunt poured down about forty kilometers of her redhot dope, and when it had sizzled into his stomach he let out one warwhoop and streaked out of doors like a professional Marathon runner. When we found him a couple of hours later he was standing in the creek, which was full of ice water, trying to get his vitals cooled off.

"I defy any regular practitioner to make a quicker cure than that."—Walt Mason in Chicago News.

Easily Said.

"Some of these tongue twisters are really very hard to enunciate—for instance, 'the sea ceaseth and it sufficeth us.'"

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices Is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hodges in New York Tribune.

Old Boys' Reunion Now Thing of Past.

MOST SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION EVER HELD IN BELLEVILLE PASSES INTO HISTORY — YESTERDAY'S EVENTS — DECORATIONS TAKEN DOWN TO-DAY.

The Belleville Old Boys' Reunion of 1910 is now a thing of the past.

Most of the visiting Old Boys and Girls have returned to their homes—many in far-off places—but many a long year will roll by ere either visitors or Bellevillians will forget the whole-hearted welcome, the gay festivities and the happy reunions of the past few days.

It is good to travel the Primrose Way once in a while, if only for a brief space, and to forget, in the company of friends of olden days, the multifarious cares and annoyances of this workaday world.

And so we say good-bye to the friends of other days, may fortune smile on them in their homes, wherever they may dwell, and may they all be back to see us again at same future time.

YESTERDAY'S DOINGS

The departure of the last of the Toronto contingent, early yesterday morning, took away a good many of the happy crowd, but plenty were left to make yesterday a gala day — if not on such a large scale as on Monday. The remaining visitors enjoyed themselves to the full in visiting old scenes and haunts, and reuniting with old friends. During the day many aettached themselves to Blea's Band, paraded the streets with that whimsical organization, and had an unlimited amount of fun. Others took in Band concerts and water sports, and all, when the shades of evening fell, were ready to affirm that they had had an unlimited amount of enjoyment, that Belleville had done herself proud in the way of welcome and entertainment, and that the Old Boys' Reunion of 1910 would go down in history as "the best ever."

AQUATIC EVENTS

Aquatic events were yesterday upon the programme for the entertainment of our visitors. Under the direction of "King" Rogers, a number of sailing events took place in the morning and afternoon. The course laid out was such that from the southern part of Victoria Park the craft were continuously in view. In some of the events the finishes were close and exciting. The programme was as follows:

MORNING.

Skiff Rowing Race.

F. Duesberry, 1st.
G. Reid, 2nd.
Joe Goyer, 3rd.

Canoe Race, Single—

B. Jennett, Napanee, 1st.
H. Rathbun, Belleville, 2nd.
C. Windover, Napanee, 3rd.

Canoe Race Double—

Jennett, Bros., Napanee, 1st.
F. Jamieson and F. Laidley, Napanee, 2nd.
Rathbun Bros. Belleville, 3rd.

Upset Canoe Race—

D. Jennett, Napanee, 1st.
H. Rathbun, Belleville, 2nd.

Catching Duck—

F. Duesberry, winner.

AFTERNOON.

The 14-foot dingheys were first called out. There were five entries, namely: R. Gorman's Good-Bye; A. McGie's, Gies; J. Caldwell's Jo-Jo; W. J. McNabb's Y-No, and F. Wallbridge. During the first round of the course Good-Bye bid adieu to its competitors and took a decided lead maintaining it to the finish. McGie's boat finished 2nd and F. Wallbridge 3rd.. The Y-No had the misfortune to capsize when the race was about completed. The Jo-Jo did not complete the course.

PUNTS.

Three of these craft, started but only two finished. Those starting were J. Callaghan's After You, W. Frost's Oddfellow and J. Stafford's Batt Wings. The latter dropped out in the second round of the course. After You won out easily.

Paddling Double Canoe—

There were three entries in this event, namely, Stafford Bros., Gorman and Rathbun and Eaton and Downey. They finished in the order named.

The members of Blea's Band, dressed in fantastic garb, were upon the park and entertained the large crowd of spectators by a number of selections which were heartily applauded.

ORGAN RECITAL.

At Bridge street church, yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a grand organ and vocal recital was given by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Riggs of New York. Mr. Riggs gave a number of beautifully played selections upon the organ whilst Mrs. Riggs rendered, with much sweetness, two solos, entitled "Show Me Thy Way," and "The Fairies."

CONCERT AND LECTURE AT ST. MICHAEL'S ACADEMY.

There was only a fair attendance at the concert and lecture given in St. Michael's Academy last evening. Songs were rendered in a charming way by Mrs. Grant and Miss Katie Bawden. Miss Agnes St. Charles acted as accompanist. Mr. Thos. Lynch, of Chicago, an old Belleville Boy, gave an illustrated lecture on the famous Yellowstone park, showing about 150 handsome views, and giving a graphic and entertaining description of the many beauties of that world-renowned resort.

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

The Oddfellows' Band gave a delightful concert on the park last night which was largely attended and much enjoyed.

One hundred and four old members of the 15th Bugle Band turned up for the Reunion.

Everybody is praising the clever and painstaking work done by "Dick" Ponton, assistant secretary. A medal for this popular and courteous young gentlemen should be struck at once.

It is earnestly requested that all those having accounts against the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion will render same to-day and greatly oblige.

Dr. H. A. Yeomans is entitled to and is receiving universal congratulations on the success of the Entertainment provided, under the direction of the committee of which he has been the capable and energetic chairman.

There are still some of the beautiful official Souvenir Badges left, and they are being distributed at the nominal price of 10 cents each, the cost of the ribbon. The upper part is a brooch with Maple Leaf, and the lower a medallion with coat of arms for watch charm. Just the thing to send to absent friends or to keep as a souvenir of our delightful reunion.

The Palace.

Anyone of last night's Palace patrons who did not feel amply repaid for the time spent watching the picture program, would be hard to please. Words of praise were heard on all sides, and the beautiful pictures certainly deserved all the nice things said.

The Courtroom Scene in one of the "Biographs" was alone worth going a distance to see, ask any who was there. The two best of last night's will be run again tonight, and a fine new one will be added, giving 3 full reels. Everyone a gem.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT

IN CURING MANY DISEASES ?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives" —The Famous Fruit Medicine.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Wreck Near Peterboro Results In the Injuring of Five Men.

Toronto, July 27.—Five men were injured in a collision on the C.P.R. in a rock cut at Indian River, ten miles from Peterboro, at four o'clock yesterday morning. They are:

Edmund Trout, C.P.R. engineer, 273 Pacific avenue, West Toronto, shoulder dislocated and badly bruised.

R. Follis, C.P.R. engineer, 43 Clendennan avenue, West Toronto, shoulder dislocated and otherwise injured.

Thomas Dirby, fireman, Toronto, engine 641, injured in back and legs.

E. C. Knapp, conductor, 183 Mavety street, West Toronto, right side badly bruised and legs hurt.

James Weir, fireman, West Toronto, hands and arms injured.

Two freight trains were to have "crossed at Indian River," but through some error in orders a collision occurred that telescoped both engines, and piled nine cars filled with Quaker Oats all up in a heap and scattered their contents over the road.

Engine 641, with Engineer Trout, Conductor Thomas Dirby and Fireman James Weir were going east, and met the up train in charge of Conductor Knapp and Engineer Follis near Indian River. Both trains slowed down, and in this fact is explained why one of the two crews is alive to tell the tale.

The error in the order is said to have been the omission of the words "Indian River," the crossing place, from the order.

A great deal of trouble was also given by a few cars filled with cattle attached to the rear of the train from the west. The animals were terrorized. They rushed from side to side of the cars, crushing each other in their mad struggles.

Earthquake Works Havoc.

Tokio, July 27.—Tremendous earthquakes and a volcanic eruption have worked havoc on Usubay, on the southern part of the Island of Hokkasdo, according to advices received here yesterday.

For four days a panic has reigned in the vicinity of the mountain, and 8,000 refugees have abandoned their homes and fleeing inland for their lives.

The meagre advices received here state that there was a terrific upheaval of the bottom of Usubay, and that the harbor and practically all of the shipping in the bay were destroyed. Several war vessels were hastily loaded with supplies yesterday, and will be rushed forward at once.

The public apprehension was increased when the Government announced yesterday that it had received no word from Hakkodate, the largest city on the island, a town of about 50,000 people. It is feared the city has suffered heavily as the result of the earthquake.

Think Dentist Is Crazy.

Toronto, July 27.—Divine revelation played a prominent part in the arrest of Dr. J. R. Irish, an aged dentist with offices at 90 West Queen street, who was taken into custody yesterday morning by Detectives Murray and Wallace, charged with being insane.

Complaint was made to Acting Staff Inspector David McKinney by a patient of the dentist, who says that he went to consult him about a tooth earlier in the morning. The doctor produced a formidable array of forceps and declared that he had just had a message from God, that he must extract all the teeth, and that he intended to obey. The patient immediately declared that he, too, had received a message to the effect that he must not have them out that day, but must wait till to-morrow. This appeared to satisfy the doctor, and the extraction was postponed.

The Crop Outlook.

Winnipeg, July 27.—The crop outlook is improving, according to the report of the Canadian Northern Railway, issued yesterday, shows that many wheat fields are in good condition. In some districts rain is needed.

Ottawa, July 27.—Dr. W. Saunders, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, wires from Brandon saying the crop will be light. Some fields are well up to average, but others have short straws. Crops north of the railway are a good average, but in the south they will be light.

Walk-Out Didn't Happen.

Madrid, July 27.—This is the anniversary of the general strike at Barcelona, but the threatened walk-out did not materialize. Official despatches state that complete tranquility reigns in Barcelona. The factories are being operated as usual, and only the longshoremen quit work. Ten thousand troops occupied strategic points in the Catalonian capital.

Insurrection In Cuba.

Havana, July 27.—The Government is much alarmed over the insurrection at Elcaney, in the Province of Santiago de Cuba. Following a midnight council at the palace, troops were rushed to the disaffected district yesterday. The insurgents are reported as retreating to the hills, pursued by troops already in the province.

Says Strike Will End To-morrow.

Lindsay, July 27.—"Ita," a young girl mentalist, who has been giving clever performances in this town, has declared that the strike will be settled on Thursday and that the men will return to work.

PASTOR AND WIFE HURT

Rev. W. J. and Mrs. McCaughan Injured in Belfast Fire.

During Conflagration In Irish Hotel Former Toronto Minister and Spouse Jump From Window — Are Picked Up Unconscious and Skulls Are Found to Be Fractured—Was Formerly of Chicago.

Belfast, July 27—Fire swept through the Kelvin Hotel yesterday, burning to death three employes, while several guests received frightful injuries. Five of the guests were dangerously burned and others are in a serious condition.

Among those surviving who suffered most were Rev. William J. McCaughan, for several years pastor of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, Ont., and later of Chicago, and his wife.

The McCaughans were caught on an upper floor, and in attempting to find an exit through the hall were terribly burned. Their escape through the usual exits being cut off by the flames, the minister and his wife finally threw themselves from an upper window. Both struck the pavement with great force and when they were removed to a hospital it was found that Mr. McCaughan's skull had been fractured. Mrs. McCaughan's injuries are less serious.

Head Hit Pavement.

Kingston, July 27.—Chilton of the Ottawa postal service came here with the old boys and while in Dr. Bogart's automobile had an accident that kept him two days in the General Hospital, fearing concussion of the brain. When the auto slewed and bumped a pavement he jumped and lit on his feet, but fell, striking his head on the cement.

A sad accident occurred out at Odessa on Saturday evening, when John McEwen of Wilton, who in company with his brother, Isaac, was returning from Kingston, pitched over the rear of the wagon and broke his neck, death following instantly.

Spea Tvanoff, a Pole, working on a gravel train on the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, was run over by a handcar at Lavant. He was brought to the Hotel Dieu, and is improving.

It is said that one of the guards in the penitentiary has been suspended and that his case has gone to Ottawa.

Aeroplane Somersaulted.

New York, July 27.—After his aeroplane had turned a complete somersault, falling to the ground with him, during a flight near Garden City L.I., yesterday, George Russell picked himself up and walked from the debris without a bruise or a scratch.

Russell had made one flight in a 25-mile breeze and was rising from the ground for a second spin when the accident happened. He ran along the ground at high speed for several hundred yards, but when he undertook to rise the second time, the soft soil caught the tail of his aeroplane and caused it to swerve as an automobile skids in the mud. The aeroplane aired straight up, turned a clean "backslip" and came down on its back, with the engine on top. Russell was flung head over heels and fell in a tangled nest of snapped wires. The aeroplane was damaged badly.

Suicide at Falls.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 27.—Tired of life's struggle in solitude, Mrs. Mary Cleber, a dressmaker, with rooms in the Simmons-Baker building on Third street, threw herself into the Niagara River from the Three Sister Island at 6.15 o'clock Monday night and was speedily carried over the Horseshoe Falls. The deed was long premeditated and the woman tore herself from the arms of her life-long friend, Mrs. Herman Paylock, of 403 Ferry avenue, with the words, "Before I'll go hame I'll——"

The sentence was never finished. It was a reply to an entreaty to go home made by Mrs. Paylock as she placed her arms around the woman's waist.

Fell Into a Furnace.

St. John, July 27.—Francis Roy, aged 17, while feeding a furnace in the Nepisiquit Co.'s Shingle Mill at Bathurst, fell in and was so badly burned that he died before being rescued.

Michael Driscoll of Hanwell dropped dead as a result of over-exertion during a day of extreme heat.

Miss Anne Skene, aged 62, of Pennfield, fell into the Letang River and was drowned.

Mrs. O. Martin of Waltham, Mass., while visiting her sister, Mrs. Ephraim Pine at Richibucto, was killed by lightning while washing some dishes in the pantry.

A Year for Attacking Women.

Windsor, July 27.—Joseph Williams, the negro charged with attacking two women on Glengarry avenue recently, was convicted before Judge McHugh and sentenced to spend a year in the Central Prison.

Dropped Dead.

Port Colborne, July 27.—William Mehlenbacker, aged about 45 years, hotelkeeper of Humberstone, dropped dead yesterday afternoon from heart disease. He leaves a widow and three children.

Twenty-Five Perish In Cloudburst.

Budapest, Hungary, July 27.—Twenty-five persons perished in a flood that followed a cloudburst at the Town of Dees yesterday. The damage to property and crops was heavy.

A Lesson In Anatomy.

A professor at one of our universities is very witty upon occasion.

A medical student once asked if there were not some works on anatomy more recent than those in the college library.

"Young man," said the professor, "there have not been many new bones added to the human body during the last ten years."—London Standard.

Because the native two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1911.

STOCKS TAKE BIG DIP

Heavy Selling Occurs on New York Market.

Drop In Prices Unheard of Except In Panic Times Sends Values to Low Ebb, But All Is Done In Cold Blood—Big Outside Holders Seem to Be Preparing For an Acute Strain In Coming Months.

New York, July 27.—Liquidation of stocks, while banking and financial interests refrained from offering support, played havoc with stock market values yesterday.

So rapid and comprehensive a shrinkage of prices is witnessed rarely except in periods of absolute panic. There was some selling by holders through sheer fright at the rapid melting away of values, but for the most part the selling was done in cold blood and with the systematic determination of a surgical operation.

The absence of the usual talk of embarrassments on such occasions was taken to prove the selling to come from sources outside the immediate stock market circle and to represent losses from large resources which amounted to impairment rather than wiping out of fortunes.

There was every indication to warrant the assumption that some heavy speculative accounts were in process of closing out, while, at the same time, a thorough house-cleaning was going on amongst the lenders of money on collateral looking to the weeding out of undesirable loans.

Occurrences in the immediate news were disregarded. The U. S. Steel quarterly meeting to be held after the market closed, almost dropped out of the consideration. The declaration of the regular quarterly dividend was taken for granted and the probable showing of the earnings report was discussed with only languid interest.

The money market was easy and the rate for call loans ran off to the lowest level touched in several months, while influences towards replenishment of the supply of bank cash continued actively at work.

That acute apprehension was at work was obvious, nevertheless, from the swift drop in prices to a level for which it would be necessary to go far back into the year 1908 to find any parallel at the Stock Exchange. Reading at 1.30 5-8, Union Pacific at 125 1-4, U. S. Steel at 61 1-4, and Southern Pacific at 1.03 will offer a graphic suggestion of what occurred in the day's stock market.

Even more sensational were movements in stocks which are not the favorites of the professional traders. Missouri Pacific, Southern Railway preferred, St. Louis, Southwestern preferred, Rock Island preferred, Republic Steel preferred, American Steel Foundries, Westinghouse Electric, Central Leather and others were forced down from 5 to 12 points.

There was seen in this list the evidence of a concession that hopes of increased or initiated dividends had slender foundation. The consensus clearly amounts to a determination by bankers, financiers and ruling authorities generally in finance to retrench resources and to be prepared for a strain in the coming months.

Although there was a rally during the final hour, the close was weak and unsettled. Sales totalled 1,279,339 shares and only 36 issues of the 146 in which trades were recorded failed to break to their lowest records of the year.

In the absence of any specific cause for the slump, the only explanation lies in the belief that the financial powers agreed that the situation required a drastic purging. Sales were made in consequence, at severe sacrifices. This was especially true of many stocks not of first grade, which have been lifted on speculation based on slender hopes of increased dividend returns. But no demand for such issues were found even at wide concessions.

There were no exceptions, however, to the day's weakness, and at times it appeared as if purchasing power of the market had vanished. Prices were swept downward with almost no resistance. Before the middle of the afternoon session had been reached, there was hardly a stock in the entire list that did not show losses of 2, 3 or 4 points from the closing figures of the day before.

Big Salt Plant for Sandwich.

Windsor, Ont., July 27.—A new salt company, an offshoot of the Canadian Salt Co., in which the Canadian Pacific Railroad is said to be heavily interested, will erect a mammoth salt plant in Sandwich, and have asked the Town Council to give them a fixed assessment of $35,000 for ten years, and in return the company will likely spend a quarter of a million dollars in the next five years.

May End In Fizzle.

Chicago, July 27.—So many complications have arisen in the building trades unions' fight against the machinists that threatened to spread the strike of workmen may end in a fizzle. Reports of six trades where members compose three-fourths of the work men engaged in the buildings threatened with strikes, have announced that they would not take part in the struggle.

Windsor, July 28.—Eugene Laroti, 18 years old, employed as a deckhand on the steamer City of Hamilton of the Montreal & Lake Erie Steamship Co., was drowned off Hurley's dock at Windsor Tuesday night as the boat came alongside the dock to tie up.

Aviator's Narrow Escape.

Mineole, July 28.—Joe Seymour, the noted automobile racer, had a narrow escape from death yesterday when a Curtiss biplane, in which he was flying, plunged 30 feet to the ground. The biplane was badly wrecked and Seymour bruised, but not seriously injured.

OUTLOOK UNPROMISING

Campbellton Citizens Are Becoming Disheartened.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley Has Gone to the Fire-Swept Town to Discuss Plans For the Future—$300,000 Is Urgently Needed If the People Are to Start Again on the Old Site—Outsiders Sending Bills Marked Paid.

Campbellton, N.B., July 28.—Hon. Mr. Pugsley will arrive in Campbellton to-day and will be taken through the ruins in an automobile and given an opportunity of visiting every tent in which the unfortunate people are living. He will attend a joint meeting of the Town Council and relief committee, when plans for the future will be discussed. The prospect of Government aid and of further assistance from the public is the only ray of hope for the disheartened townspeople. As the excitement wears off the people are feeling more and more discouraged, as the people of Canada do not seem to be aware of the misery they are called upon to relieve.

The first session of the Campbellton Police Court since the fire was held Tuesday in a large tent, with Judge Mathewson sitting on a rough plank supported on a couple of flour barrels.

No assignments among the ruined merchants of the town have yet been reported. This is perhaps owing to the general consideration shown by outside creditors, many of whom have sent in accounts marked "paid."

In the meantime the business men are evidently waiting for some definite assurance from the Government before preparing to start life over again on the site of the town. "It is a matter of life and death for the people, if $300,000 at least is not raised quickly," says Chairman McKenzie of the relief committee.

Mayor Murray has replied to the enquiries of the Winnipeg City Council, stating what the ruined town needs in the way of money and goods.

No Federal Grant.

Ottawa, July 28.—Hon. William Pugsley left yesterday for Campbellton, N.B., where he will meet the relief committee. It is expected that arrangements will be made to reconstruct at once the Government building and wharf. No Federal grant for the sufferers will be made.

For Peace Celebration.

Toronto, July 28.—The Centenary of Peace Celebration Association (1915), of which Col. James Mason is chairman, and R. S. Neville, K.C., secretary, has decided on the following program:

(1) A national monument to commemorate the successful defence of the British Provinces and their preservation to the British crown.

(2) A great historical pageant to be held at Toronto illustrating the history and progress of the country from the earliest times to the present day, including the following:

(a) Early life in the wilderness.
(b) The French regime.
(c) The struggle between the French and the British.
(d) The Anglo-American schism (1776).
(e) The coming of the United Empire Loyalists.
(f) The first Upper Canada Parliament in 1792.
g) The war of 1812-14.
(h) The union of the French and British provinces (1841).
(i) The federation conferences and the Confederation of Canada.
(j) The acquisition of the Northwest Territories and British Columbia with various views representing their development and history.
(k) The growth and development of the Empire.
(l) Tableaux of Empire.

Attempted to Wreck Train.

Ottawa, July 28.—Louis Richards, a man from up the Gatineau, was committed for trial in Hull yesterday on a charge of attempting to wreck on Tuesday a C.P.R. train at Burbridge station. A ladder and plank were placed across the track and Richards was caught by sectionmen immediately afterwards. It is thought his mind is unbalanced.

"Even Generals Differ."

Ottawa, July 28.—Sir Frederick Borden stated yesterday that he would not make Gen. Sir John French's report on the Canadian militia public until Sir Wilfrid Laurier's return. He indicated that the report was favorable.

"But even generals," he said, "sometimes differ."

Girl Took Poison.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 28.—Eighteen-year-old Maggie Garner is lying at the Memorial Hospital in a critical condition as the result of taking poison. On the table near the glass that had contained the poison was found a note addressed to the girl's mother, Mrs. Mary Botton, 74 Albert street, Toronto.

LIBERAL EDITOR DEAD.

John A. Ewan of The Toronto Globe Passes Away.

Toronto, July 28.—After months of suffering, John Alexander Ewan, associate editor of The Globe, died at 1.40 yesterday morning at his home, 10 Victor avenue.

Born in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1854, he came to Toronto when a boy and learned the typographical art in The Globe office. In 1879 he went on the reporting staff and later reported for The Mail and Empire at Ottawa. Then for a time he was editorial writer on The World, returning to The Globe in 1892. In 1897 he became widely known as a writer of a series of articles on life and conditions in Quebec, achieving a national reputation as war correspondent for The Globe in Cuba, and later in South Africa with the Canadian troops. He also "covered" the big Pennsylvania coal strike for his paper a score of years ago, and his last series of special articles were on the Esplanade viaduct, gleaned from a trip to the United States. He was well known at the Ottawa Parliament buildings.

JOHN A. EWAN.

Mr. Ewan was president of the Civic Guild, a member of the Canadian, National and Ontario Clubs, an ex-president of the Ward One Liberal Association and a member of St. Matthew's Church. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, a brother and two sisters, all in Toronto.

The Globe this morning says of him: "No one was so beloved by his colleagues of The Globe or by the other newspapermen throughout the Dominion, as well as an extraordinarily large circle of friends outside of newspaper work, as the late Mr. Ewan. Every newspaper man who visited Toronto in the course of his work or on pleasure bent, looked in on The Globe's associate editor for a friendly chat or exchange of opinions. To the younger newspapermen of the city he was a kindly godfather."

28,000 Wil Go Out on Strike.

Chicago, July 28.—A general strike of building trades was decided upon at yesterday's conference of thirty-seven unions, which met in a final effort to obtain a settlement with the Otis Elevator Co.

By noon to-day it is said the strike order involved 28,000 men. The carpenters' union is the only one not affected, the representatives of that union at the conference declaring against a sympathetic strike. The cause of the strike is the refusal of the Otis Elevator Co. to remove machinists from elevator construction work.

A False Alarm.

Winnipeg, July 28.—Immigration officials here issue vigorous denials of reports that settlers are returning to the United States in large numbers. J. Bruce Walker, commissioner, has official figures to show that in six months to July 1, only 261 farmers went back to the United States from Canada, and of these more than half went before May 1. Wm. J. White, superintendent, Ottawa, now here, says that offices in the United States have not been able to find traces of any movement back to the republic, as reported in certain papers there.

Barn Burned.

Pickering, July 28.—A very heavy electric storm passed over here yesterday afternoon, accompanied by heavy rain and considerable hail. Lightning struck Alexander Lawson's fine barn, about one mile east of Cherrywood. The barn, stables, sheds, and this season's crop of hay and nine pigs were burned. The loss will probably reach $3,000, insured in the Maple Leaf Insurance Co.

Two Men In Trouble.

Whitby, July 28.—Percy N. Bell and William Ney, two Toronto young men have been committed for trial on a serious charge. The complainant in the case is a young Scotch woman, Lizzie Rae, but two months in Canada. The three young people went up the Rouge River for a row on Wednesday evening and Miss Rae charges that the men criminally assaulted her.

To Fortify Entrance to Gulf of Para.

London, July 28.—In view of the recent discoveries of petroleum in Trinidad, which might be useful to the navy, and the importance which the island will acquire upon the completion of the Panama Canal, the British Government is considering the advisability of fortifying the entrance to the Gulf of Para.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL.

Coleman's Flats Beat the Grand Trunks.

A close and exciting City League game of baseball was played yesterday afternoon on the Coleman's Flats diamond, between the Coleman Flats and Grand Trunk teams. The game attracted a large number of spectators, who thoroughly enjoyed the sport. So close was the score that the game was in doubt until the last man was put out in the ninth innings. The result was a victory for the Coleman Flats team by a score of 5 to 4. In their first innings the iron horse players secured a run and Coleman Flats tied the score in their half of the third inning. In the fifth innings the G. T. R. team added two more runs to their score, blanking the Flats team in that innings. In their half of the sixth Coleman's Flats again tied the score by securing two runs. When the ninth innings was reached both teams had three runs to their credit and the crowd was at fever heat. Although a slight shower of rain was falling the game was continued. Coleman's Flats in their half of the last innings, had two players cross the plate before the third man was retired. The members of the Grand Trunk team made a desperate effort to at least tie the score and it looked very likely that they would do so. They secured one run and had another player on third base before two men had been put out. Aultin was the last man to bat but failed to make the necessary hit, being struck out. Both Gillespie pitcher for the winning team, and Sullivan for the Grand Trunks, pitched good games, and were fairly well supported in the field. Gillespie is a member of the Kingston Victorias.

Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire, filling that position most acceptably.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

G. T. R.		Coleman Flats
	Pitcher
Sullivan		Gillespie
	Catcher
G. Brown		Campbell
	1st Base
O'Neil		LaPalm
	2nd Base
Hopkins		Jarrell
	3rd Base
Smith		Orr
	Short Stop
LaFleur		Draycott
	Right Field
V. Brown		Bateson
	Centre Field
Marks		Finkle
	Left Field
Aultin		Minns

The score by innings was as follows:

Coleman's Flats—0 0 1 0 0 2 0 0 2—5
Grand Trunk — 1 0 0 2 0 0 0 0 1—4

The League Standing

The result of this match puts the Park Nine in the lead by a margin of two games won, the Ontarios, Grand Trunks and Coleman's Flats being tied for second place. There are a good many games to be played yet, however, and no one can tell what may happen before the last game has been played.

T. A. S. Beat Lonsdale team.

The T. A. S. baseball team of this city provided the big attraction at the Picnic in Marysville yesterday, when they met the famous Lonsdale team in a baseball game. The game was an excellent exhibition from every standpoint and the large crowd present were kept interested from start to finish.

Whalen and Champagne were the battery for Belleville with Hayes and Doyle working for Lonsdale. Whalen pitched a steady game throughout and the home team were unable to bunch hits off him in any one innings. He received fine support from his team. Hayes pitched a good game for Lonsdale, but the T. A. S. solved his delivery when hits meant runs His support was none too good at times, some easy flies being misjudged by the outfielders.

MINERS ARE HOMELESS.

Forest Fires Around Nelson, B.C., Wipe Out Mine Houses.

Nelson, B.C., July 20.—Bush fires, which on Saturday night were believed to be under control, have been blazing with terrible ferocity, causing at least four deaths and enormous damage to property. The most serious loss is reported from Kaslo distdict. The Towns of Whitewater is blotted off the map. All the buildings at McGuigan have been destroyed. The Lucky Jim, Rambler and other mines have lost their buildings. Three hundred miners, with their families, have lost all their possessions. The Powers' Lumber Co. camp has been completely destroyed, with timber and cordwood, and several valuable teams that were literally roasted alive.

The Great Northern is a severe sufferer. At McGuigan ten freight cars were consumed, bridges have been burned, and at least $100,000 worth of timber belonging to the company, consumed. The Washington, Utica and Rico mines were reported safe. The dead were Charles Norman, S. Pierson of Sandon; George Chisly and David Patterson. Edward Lucas is missing. The dead men took refuge in the tunnel of the Lucky Jim mine, where they were overpowered by smoke.

In response to a hurried summons for aid, rescue trains were despatched from Kaslo. They were unable to pass Bear Lake, but returned crowded with panic-stricken men, women and children, who are now being cared for by the citizens of Kaslo. A number are suffering from the effects of smoke, and are in hospital.

Accounts In Bad Shape.

New Westminster, B.C., July 20.—According to the report of Auditor M. B. Cotsworth, who has been investigating the finances of the city, a state of affairs of a most unsavory character has been disclosed.

"Most of the account books," said the auditor, "evidenced the lack of both system and thoroughness. Errors were frequent, but could have been avoided.

"I regret to find that the allowances of unauthorized rebates have prevailed to a very serious extent during the past six years, thus losing the city such large amounts as may be estimated in the respective departments from the following basis:

"From city taxes, $14,327; lighting, $16,115; water, $24,815; total, $55,257, after allowing for special rebates duly authorized by council.

"Part of these rebates have apparently been allowed to some ordinary taxpayers, along with the more regular schemers, through the laxity with which the city authorities and officials unwarrantably extended the dates for discounts or rebates beyond those definitely fixed by the respective bylaws which only the ratepayers by collective vote had power to alter."

Guelph Also Interested.

Guelph, July 20.—Guelph will be represented at the banquet which will be tendered Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, at Goderich, on Aug. 8.

Mr. Pugsley's visit to Goderich is to investigate conditions with respect to the harbor and to look into the request from that town for the deepening of the harbor and the enlargement of the wharf. This is a matter in which Guelph is interested as much as Goderich, said Acting Mayor Rudd, who added :"We have it from the manager of the elevator company at Goderich that if the needed improvements to the harbor at Goderich were carried out, there would be a great deal of western wheat handled there. It would mean, he tells me, that at least nine big wheat trains a day would pass over the Guelph Junction Railway from Guelph to Goderich during the wheat season. The revenue to the City of Guelph from its junction line would then be very materially increased."

Better Freight Facilities.

Ottawa, July 20.—In an effort to better their freight-handling facilities in Ottawa, the Canadian Pacific Railway yesterday accepted options on property valued approximately at $125,000 in the district bounded by Sussex and Dalhousie streets. Negotiations for the purchase of the different parcels of land have been going on for the past week, and yesterday morning the first of the options was accepted. The land-holders have all accepted the terms of the C.P.R., and the only thing that now remains to be done to complete the purchase is the signing of the deeds, which are now in the hands of the C.P.R. attorneys in this city.

Elaborate Suicide.

Port Arthur, July 20.—Tying a shotgun to a tree, attaching a string to the trigger, blindfolding himself and then pulling the trigger, sending a charge of buckshot into his breast, is how Peter Kurts committed suicide last Wednesday in a garden at the rear of his shack on his homestead in Dorion Township.

The body was found four days later by neighbors, whose suspicions were aroused by his non-appearance. His age was 20. He was unmarried and came here from Duluth.

Japanese Tariff Goes Up.

Tokio, July 20.—An Imperial decree issued yesterday fixes the date on which the new tariff will go into effect on July 17, 1911. Great Britain and ten other countries have sent notice of their intention to abrogate their existing commercial treaties with Japan on that date.

Killed While Operating Hay Fork.

Brockville, July 20.—W. D. Copeland, a farm hand employed by Wm. Paterson of Fairfield, was driving a horse operating a hay fork. The breaking of the whiffletree struck him over the heart with such force as to kill him.

Drowned In Canal Lock.

Thousands Would Do the Same.

A pretty story concerning Mr. W. H. Lever, of Sunlight soap fame, is going the rounds. At an outing of the children of Port Sunlight two little girls invited Mr. Lever to go with them on the switchback railway. Like a jovial schoolboy he consented. As they were going along one little girl said, "I've been in one of these before at New Brighton. I've got a rich aunt there." "Oh, indeed!" said Mr. Lever. "Yes," went on the little one, "she has got £200 saved up." "But you've got more than that, haven't you, Mr. Lever?" inquired the other child. "Well, you know," replied Mr. Lever, seriously, "I keep spending my money, and you can't have money if you spend it, can you?" "And are you very poor now?" asked the first tiny girl, anxiously. "Well," said Mr. Lever, "I keep spending, and whatever shall I do when all my money is gone?." Almost simultaneously his small companions shouted, "Come and live with us!" "I have received a large number of invitations in my lifetime," says Mr. Lever, "but none so dear and so sweet to me as that."

A Daring Noblewoman.

Lady Ernestine Hunt, the eldest daughter of the Marquis of Ailesbury, is the first woman to receive a commission as lieutenant in the medical branch of the territorial division of the British army. Lady Hunt is an unusual woman. She was one of the half dozen adventurous women who took part in the Jameson raid in South Africa in 1896, in connection with the ambulance department. For some years now she has divided her time between a little place she has in Ireland and her ranch in Canada. At the latter place she is an extensive breeder of horses, which are sold in London and Dublin at very remunerative prices, thus making her ranching adventure an exceedingly profitable one.

The King's Right-Hand Man.

Lord Knollys, who is to be private secretary to George V., acted in a similar capacity to the late King for nearly forty years. His lordship is the only man who can approach His Majesty at all hours and under any circumstances. Lord Knollys delights in relating an amusing malapropism in which he figured recently. A gentleman-in-waiting, who was anxious to obtain some favor from the King, but was too nervous to interview His Majesty, sought the assistance of Lord Knollys. "I do not like to speak to the King," said the applicant, "because he might not care to listen to me. It would be a different thing, though, if it were yourself, Knollys, for, of course, there is nothing of the 'gentleman' about you."

An Opalized Snake.

What is supposed to be an opalized snake has been discovered by a prospector at White Cliffs opal fields, South Australia, from whom it has been secured by an Adelaide resident, named S. Saunders. On a piece of ironstone, dark brown in color, and therefore making an excellent background to show off the precious stone, was embedded the form of a small snake or lizard of pure opal. The head and eyes are to be plainly seen. Even the scales of the back can be discerned.

Printing With Movable Types.

Lourens Coster, or Koster, claimed that he, instead of Gutenberg, invented printing with movable types. He was a chandler and innkeeper of Harlem in the fifteenth century. His claim was finally disproved to the satisfaction of almost everybody, but for a time it gave rise to a good deal of discussion and investigation.

How an Old Practice Arose.

The now greatly diminishing practice of darkening the eyes underneath comes from Arabia, it is said, and was prescribed by Mohammed for the Arabian women as a protection from the glaring desert suns.

The First Allusion to the Horse.

In that portion of Genesis which tells the story of Joseph, the famine, etc., we find the first historical allusion to the horse, and farther on in Holy Writ we read of the horses of the great and wise Solomon, which numbered 40,000—that is, if the 40,000 stalls for horses are to be taken as a criterion.

Actress and Social Worker.

Miss Tita Brand, the well-known actress, who so ably assisted her mother, Miss Marie Brema, in the production of Gluck's famous opera "Orpheus" at the Savoy, in London, recently, has interested herself largely in the social welfare of women, and five years ago started a weaving school at Westminster for the benefit of East End girls, with a view to saving some of them from the factory work which often proves so detrimental to health and character. Practically the whole of Miss Brand's dresses, as well as those worn by her mother, are made from the material woven by the girls at the Brema Looms—for such is the name Miss Brand has given to her weaving school. Miss Brand herself has a practical knowledge of weaving, although she confesses that she is quite a novice in the manipulation of the looms when compared with her "dear girls."

Maori Salutations.

The Maori natives of New Zealand have many quaint and queer customs. One of these, somewhat akin to the British habit of kissing or shaking hands, is called the "Hougi," and consists of rubbing noses, much as a pair of affectionate horses might do. This greeting is always observed at the meeting of friends. They have the faculty of calling up affecting memories at will till tears flow freely. Falling on each other's necks, their heads covered with their garments, they wail, sob and chant over the many phases of their life since the last meeting.

Cooking Utensils.

If your cooking utensils have a habit of burning or the victuals stick easily try boiling a little vinegar in them. It acts like magic, especially with heavy skillets.

A Sewing Hint.

When a bias edge is to be sewed to a straight edge put the bias edge underneath and the danger of stretching will be lessened.

The Hog Survived.

There is a case on record in which a great fall of earth at Dover, in England, buried a whole family. A hog shared the fate of the family, so far as to be buried by the same landslide. Five months and nine days passed and then the hog was discovered—alive. Presumably it had had neither food nor drink in the interval.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Way Strike Leaders Talk.

A representative of the Toronto News has been interviewing Mr. A. B. Garretson, President of the Brotherhood of the Order of Railway Conductors. Here are a few of this gentlemen's utterances, from which the public will learn what the views of the leaders of the strike are:—

"I believe it is in the power of the two striking brotherhoods to run the Grand Trunk into bankruptcy."

"Surely," said Mr. Lee, "public opinion in Canada will compel the Grand Trunk to adopt as fair an attitude towards arbitration as the strikers have. . . Grand Trunk trains are travelling with coaches half empty. Rival roads are sapping their revenues and freight lies crippled all along the lines despite what anyone says."

"The Grand Trunk is losing one million a week. The strikers have spent only five thousand dollars and have a fund of two millions. Now, which can hold out longer?"

"We could wreck this property without straining a nerve. There are but 3,000 trainmen on strike, and 110,000 fellow members in the International Trainmen's Brotherhood. Even after our immense reserve fund was consumed, we can assess every member $10 a month. But when that crisis arrives, where will the Grand Trunk be?"

This strike leader is looking to the English shareholders for redress. He says: "There is a stronger hand in the Grand Trunk than Mr. Charles M. Hays. I refer to the English shareholders, the widows and children whose money is invested. When the market price falls month after month, and the road begins to consume itself for lack of revenue, we can look for a more propitious attitude from the most obdurate general manager." The English shareholders will, no doubt, ask themselves the question whether they or the strikers own the property, or whether it makes any difference to them whether the earnings of the road go into the strikers' pockets, or whether the road earns anything or not. So far as dividends are concerned, the result would be the same to them.

Murdock and Hays are diplomats. The strike had the effect of closing the Booth's mills in Ottawa, throwing from 1,500 to 2,000 men out of employment. This was likely to tell against the strikers, so Murdock, the general of the striking army, generously offered to supply the J. R. Booth factories and mills at Ottawa with a train crew of experienced men in order that the fifteen hundred idle employes could resume work. This, no doubt, was considered a master stroke of policy; but it was met instantly by the Grand Trunk Company, which at once issued instructions to Ottawa to hand over the train upon which the Brotherhood strikers will be employed. In this way the company avoided treating with the strikers and at the same time met the Ottawa situation and deprived the striker general of his contemplated glory, and met the requirements of Mr. Booth.

Editorial Notes.

A telegram from Winnipeg of the 20th inst. says that fears of a serious rat invasion are founded on a report from La Salle, Man. At their present rate of progress, the rodents, if not effectively checked, will reach Winnipeg about the end of the present year, and they are doing terrific damage all along their line of march. It is estimated that up to the present time the pests have caused a loss to the Province of $1,500,000. Would it not be well to start a prairie fire?

The builders' laborers decided to call off the strike they have been engaged in for several weeks and to go back at the old rate of wages. If these men and others would cease to listen to the Yankee fakers who control labour organizations it would be better for themselves and families.

A workman in the carriage factory in Brockville when going to his work early in the morning discovered that spikes had been pulled out of the ties in a stretch of track about one hundred feet long east of Brockville. The discovery prevented a serious accident. How far removed from a murderer was the fiend who pulled these spikes?

Not being able to ship his lumber, Mr. Booth of Ottawa, had to stop sawing in his mills, thus throwing about 2,000 men out of employment. Fearing the effect this would have upon the strikers the "muck a muck," Vice-President Murdock, of the labor organisation, sent word to Ottawa that a crew of strikers should be chosen to man a train to handle the stuff of the Booth lumber yards and end the trouble. Talk of Czardom—in Canada to-day, under labor rulers, no man is safe to invest a dollar in any enterprise.

New York is growing. In 1898 the population was 3,200,000, and the funded debt $229,187,140. Now the population is 4,700,000, and the debt has grown to $648,878,999. At least $196,542,936 was attributable to the increases in prices, which in commodities have amounted to 43½ per cent, in the twelve years while land values in the city have grown even more than that.

Berlin, July 16.—The Roman Catholic newspaper, the Katholische Kirchen Zeitung, says that the Princess Agatha of Ratibor, who married the Kaiser's cousin, Prince Frederick William, at Potsdam Palace, on June 8, has been excommunicated for marrying a Protestant. How much harm will it do her?

Pontiac, Mich., July 16.—Frank Bevier, of Detroit, was fatally shot in the Park here last night, while in company with Mrs. Cassie Ellis, a divorced woman, formerly of Toronto. The woman is under arrest and the police are looking for Harry Paul, a former lover. It was well that Ellis whom he was to have married shortly.

In the death of Mr. John A. Ewan, associate editor of the Globe, that paper has lost a faithful servant and Canada a good citizen. An obituary notice of Mr. Ewan appears in our telegraphic columns.

Taking No Chance.

"Darling," he said, "I wish to be perfectly frank and honest with you. We are to be married a week from next Thursday. Don't you think I ought before it is forever too late to tell you the story of my past life?"

The Boston girl recoiled in horror from him, crying:

"No—no! Please don't. The arrangements for the wedding have all been completed, and I should never be able to face my friends again if it were to be nullified now!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Curls of My Childhood.

[With all due apologies.]

How dear to my heart are the curls of my childhood
When memory's working recalls them to me!
How often I've ranted and thought how I wild would Go if there were issued "no cutting" decree!
And now would I sing with great gladness forever
If only those curls were upon my bald head.
There is nothing of mine I would not deliver
If only of me no such truth could be said:
His head is as smooth as the top of a table
That's polished to shine as a light to the last.
The hair that he owns is completely a fable.
The glory that crowned him is all of the past.
Dear days of my childhood, the curls that I owned then,
The curls that have gone and have left me so sad,
Sweet curls of my childhood, the way that I moaned when
The roots all departed of curls I once had!
—Judge.

Lawyer—So you say the defendant pushed you against your will? Witness—No, sir; I said he pushed me against the door.—Baltimore American.

The Housefly.

Concerning his experience while studying the life and habits of the housefly, Henry Hill, a lecturer, states: "I wish I could explain why a fly never walks down, but always up, a clean window pane and why, on the other hand, it will walk down the slanting glass front of a picture. It is also a mystery to me why a fly always rests head downward on a wall. These are habits of the housefly which offer a field for investigation studies."

In Old Bagdad.

"Have I ever told you," asked Scheherazade, "the story of the lake which covered the site of a vanished city and of the fisherman who cast his nets therein and drew forth the former inhabitants whom enchantment had transformed into fishes?"

"By the beard of the prophet, Scheherazade," exclaimed the sultan, "you've got 'em all beat a mile on fish stories!"—Brooklyn Life.

The First Straw.

From the closet, cobweb covered,
Took he forth his old straw hat.
Scent of moth balls round it hovered,
But he did not care for that—
Brushed it off, with care caressing.
It was yellow now and sear,
But he put it on, confessing,
"New ones cost too much this year."

Down the busy street he wore it,
Mild and balmy was the day,
But the people turned and giggled.
"Pipe the lid!" he heard them say.
Red was he and sweating freely
When he reached his office door,
And the janitor that evening
Found the straw hat on the floor.
—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Not Complimentary.

"Well," said the young lawyer after he had heard his new client's story, "your case appears to be good. I think we can secure a verdict without much trouble."

"That's what I told my wife," said the man, "and yet she insisted at first that we ought to engage a first class lawyer."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Chinese Drinks.

The national drinks of China are samshu, a kind of arrack, and hocshu, which looks and tastes much like mum, a peculiar kind of beer made from wheat malt.

Drinking Water.

When very thirsty and only a small amount of water is at hand drink with a spoon or through a small hole in the cork of a canteen. It will do as much good as when taken in large mouthfuls.

Animals and Sight.

In the water fishes see only at very close range—about half their own length. This will seem perhaps unlikely to anglers, although some of them can cite instances showing that fish cannot see far. Snakes seem to have a very mediocre sense of sight. The boa, for instance, does not see at more than a quarter of its own length. Different species are limited to one-fifth or one-eighth of their length. Frogs are better off. They see at fifteen to twenty times their length.

Buying Sweethearts.

In the Kamyshin district of Russia a suitor has to buy his sweetheart from her father. A pretty girl of good family costs about $100.

The Judge's Joke.

Sheriff Guy is responsible for a court of session story. Once when the present lord justice, Clerk, was conducting a jury trial he made a small jest. The audience thought it its duty to laugh. "Silence!" shouted the macer in measured tones. "There's nothing to laugh at!"—Westminster Gazette.

A Shocking Question.

Traveling Man (to hotel clerk at counter)—Can I take a bath here?

Clerk (indignant)—No, sir; hire a room.—Lippincott's.

A DERBY JOKE.

Officers In Coster Rig Drive Four-In-Hand Barrow.

Quite a large number of people who seldom attend any other race meeting make it a rule never to miss a Derby, and one of their principal delights is the journey down the road. Given fine weather—and this year they were in luck's way in this direction—the Epsom road has many charms at this time of the year, and every description of vehicle is to be seen wending its way to the at ordinary times sleepy town of Epsom, which twice a year awakens from its lethargy and is for a few days all bustle and excitement. Motors and taxis of every description, smart four-in-hands, the sprightly quick-trotting horses of prosperous tradesmen, wagonettes, and the coster in his humble donkey barrow—all proceeded in one direction, and their occupants had all one object in view. They were out for enjoyment, and intended to make the most of their day. Quite the most picturesque turn-out this year left the neighborhood of Victoria at nine o'clock. People in the vicinity of the Grosvenor Hotel were astonished to see drawn up at the portico an ordinary costermonger's barrow capable of seating four persons, and in the shafts were a grey and a brown donkey. The shafts had been lengthened by the addition of an iron bar, to which were hitched the leaders, two more grey donkeys, making four in all. It was a very smart coster turnout, real four-in-hand harness, and plenty of flowers. Whilst the crowd stood gaping at the sight two smart-looking costers emerged from the hotel, peak caps over the eyes, jerseys, pearlies, blue chins, and slouching gait, and all. They were the real thing, and the crowd laughed and cheered as they drove off along Victoria street and over Westminster Bridge. Then the secret came out. It was a huge Derby Day joke. Two subalterns in a famous cavalry regiment had been challenged by their brother officers, and the tempting offer of 20 to 1 to drive a four-in-hand coster's barrow from London to Epsom, the drivers to be arrayed in coster's attire. The challenge was accepted, and as everything in the way of dress had to be technically correct, a visit was paid to a well-known theatrical costumier, who certainly had succeeded in effecting his part uncommonly well. The bet stipulated that the party should drive all the way, and pull up on some prominent position on the Derby course.

Unique Postage Stamps.

Reference has frequently been made to the King's ardor as a stamp-collector, and now the appointment of Earl Carrington as Lord Great Chamberlain recalls the fact, almost unique, that Lord Carrington's head appears on a postage-stamp. Records contain only one other instance, and that is the case—a classic among collectors—of O'Connel, the governor of New Brunswick. He was not what would be termed, even in flattery, an Adonis, but he placed his effigy upon a postage stamp. The result was disastrous to O'Connel. The stamps were immediately recalled and so was the governor. To-day, however, O'Connel is popular with collectors, for the stamp is of great rarity. Keen philatelists are always on the look-out for the Mafeking siege stamps, which bear the head of Major Baden-Powell. They were only issued to meet an emergency, but the Carrington stamp is Queensland's compliment to a popular governor.

Comet's Evil Influence.

An authentic record of the bad luck supposed to be brought about by the comet is contained in the old parish register of Alstonfield, Staffordshire, England, in which is a notice concerning a comet which was visible during the seventeenth century. The notice runs as follows:

"A very strange and fiery Meteor, in form like a Sword, appeared north-west by west in December, 1680, and continued about six weeks, after which ensued a tedious and long drought, which began April the 10th, 1681, and continued till June the 20th of the same year, which procured many pestilentious disease, as agues, strong fleavours, small-pox, of which many died in ye Countrey, chifely in great cities and towns corporate."

The Careful Caddie.

Miss Nancy Price, the popular English actress, is credited with the following story of the careful caddie. She was playing golf some time ago, on links where there was a caddie of about twenty-two years of age, who always wore a cap with large flaps which came down over his ears, as he was a victim to chapped ears in cold weather. One bitter day in mid-winter Miss Price saw him without the ear-flaps down, and asked him if his ears were better. "They're not better. They're as bad as ever they were. I've never had my ear-flaps down since the accident." "What accident?" queried Miss Price. "Well, you see, miss, a gent arst me once if I'd 'ave a drink, and I didn't 'ear 'im!"

A Fine Bridge Hand.

An extraordinary hand at bridge is reported by Miss Minnie Anray Jones, of Clifton, Eng. At a final meeting of a local bridge club the declaration was left, and dummy declared hearts with thirteen. The cards were not new, and had been made and cut, but had not been used, as the rubber had only just begun, this being the second deal. There were eight players in the room to witness. The other three hands were not remarkable, a suit of six diamonds, headed by ace, knave, being the only long suit.

What Could She Mean?

"Your little birdie has been very, very ill," she wrote to the young man. "It is some sort of nervous trouble, and the doctors said I must have perfect rest and quiet and that I must think of nothing. And all the time, dear Gussy, I thought constantly of you."

The young man read it over, and then read it through very slowly, and put it in his pocket, and went out under the silent stars, and kept thinking, and thinking, and thinking.

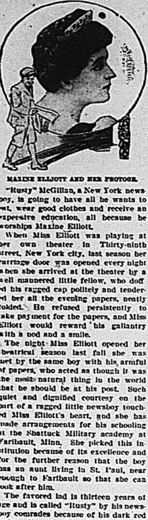
Woman's World

Maxine Elliott's Protege—Newsboy Whom She Will Educate.



MAXINE ELLIOTT AND HER PROTOGE.

"Rusty" McGillan, a New York newsboy, is going to have all he wants to eat, wear good clothes and receive an expensive education, all because he worships Maxine Elliott.

When Miss Elliott was playing at her own theater in Thirty-ninth street, New York city, last season her carriage door was opened every night when she arrived at the theater by a well mannered little fellow, who doffed his ragged cap politely and tendered her all the evening papers, neatly folded. He refused persistently to take payment for the papers, and Miss Elliott would reward his gallantry with a nod and a smile.

The night Miss Elliott opened her theatrical season last fall she was met by the same boy with his armful of papers, who acted as though it was the most natural thing in the world that he should be at his post. Such quiet and dignified courtesy on the part of a ragged little newsboy touched Miss Elliott's heart, and she has made arrangements for his schooling at the Shattuck Military academy at Faribault, Minn. She picked this institution because of its excellence and for the further reason that the boy has an aunt living in St. Paul, near enough to Faribault so that she can look after him.

The favored lad is thirteen years of age and is called "Rusty" by his newsboy comrades because of his dark red locks. He was born in Boston and came to New York city two years ago upon the death of his mother.

Preventing Colds In Spring.

Many a severe cold could be avoided, says Margaret Mixture, at this season if on coming indoors a woman would drink a cup of hot milk.

The object in drinking this is to start the blood circulating after it has become sluggish from the cold. Warm food will draw the blood to the stomach and send it later through its proper channels if digestion is what it should be. Milk is nourishing and at the same time soothing to nerves which have been overstimulated by cold. If a little salt is added the drink may be less unpalatable for those who do not care for milk.

To think that any kind of food may be eaten when one is cold is a mistake, for the digestive organs are not in normal condition at such a time and will not do their work properly. Therefore discretion should be exercised, and if milk is not taken soup is an excellent substitute. The object is to take food that is easy to assimilate and warm.

Few persons realize that when the body is cold vitality is lowered and that only those who are very strong should rely wholly upon reaction for warmth. Any one who is not strong is weakened by such reaction, and it is to reduce this strain that immediate action should be taken to restore warmth.

Colds which make one feel ill are likely to be caught when a person is fatigued, as vitality is then too low to throw off the chill and illness may result. Indigestion is another cause of cold, and it is always well to resort to a good cathartic when the first symptoms of cold are noticed.

Such attacks as the ones mentioned are caused by germs, as a rule, and if the liver is made to perform its functions there is a good chance of the germs being thrown off. The dose should be taken at night, and if possible the patient should stay in bed on the following day. This is a luxury many cannot take, and to these extra precautions, such as eating simple food and protecting the feet from dampness and cold, should be taken.

Visiting Dressmaker.

When the visiting dressmaker comes to you remember that she is not a machine, capable of grinding out work with no wear upon her being. Insist upon the worker taking a rest two or three times a day. Take up to the sewing room a plate of fruit during a short intermission. Ask her to leave the scene of hostilities and walk with you to the end of the garden or street.

Make life worth living for this woman, whose lot is not the easiest. Why, the fact that you hire her to come implies that you cannot stand the pressure and strain of a sewing siege. The visiting dressmaker has feelings and is entitled to a respectable and civil consideration of them. It is an evidence of a lack of good breeding to disregard the rights of a woman who is giving you the full value of her monetary compensation. It is always gratifying to know that you have lightened a burden by a little kind thoughtfulness.

BIRTH OF A VOLCANO.

Nature's Process In Forming a Mountain of Lava.

THE FORCE OF AN ERUPTION.

Upheaval That Destroyed the East Indian Island of Krakatoa In 1883 Propelled an Air Wave Three and a Half Times Round the Earth.

Though volcanoes are often spoken of as burning mountains, they do not burn at all, nor, in the proper sense of the word, are they mountains at all. A volcano is really a flaw in the crust of the earth through which the fierce glowing heat lying below the crust has managed to burst a hole. Through this hole great floods of melted rock spout up. Some volcanoes work at intervals; some are in eruption all the time.

As the melted rock jets up into the air and falls it naturally builds itself into a mountain round the hole. The next eruption has to burst its way through the heart of that mountain. The chimney it spouts through is usually called "the pipe."

Sometimes an eruption is so fierce that when the lava (another name for melted rock) spouts out it is burst into bits. When it falls it is sometimes as fine as dust, sometimes the size of cinders. Most volcanoes, indeed, are simply gigantic cinder heaps.

When the force is not so great the lava in the pipe simply bubbles over and flows down the sides of the mountain, exactly as porridge boils over the edge of a pot. As lava is liquid, the slope of a lava volcano (or lava cone, as it is usually called) is always very gentle. Falling cinders, on the other hand, pile themselves up quite steeply. A lava cone, then, is always less steep than a cinder cone.

And a volcano never burns. What looks like flame is only the glow of the white hot lava on the clouds of steam. The more steam there is forcing its way up the pipe the more the lava bubbles, just as in the case of the porridge. If the pressure of steam is very great, then you have the lava blown to bits and falling as cinders, while the mighty clouds of steam rise high above the mountain. It is this steam that is mistaken for smoke.

Sometimes a cone sends out lava and cinders alternately, so that you have a great mountain of cinders bound together by layers and walls of lava.

These walls of lava are due to the fact that sometimes more lava wants to come up the pipe than the pipe will hold, so the lava bursts its way out through weak spots in the sides of the mountain. Etna has no fewer than 700 of these cones on its slopes. One of them, Monte Rossi, is a hill in itself, being 450 feet high. Indeed, a model of Etna looks as if it were covered with pimples.

When Etna is really roused it is far more dangerous than Vesuvius. In 1169 it nearly destroyed the city of Catania, killing 15,000 people. In 1669 it found its pipe so inconveniently small that it had to crack one of its sides. This crack was no less than twelve miles long. At the bottom white hot lava could dimly be seen through the clouds of steam. In 1755 millions of gallons of boiling water were shot out of the Val del Bove, which is a great circular pit on the slope of the mountain, four or five miles in diameter, its sides being cliffs nearly a mile high in places.

The greatest volcanic eruption ever known took place in the East Indies in 1883. The story makes almost incredible reading. The volcanic island of Krakatoa commenced proceedings by blowing half of itself into thin air. From the opening no less than a cubic mile of rock was shot out.

A column of steam and lava dust rose into the air to a height six times as great as that of Mount Everest. It spread and spread till for hundreds of miles around the air was black as midnight. Sounds as of distant cannonading were heard 2,000 miles off.

Sea waves fifty feet high killed 35,000 people and were felt as far off as California. Instead of an island half a mile high there was now a hole a quarter of a mile deep. The shock of the eruption sent air waves three and a half times around the earth. The fine dust in the upper atmosphere added for months afterward a strange glow to the sunsets in England and did not vanish completely for three years.

The exact cause of the eruptions is not known for certain. A popular theory is that they are caused by water getting in to the white hot mass which is supposed to lie under the outer crust of the earth. And it is certainly a fact that practically all volcanoes are close to the edge of the sea.

Some lava flows slowly, some quickly. Vesuvius in 1805 sent out a lava stream that in four minutes had reached a spot four miles off. The size of a lava stream is sometimes gigantic. In 1783 Skaptar Jokull in Iceland emitted two streams at one time. One was forty miles long by seven miles broad, the other fifty miles by fifteen. The average depth of both was about a hundred feet.

Lava cools very, very slowly, except on the surface, which cools at once. It is an extremely bad conductor of heat. Twenty years after a stream of lava was sent out from Jorullo, in Mexico, tourists could light their cigars through chinks in the surface, and the surface had been cold for twenty years. In 1828 a layer of snow many feet thick was found under a layer of Vesuvian lava. It was still unmelted and is probably there still. — Pearson's Weekly.

MYSTERIOUS CONVENT

SISTERHOOD OF THE HOLY FACE IS NOW A MEMORY.

Order of Devoted Women In Montreal Who Lived and Practiced Their Holy Exercises In Heart of Business Section Have Disappeared—Tradition Says They Slept In Coffins With a Crucifix Before Them.

The evening of Good Friday is the time set apart in the great Church of Notre Dame, Montreal, for the Adoration of the Holy Face.

"La Sainte Face," a ceremony which consists chiefly of visiting the Stations of the Cross, with a period for meditation at each spot, hallowed in the imagination by the sufferings endured by the Saviour in the course of his agonized journey.

And when, the ceremony finished year after year, the faithful have wended their way thoughtfully homeward, they have asked one another, quietly and solemnly, "And what has become of the Convent of that other Holy Face, and what of the little nuns that inhabited it?"

For, not more than a decade ago, there was such a convent right in the heart of the city, inhabited by little nuns, who lived as austere a life as the Trappists at Oka, and, like so many other brave and noble religieuses prayed for those in the great world who did not pray for themselves.

It used to be known as the Mysterious Convent and was situated on the west side of Amherst street, just below St. Catherine.

The block containing the building with its big gateway, like a Porte Cochere, in the centre, is there still, but its appearance is changed, and one might almost say, like in so many similar cases in the West End where churches have been turned into stores and theatres, the money-changers have entered the temple.

Stores and business places are occupying the lower part of the block now, but the gilded mortar which was there when the convent existed, the sign of the old-fashioned physician, is still to be seen in front, and in the rear there are the ruins of the once-beautiful convent garden, with here and there in corners the battered holy statues that adorned it.

That little garden was the only place of recreation the little nuns had; and there they walked and meditated. This exercise and their walk to early Mass at St. James Church, on the corner of St. Denis and St. Catherine streets, were their only outings.

As a rule, they wore a black habit, with a small white frill projecting from that part which framed the face; on feasts days it was quite a treat to see them walk to and from the church in their special habit with the crimson front, upon which the face of the Saviour was painted.

Tradition has it that they slept in coffins, which were mounted on trestles, and contained a pillow and a blanket, and that the only other furniture of their rooms or cells consisted of a little table with a crucifix and a death's head.

At least one such cell existed, furnished in exactly that manner, but whether they actually slept in the coffin is a matter of uncertainty in view of statements made, by those who should know, at the present day. Suffice it that ten years ago some of the little nuns told the numerous faithful who were visitors to the strange convent that they did.

The rigor of their devotions is not however, to be doubted even at the present time.

They spent seven and a half hours at prayer each day. They retired to sleep at half-past eight, and arose at midnight. Then, like the Trappists, who, however, do not sleep again, they devoted an hour and a half, when all the busy world was asleep, to more religious exercises, after which they retired once more, to rise again for the spiritual and mundane tasks of the day, at five o'clock.

On Fridays they scourged one another with the same knotted scourges of many lashes which the Trappists use in their devotional system.

And, in reading this, remember that when the order was, so to speak, at the height of its prosperity, the Sister Superior was apparently not much more than twenty-five years old, and the little nuns ranged in age all the way down from twenty to fifteen.

All this may seem strange to those who pride themselves on being worldly wise, the scoffers, and cynics; but careful investigations made at that time showed that the matter was tragically real to those little women.

They believed themselves called to the work they were doing; they believed that they were serving the Lord in a fashion he could not fail to approve of, and many are the faithful to be found to-day who will tell you that not one, but several miraculous cures, were effected through their piety and good works.

For some years they quietly and peacefully went their devotional way, and then the fame of their piety, and the reported cures which had been wrought through their prayers, brought unpleasant notoriety.

They were never officially recognized as a religious order by the heads of the Church. As the then Sister Superior said:

"We are only verbally recognized, but God is good and we must have patience. We have only been founded a few years, and the little sisters of St. Joseph were founded forty-six years before they were recognized."

For a while after that the newspapers throughout Canada and the United States published sensational accounts of the Little Convent and the Little Sisters.

Then suddenly it was stated that some of them had gone to form a branch convent at Bideford, Maine; still later, that the others had gone up North to establish a convent like the Trappist Monastery, and after that came oblivion, as it were.

During its actual existence the convent was called the Mysterious Convent.

The Broken Trust

doubted? What have I to do with Paul Lynne?"

"That remains to be seen," said Mr. Grey; "if you are really the Alan Wayne who lived at Wabash you will be able to answer certain questions. In the first place, was your portrait ever taken there; and if so, by whom and on what occasion? Boys or men seldom forget their first portraits."

He did not know what to answer; one mistaken reply might be fatal.

"Really, gentlemen, I must deny your right to question me thus. I do not understand your proceedings; why have you suddenly taken up so cruel and false a doubt of me?"

"I will tell you," said Captain Chandos; "because at this moment I hold in my hands a certain proof of your imposture. Others have doubted you from the first — I never did. I tell you quite honestly, there is a grave suspicion, amounting to certainty, that you are Paul Lynne and not Alan Wayne — the doubt is only known to us. Let the scandal — if it be one — die amongst ourselves. You cannot refuse now to answer the few questions."

"I will answer any questions you like to ask," said Sir Alan, seeing he could no longer with decency refuse.

"Was your portrait ever taken at Wabash?" asked Mr. Grey again.

"I really do not remember," he replied.

"I have some dim recollection of Mr. Westerne here saying something about it once."

The artist's kindly face grew bright and joyous.

"He remembers," he cried; "he remembers; he will tell us all about it."

Even Sir Alan was touched by the cry.

"Indeed, I cannot, my dear old friend," he replied. "I never had a good memory. I have some hazy, indistinct recollection, but nothing more."

"Acknowledging such a picture was taken, should you recognize your own face?" said Captain Chandos.

"Can there be any doubt of that?" asked Sir Alan trying to smile.

Then suddenly raising a small, square picture from the ground, Vivien held it before him.

Had the dead risen? The face that smiled upon the canvas was the same he covered with the white cloth in the hut near O'ana, it was the same thoughtful spiritual brow, the same clear, calm features; the eyes smiled as though they recognized him, the lips seemed about to speak.

They who watched saw a dark shadow come into his eyes, his lips quiver, his hands tremble, for how could he gaze unmoved into the face of Alan Wayne?

"Gentlemen," said Captain Chandos "in the cause of justice look from this pictured face to that of the living and tell me if there is the slightest resemblance?"

They looked long and earnestly. Sir Alan bore the scrutiny well only that his eyes fell before the level glances turned upon him.

The eyes in the picture were blue Sir Alan's were black. The hair in the picture light brown, with beautifully waving lines. Sir Alan's dark as night. Look, turn, criticise as they would, there was no possible way of finding out the least resemblance, and they all said so.

"What says the artist?" asked Lord Damar.

"I swear, my lord, that this is the portrait of Alan Wayne, son of Elgar Wayne, who lived near me at Wabash. I swear that I painted it

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

THE BASTILLE.

Rise and the Fall of the Famous State Prison of France.

The famous French prison known as the Bastille was started on April 22, 1356, by order of Charles V. The Bastille turned out to be an important structure in history, and its fall on July 15, 1789, marked the beginning of the French Revolution. It was originally intended by Charles as a defense against the English. When it came to be used as a state prison it was provided with vast bulwarks and ditches. The Bastille had four towers of five stories each on each of its large sides. It was partly in these towers and partly in underground cellars that the prisoners were situated. It was capable of containing from seventy to eighty prisoners, a number frequently reached during the reigns of Louis XIV. and Louis XV., the majority of them being persons of the higher ranks. In its site now stands the Column of July, erected in memory of the patriots of 1789 and 1830.

The name bastille, or bastel, in ancient times was given to any kind of structure calculated to withstand a military force, and thus, formerly in England and on the borders of Scotland, the term bastel house was usually applied to places of strength and fancied security. The French Bastille was originally called the Bastille St. Antoine.

Stephen Marcel, provost of the merchants, undertook the erection of the French Bastille. The building was enlarged in 1369 by Hugh Aubnot, provost of Paris under Charles V. He added two towers, which, being placed opposite to those already existing on each side of the gate, made of the Bastille a square fort, with a tower at each of the four angles.

After the death of Charles V., Aubriot, who had many enemies, was prosecuted for alleged crimes and was condemned to perpetual confinement in the Bastille, of which, according to some historians, he was the first prisoner. After some time he was removed thence to Fort l'Eveque, another prison, from which he was liberated in 1381 by the insurrection of the Maillotins.

After this insurrection, in 1382, the young king, Charles VI., still further enlarged the Bastille by adding four towers to it, each 100 feet high, thus giving it, instead of the square form it originally possessed, the shape of an oblong or parallelogram. To increase its strength the Bastille was surrounded by a ditch 25 feet deep and 120 feet wide. The road which formerly passed through it was turned to one side.

The Bastille from its commanding position was closely connected with important affairs in French history and was occupied by the Guises in 1588, by Charles IV. in 1584, the Frondeurs in 1649 and Conde in 1652.

It was natural, therefore, that the Bastille should be one of the first objects of attack at the outbreak of the Revolution. In July 15, 1798, the populace of Paris, recruited chiefly from the Faubourg St. Antoine, attacked the fortress and stormed it after a half-hearted resistance by the governor, De Launay, and a handful of Swiss. The governor and seven of his men were killed, the archives of the prison scattered, and the prisoners, seven in number, were carried through the streets and hailed as victims of tyranny and martyrs in the people's cause. The building itself was torn down. The anniversary of the taking of the Bastille is celebrated every year as the national holiday of France.

A Tale of Russian Wolves.

A man was telling about an exciting experience in Russia. His sleigh was pursued over the frozen wastes by a pack of at least a dozen famished wolves. He arose and shot the foremost one, and the others stopped to devour it. But they soon caught up with him, and he shot another, which was in turn devoured. This was repeated until the last famished wolf was almost upon him with yearning jaws when—

"Say, partner," broke in one of the listeners, "according to your reckoning, that last famished wolf must have had the other eleven inside of him."

"Well, come to think it over," said the story teller, "maybe he wasn't so darned famished, after all!"

Long Distance Courtships.

Sketching one day in Burma, an English artist noticed a man a little distance off glaring fiercely straight ahead at him at some object he could not see from his position. The man sat with the same fixed glare the whole afternoon and was at it again next morning. The artist had the curiosity to ask an English visitor what it meant. The reply was, "Oh, he is in love!" And it was explained that this was their method of courtship. The object of the man's attentive gaze was a girl in a neighboring bazaar. When a young man falls in love he has to seat himself at a certain distance from his adored one and wait for her to do the rest. If she looks in his direction once or twice on the first or second day he is wildly encouraged; and if on the third day she nods to him and smiles it is time to go to the parents with reference to the marriage settlements.

ABOUT SIR THOMAS.

How the Great Irish Yachtsman Made His Money.

Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, Bart., K.C.V.O., one of Britain's most noted merchant princes, is widely known also as a practical philanthropist. But most of all is Sir Thomas popular and famous for his plucky attempts to win that much coveted of yachting trophies, the America Cup.

So far, success has not rewarded his ambitious and costly endeavors in that direction, but the many admirers of Sir Thomas join with him in the hope that he may yet experience the joy of "lifting that cup" for which he has hitherto challenged in vain. His victory would be indeed popular on both sides of the Atlantic. No man has displayed greater enterprise and ardor combined in the fascinating pursuit of yachtsmanship; no truer sportsman ever trod deck or stood at the helm than the man who owned the Erin and the Shamrocks, and who belongs to most of the crack yacht clubs in his native isles, as well as to that of New York.

Interested in aviation and keen on motoring, the chief recreation of Sir Thomas Lipton's strenuous business life has been sailing under "white wings." For the sea and yachting he has a perfect passion.

But first he earned the right and the wherewithal to engage to his heart's delight in his aquatic hobby by diligence in business.

For Sir Thomas has been the architect and builder of the huge fortune which he now enjoys.

Born in Glasgow in 1850, of parents who had migrated thither from the North of Ireland, with but little of worldly gear, he quite early in life created a thriving business out of nothing in a "mean street" of the city of good St. Mungo.

A glutton for work from the first, he displayed a perfect genius for shopkeeping. His motto was to get the best only of everything he had to sell, and to force it under the eyes of buyers. A born advertiser, the people who passed his stores were attracted by the goods cunningly displayed, in the beginning by his own hands, and later on under his watchful oversight. They became purchasers in steadily increasing numbers, and young Lipton prospered exceedingly.

His business, in course of time, expanded enormously; and then to supply his ever-lengthening provision counters Thomas Lipton became breeder, planter, and manufacturer. To and fro he went to America, and to and fro again, to make sure of steady and sufficient streams of trading-stock, raised under his own control.

Then he made Ceylon his tea-garden; soon thereafter transferring his commercial headquarters to London.

He started biscuit factories in Scotland, fruit farms down in Kent, mammoth meat stores in the United States, and markets in many different towns all over the British Isles.

Sir Thomas Lipton is, in his modest way, proud of being a self-made man, and often gloried in his great central warehouses in the City Road, London, in recalling the time when he, perforce, had to toil something like seventeen hours a day. From the London centre he and his staff are directly in communication with the main branches of the business in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Dublin.

Cheery and full of humor always, Sir Thomas is instinct with kindly charity. One outcome of this was his founding of the Alexandra Trust for providing the poor with cheap wholesome meals.

Peculiarities of the Baronetage.

One of the peculiarities of the baronetage is that while the precedence of a baronet is before all knights save Knights of the Garter, that of his wife is before the wives of all knights; and his eldest son and daughters rank before the children of all knights. So that if there were another instance of a K.G. who had no higher title, all baronets' wives would precede his wife and the eldest sons and all the daughters of baronets would precede his children.

Another curious thing is that a baronet's patent virtually creates his wife a baronetess in her own right. She is a lady "for and during her natural life," whereas the style and precedence of peers' wives continues only during their widowhood.

A baronet's wife's style title is "lady, madame, or dame"; and I think that the strict consequence of the terms of a baronet's patent is that the widow of Sir A.B. marrying Mr. C. could call herself Lady C. with perfect legal impunity—that is, instead of calling themselves Mr. C. and Lady B. she and her second husband could be announced as Mr. and Lady C. This curious departure from invariable custom has passed almost without notice, but there is no doubt that every baronet's patent creates two life-holders of the dignity.—The Graphic.

Narrow Escapes.

Before entering the 13th Light Dragoons in 1855, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who kept his seventy-second birthday the other day, spent three years in the navy. He served in the Crimea with the Naval Brigade, and was severely wounded while carrying a scaling ladder at the Redan. On another occasion, in the same campaign, his cap was removed from his head by a chip from a shell; while once he was nearly frozen to death when trying to snatch a few hours' sleep. His V.C. was the reward for personal bravery displayed while hunting down the rebels in the Sironga jungles in 1859.

Royal Lady Doctors.

Seeing that the Queen of the Belgians is the only royal lady who can boast of the degree of M.D. we are proud to think that Queen Alexandra has not escaped doctorial distinction. As far back as 1885 the Queen Mother received the degree in music from the Royal University of Ireland. Queen Mary, too, has a similar degree, but appropriately enough from the University of Wales. Perhaps the most curious doctorate in the royal family is the Duke of Connaught's diploma in literature, which his Royal Highness received from the University of the Punjab.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

ARTIST HAS NO LIMBS

C. J. SHIRLEY SHOOTS, RIDES, AND PLAYS CRICKET.

Englishman, Now In London, Was Born Without Arms or Legs and For Thirty Years Has Been Fighting a Hard Battle to Keep Abreast of His Fellows—He Has Even Won Races as an Amateur Jockey.

Born without arms and legs. Can anyone imagine a greater handicap in life? To be pitted in the struggle for existence against millions of men who, even though sound in body and limb, find it difficult to gain a livelihood. Can anything seem more hopeless? And yet optimism is the keynote of the character of Mr. Cecil J. Shirley, a man who for thirty years has been bravely fighting the battle of life against heavy odds.

"It is true," he remarked to an interviewer, "that lately I have met with some misfortunes. They commenced in South Africa, where a man with whom I had entered into partnership on a farm played me false and left me stranded. I found it necessary to come to England again, and have since been endeavoring to sell my pictures. I must confess I have not so far met with much success in that direction, but I have great hopes of my book, which gives the story of my life."

And never was a more absorbing story unfolded. Mr. Shirley's career has been as varied as it is interesting. For several years he worked in South Africa and Australia on farms and sheep stations, gaining practical knowledge which he hopes to put to good use in the future; for it is his ambition to obtain sufficient money to purchase a small holding in England, and live the quiet, happy life of a farmer.

Many were Mr. Shirley's adventures in the backblocks of Australia and amongst the Boers of South Africa. He learnt the Dutch language, lived amongst the men who fought against us during the South African war, interviewed President Kruger, acted as clerk, overseer, storekeeper, and in other capacities on farms, rode thousands of miles along through the bush—in a word, he followed the rough life of the thousands of Englishmen who have gone out to the colonies and earned their living by strenuous labor.

"But surely, Mr. Shirley," I remarked, as he talked of his colonial experiences, "you found the work difficult?"

"Not so much as you might imagine. In the first place, I have always endeavored, as far as possible, to avoid thinking of my physical deformities, and I have so accustomed myself to using the stumps of my arms as hands that what may seem to you almost impossible feats are really quite easy. For instance, you see I can fill my pipe,"—and Mr. Shirley picked his pouch off the table with his arms, opened it, rubbed some tobacco, and, placing the latter in a little pile on the table, filled his pipe as neatly as any other man could do. Then he took up a box of matches, pushed it open with the stem of his pipe, shook out a match, and struck it by holding the box firmly on the table with the pipe pressed on it and gripping the match between his two arms.

It is equally amazing to see Mr. Shirley using the typewriter with the aid of a pencil, or writing a note in ordinary handwriting—or, rather, armwriting—the legibility of which, by the way, would be a credit to a Civil Service clerk. A splendid horseman, Mr. Shirley is never so happy as when he can go for a ride, and the most mettlesome steed has no terrors for him. As a matter of fact, Mr. Shirley won several horse-races in the colonies and carried off one or two prizes for rifle-shooting. And he demonstrated to the reporter in a game of billiards that it is not always necessary to have hands in order to make runs of fifteen or twenty.

It is his pictures, however, which illustrate more forcibly than anything else the astonishing manner in which Mr. Shirley has overcome his great deformity. He paints in oils and water color, and, in addition, does a great deal of black-and-white work.

"I can hold my brush or pencil," he remarked, "as delicately between the two stumps of my arms as you can between your thumb and finger. I am a keen student of entomology and botany, and delight in painting pictures of insects, butterflies, leaves and flowers. Here are some specimens of my work," and Mr. Shirley brought out for my inspection some wonderful paintings of butterflies, insects and leaves, every vein and tiny detail of which was faithfully depicted.

"Would it not be helpful, Mr. Shirley, if you had artificial forearms?"

"I do not think so. In fact, they would probably prove cumbersome to me now. I find I can accomplish all I require to do, even to shaving, putting my collar on, and tying my tie with the stumps of my arms. Of course, it is necessary for me to have artificial legs.

"I am very fond of a long walk. Of course, I cannot run," he added, laughing; "and that reminds me of a rather amusing incident which occurred to me in Cape Town. One day I was walking in the main street, when there was a sudden shout of 'Mad dog!' and everybody scooted as fast as they could. Unfortunately I could not get out of the way quick enough, the dog gripped my leg. But he was a sadly disappointed dog, for he must have broken one or two teeth on the artificial calf, while the kick which I gave him with the other foot could not have been altogether pleasant.

"The astonishment of the people when they saw the animal run away howling was almost as amusing as that of the Cape Town policeman who rushed to my rescue when I was knocked down by a vehicle which passed over my legs. He stood gaping with astonishment when, instead of collapsing, I got up on the remains of my legs and asked him to be kind enough to help me to the nearest [illegible]

THE INDIAN'S PASSING

FEW POOR THOUSANDS ARE ALL THAT ARE LEFT.

The Wilds of the Northwest and British Columbia Make Up a Large Part of the Aboriginal Population —Reserves Are Usually Much Larger Than Their Inhabitants Would Justify—Victims of Tuberculosis.

Three centuries ago the Indian population of Canada, though never dense, was considerable enough to present a very real hindrance in the settlement of the country by Europeans, writes Emily P. Weaver in London Graphic. What the troops of savages lacked in numbers they made up in extraordinary mobility, and in ferocity weakened by no sentiment of pity even for the most helpless of noncombatants. Thus to the pioneers it seemed that their name was "Legion." Yet neither their fighting qualities nor their almost unexampled powers of endurance could save them from the fate that awaits those unable to readjust themselves to new conditions. The white man's firearms and "firewater" hastened the destruction begun by their own fearful feuds, and to-day there are in the Dominion only 111,043 Indians.

Nevertheless, taking the Canadian Indians as a whole, their numbers are not now decreasing. The latest census shows some excess of births over deaths, and a somewhat larger general increase accounted for in part by immigration, and additions to the tribes by marriages. On the other hand, besides the Indians so-called, there are in Canada many half-breeds. There are also others, of mixed blood, who have been absorbed in the white population.

The few poor thousands of Indians, representing the savage hordes of old time are divided into a multiplicity of tribes speaking different languages, such as the Micmacs of the east, the Six Nation Indians of Ontario (descended from the redoubtable Iroquois, who proved such a scourge to the early French settlers) and the Crees and Blackfoot Indians of the western plains.

As might be expected, the vast wild province of British Columbia contains more than a fifth of the total Indian population of the Dominion, but (what at first sight is more surprising) the old long-settled province of Ontario contains nearly as many. The explanation is that immediately after the American Revolution large "reserves" were set apart in the newly organized province (then called Upper Canada) for the Indians who had proved loyal. They were not permitted to alienate these lands, or there is little doubt that they would have been despoiled of them long ago, for they have never been a provident people.

The reserves are often of great extent. The Six Nation Reserve on the Grand River, near Brantford (with a population of 4,275 persons), consists of about 444,000 acres, whilst some of the reserves in Saskatchewan and Alberta, set apart for comparatively small bands, comprise from fifty to a hundred square miles. The Government has generally respected the claim of the Indians to the soil, and it has been customary, as a preliminary to opening a district to settlement, for the authorities to make treaties with the Indians, to set apart reserves for them, and to give them compensation in the shape of annuities, rations, grants for education, etc. Quite recently many bands in the west have thus entered "into treaty," and now scarcely one-fifth of the total Indian population (and these chiefly in the extreme north) retain their old status.

Whether under treaty or not, the Indians to some extent receive from Government a kind of paternal care as "the wards of the nation," and are subject to various special laws, such as that, for instance, which absolutely prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor to an Indian. Doubtless some of the race find these benevolently intended restrictions galling. A few of the more able and industrious, by fulfilling certain conditions, gain their enfranchisement as ordinary citizens, but the agents who have the oversight of the reserves describe the Indians as generally lacking in ambition.

As of old, the intermittent activities of hunting and fishing are more attractive to them than steady labor, though in the more settled districts they are obliged to turn to other occupations (such as farming, lumbering, making tubs and baskets, and fancy articles for sale to tourists), and the agents report a gradual improvement in their methods of work and mode of life. In the west, the red men still depend for their livelihood mainly upon hunting, fishing and trapping, but instead of wearing the furs of the animals they kill, and sheltering themselves in tents of buffalo skins, they dress in manufactured goods far less warm and durable, and make their tents of cotton, too thin to keep out either cold or damp.

Tuberculosis is very prevalent amongst them, and in some tribes the death-rate from this cause is extraordinarily high, but where they live under fairly favorable conditions they show no signs of dying out.

The more civilized Indians have lost the picturesque (and terrible) characteristics of their ancestors, who turned the early history of Canada into pages of wild romance and bloodcurdling tragedy. Chiefs in bearskins, braves in war-paint, tomahawks, peace-pipes, and belts of wampum have been swept from the scene. In their place we have soberly clad farmers, respectable housewives, little wooden houses, churches, schools, and on some reserves even agricultural societies and temperance leagues. Only now and then (as, for instance, on market day in Halifax, when one stands before a group of lank-haired basket-sellers, crouched on the ground with an air of stolid indifference to any possible purchaser) does one realize that even yet the Indian is not quite one with the white communities which till his old hunting grounds.

Glorious rain last night. They say the late potatoes and tomatoes are liable to get swelled heads over it.

When the electric lights were put out of commission last night some people felt like quoting the words of the Book of Common Prayer, and praying "for those who sit in darkness."

A meeting of the Executive committee of the O. B. Reunion will be held this evening. All requested to attend.

Some interesting letters re. the Old Boys' Reunion are crowded out till tomorrow.

Complaints are made that some people who attend the local market do not use as clean berry boxes as they should.

And the Old Boys' Re-Onion, as some facetious people called it, turned out to be a peach.

The tumult and the shouting dies
Blea's band and the guests depart
And good old Belleville softly sighs
And says: "Thanks be, we've done our part."

Crews-Murray.

A very happy event occurred at Bethel Methodist church, 3rd con. of Murray, on June 29th, 1910, at twelve o'clock noon, when Miss Katharine Elizabeth (Katie) Murray, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs David Murray, was united in holy wedlock to Lieut. W. H. Crews, of Murray. Rev. J. R. Butler, of Wooler, assisted by Rev. Geo. Nickle, of Consecon, cousin of the groom, being the officiating clergyman.

The church was artistically decorated with evergreens, daisies, ferns, potted plants and white ribbons. The Lohengrin wedding march was played by Miss Jennie Clements, of Stirling, a college friend of the bride, heralded the approach of the bridal party up the aisle to the altar. The first to appear was the groom with his supporter, Mr. Donald M. Murray, the bride's only brother. Then came the charming ring bearer, Master James Dixon, son of Rev. S. F. Dixon, of Tamworth, dressed in white page suit, trimmed with lace and blue ribbon bows, wearing a white plumed Gainsborough hat, and carrying the ring on a white satin cushion, in a silver tray, suspended by white ribbon Then the ushers, Mr. P. C. Dempsey, of Trenton, friend of the groom, and Mr Donald McColl, of Wooler, cousin of the bride, took their places at right and left of altar respectively, remaining there until after the bridal party had left the church, when they removed the white ribbon from either side of the aisles which released the guests from the pews

Up the west aisle came the bridesmaid Miss Annie Jamieson, of Hastings, cousin of the bride, daintily gowned in chiffon, with satin baby-ribbon trimmings, over white silk with Val. lace insertion, wearing a large plumed hat, and carrying pink "Bridesmaid" roses and asparagus ferns, tied with pink spangled chiffon. Immediately preceeding the bride, walked the pretty little flower girl, Miss Willa Nickle, of Consecon, daughter of Rev. Nickle, and cousin of the groom, dressed in white silk, and carrying a dainty white basket arranged with ferns and pink ribbons, and scattering roses, carnations and mock orange blossoms in the bride's pathway up the aisle. Lastly came the bride alone, toward the altar, where she was met by her groom, in a Brussels lace robe trimmed with pearls, over ivory white satin, with train, and wearing an embroidered tulle veil which completely enveloped her arranged on her hair with orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of white "bride" roses, lily-of-the-valley and ferns.

After the ceremony, during the signing of the register, another college friend, Miss Pearl Jordan, of Woodville delighted the one hundred and seventy guests present by sweetly singing a favorite love song of the bride, after which the bridal party proceeded down the east aisle inspired by the jubilant, triumphant notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

A reception was held immediately after leaving the church at "Evergreen Grove", the parental home of the bride, which was resplendent with ferns, flags and pink and pale blue streamers, where the receiving maids, Miss Minnie McDiarmid, of Toronto, and Miss Jessie Crews, of Trenton, cousins of the bride and groom respectively, assisted by the ushers, very graciously received and presented the guests to the newly wedded pair when they tendered to them their congratulations and all good wishes for future happiness.

The master of ceremonies, Mr. M. H. Winter, of Grafton, friend of the bride then invited and seated one hundred and forty of the guests to the wedding breakfast in the spacious dining hall, arranged and decorated with bunting, evergreens, flags, and red, white and blue, for the occasion.

The Bethel young people did themselves credit at this point, by the efficient manner in which they served the table.

After the inner man had been bountifully appeased Mr. Winter presented the toast list.

"The Bride," with her various virtues, graces and talents was extolled by her pastor, Rev. Butler, Wooler, and was responded to by the groom. Rev. Nickle then proposed the "Groom," after his health had been drunk, Mr. R. White, of Deseronto, cousin of the groom, responded in his behalf in a most complimentary and pleasing manner.

Mr. W. W. Adams, ex-Reeve of Murray township, in a very mirthful speech spoke words of praise for "Our Host and Hostess." "Our King and Country" replied to by Mr. J. W. Crews, deputy reeve of Murray, cousin of the groom, resounding with good will and patriotism, followed by singing "God Save Our King," owing to lateness of the hour, brought this phase to completion.

Mr. Winter then arranged the company in various groups and attitudes for the benefit of the many cameras present which were brought to bear on those present at this jucture, with pleasing and amusing results it is to be hoped. The bride's mother was gowned in silk, striped mauve voile over mauve, and wore lily-of-the-valley.

The bride's gift to her bridesmaid, Miss Jamieson, of Hastings, was a pearl crescent brooch, to receiving maids, Miss McDiarmid, of Toronto, and Miss Crews, of Trenton; to organist, Miss Clements, of Stirling, to soloist, Miss Jordan, of Woodville, each, a self hand painted booklet containing pictures of her wedding.

The groom presented his best man, Mr. D. N. Murray, with a gold signet ring. Ring bearer, Master James Dixon, Tamworth, a pearl ring. Ushers, Mr. Donald McColl, Wooler, gold monogram cuff links; Mr. P. C. Dempsey, Trenton, pearl tie pin. Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Winter, Grafton, pearl tie pin.

Amid showers of confetti, etc., and best wishes from forty young people, Mr. and Mrs. Crews took the 5.30 p. m. train east from Trenton station, she wearing a brown striped panella cloth suit, Russian blouse style, with Moira silk trimmings, and a white net over silk blouse, with large Tuskin hat trimmed with tulle and roses. They will spend their honeymoon at Kingston, Clayton, Watertown, Albany, New York, Coney Island, Rochester and Cobourg.

Some from a distance present at the wedding were, Miss McDiarmid, Toronto; Miss Hartley, Lindsay; Miss Winter, Wicklow; Miss Jordan, Woodville; Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Maybee, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Smith, Norham; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Dafoe, Foxboro; Miss Clements, Stirling; Dr. and Mrs. Reynolds, Rochester; Master J. Dixon, Tamworth; Mr. and Mrs. R. Whyte, Deseronto; Rev. and Mrs. Nickle, Consecon; Miss Jamieson, Hastings; and several from Trenton and Glen Miller.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by tying around it a piece of string saturated in kerosene, lighting the string and allowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft. Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power, with fir, another soft wood, next.

Six-Year-Old Girl Was Missing Over Forty-Eight Hours.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE WHICH BEFEL LITTLE MYRTLE ELLIOTT DAUGHTER OF JOHN ELLIOTT, SECOND CON. THURLOW.

On Tuesday morning, July 26, about 10 o'clock, Myrtle Elliott, six-year-old daughter of Mr. John Elliott, a yeoman residing on lot 22, second concession of Thurlow, about 3 1-2 miles east of the Grand Trunk station, strayed away from home and was not found until this morning.

The little one was found about four miles west of its home.

It appears that little Myrtle was directed by her father to watch a gap in the fence in order to keep cows from coming into the garden whilst he was drawing in grain from a field adjoining. About an hour after this duty was assigned her the cows were noticed in the garden, and were driven out by another member of the family. There was no trace of Myrtle and immediately a search was begun.

It was learned that she nad called at the house of a neighbor named Maybee, about a mile and a half from her home. Mr. Maybee directed the child home and watched her go towards her home, but she did not reach it. Nothing more was heard of her until she was found this morning.

All Tuesday afternoon and night and yesterday the neighbors searched the fields and woods in search of the missing child, but their labors were futile. It is needless to say the parents were nearly frantic. The mother was one of the most diligent searchers during the watches of the night. Her heart was overjoyed this morning when her little one was restored to her. One shudders to think of that poor child out in the dreadful storm of last night!

Yankees Appeal to Canadian Justice.

Kingston, Ont., July 27.—The Oswego N. Y., Times, noting the attack on trainmen at Belleville, remarks:

"Let us see what Canadian justice will do with the men engaged in this felonious assault. Let the authorities of the Dominion promptly arrest and punish them to the extent of the law, and an example will be made which will have more weight than anything which can possibly be done a week or two later. Swift and sure punishment is what is greatly needed, in such a case, of the very first offenders."

Striker Arrested, Accused of Trespass

Albert P. J. Hanes, who resides on the Canifton road, was arrested last night on a warrant which charged him, under section 425 of the Railway Act, with being a trespasser upon Grand Trunk Railway property. Hanes is one of the strikers, and, it is alleged, had no color of right upon railway property. The case was not disposed of today, the accused being remanded to jail.

Hanes was admitted to bail until tomorrow morning, when the case will be tried. It is stated that two other parties are liable to be charged with the same offence.

Miss de Pencier Was Cleared by Aultman Hospital Board.

OUTCOME OF CASE IN WHICH SERIOUS CHARGES WERE MADE AGAINST A FORMER SUPERINTENDENT OF THE BELLEVILLE HOSPITAL.

It will be remembered that, some time ago, charges of unpatriotic conduct and discrimination were made by Canton, O., patriotic societies against Miss Mary de Pencier, superintendent of Aultman hospital, Canton, O. The charges in effect, were that Miss de Pencier favored Canadian nurses, and discriminated against girls of U. S. nativity. The case had considerable local interest owing to the fact that Miss de Pencier was at one time superintendent of the Belleville hospital.

The Aultman Hospital Board, we learn from the Canton "Repository", has made a full investigation of the charges against Miss de Pencier, and completely exonerates her from all blame. The Board says it "won't play politics," and will not enter into a scramble for any of the city's money. The report, in effect, declares that Miss de Pencier has been in no way to blame; that if she erred at all it was in too close attention to duty; that her Canadian birth was used against her in a churlish and most unfair way, and that through her the hospital itself was attacked. The exoneration of Miss de Pencier is most complete.

Little Now Answers A Perjury Charge.

ACQUITTED OF ABDUCTION, BUT RE-ARRESTED, CHARGED WITH TAKING A FALSE AFFIDAVIT.

Magistrate Masson this morning gave judgment in the case of Ernest Little, who was accused of enticing away and marrying one Ethel Povey, a girl under 18 years of age, against the will of her parents. Under an amended section of the code, as argued by Mr. Carnew, the accused was not liable for abduction. This view the magistrate concurred in, and acquitted Little.

He was, however, not allowed his liberty, being arraigned on a charge of perjury. It was to the effect that he did on the 15th day of July, procure, by false statement as to the age of Ethel Povey, a marriage license. Little pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by the magistrate. The case was proceeded with. Mr. Anderson for Crown, and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

The charge of perjury was dismissed, after some evidence had been taken, and argument heard by Mr. Anderson on behalf of Crown, and Mr. Carnew for the accused. Little was then formally acquitted and allowed his liberty.

Toronto Offical Sues Prince Edward Co

Toronto, July 28.—Mr. G. Frederick W. Price, assistant city architect, who was badly shaken up in an automobile accident in Prince Edward county, 13 miles from Picton, has given notice of his intention to sue that county for damages on account of the defective roadway. Mr. Price's automobile hit a stone on the roadway and he was hurled through the auto glass. He was unconscious from shortly after 10 in the morning to 3 in the afternoon, and the auto was smashed.

Mr. Price has resumed his duties at the City Hall.

Excellent Bill at Griffin's Family Theatre

The Griffin management made a ten strike when they succeeded in engaging the Klein Bros. for this week. This popular juvenile team of entertainers, who made such a hit at Kingston the first part of this week. These children are without doubt, the best buck and wing dancers in the world. This act in itself should be sufficient to pack the Theatre.

Miss Marshall, the dainty soubrette will contribute to the rest of the vaudeville programme.

The very newest pictures have been secured for this week and in all three reels, three thousand five hundred feet of select pictures will be shown. The management of the Belleville Theatre are going to a great expense in securing the best vaudeville and pictures obtainable and the Theatre will undoubtedly be well patronized this week as the bill deserves.

Man Under Arrest Over Trouble Here.

One of the men under arrest in Brockville for alleged riotous conduct there is named A. V. Charbonneau. The Brockville Times had this about him:

Chief Burke received a communication from Belleville asking him to hold Charbonneau, who is wanted in that city for taking part in a disturbance at the depot on Thursday night when Roadmaster Donovan and Bridge Builder McMahon were assaulted. Donovan is able to be out again attending to his duties, but McMahon is still under the care of a doctor. Bail was ready for Charbonneau, but from the fact that the prisoner is wanted in Belleville, the court would not entertain the application. He will therefore be compelled to remain for the present.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL.

Sir William Robson Refutes Claim of International Servitude.

The Hague, July 28.—Continuing his argument, Sir William Robson, attorney-General of Great Britain, refuted the assertion that after the decision in the arbitration case at Halifax, the United States had paid the indemnity only after having received assurance from the British Government that Britain had no right to exercise jurisdiction over American fishermen.

Sir William then dealt with the doctrine of international servitudes on which the United States based its claims and its rights to fish without being subject to British laws. Counsel argued that no one would pretend that subjects of a foreign state to whom had been accorded the right to enter the ports of another state for the purposes of commerce were freed from local laws. No logical reason had been advanced by the United States to justify the exception in the case of fisheries.

The United States had in no way proved that when treaty was concluded, the doctrine of universal servitude was universally admitted.

In conformity with the tribunal's desire, Senator Root has submitted a note embodying clauses of Canadian and Newfoundland laws to which the United States raises objections.

The proceedings are expected to terminate on August 10. Senator Root will deliver the closing address.

Lady to Run For Congress.

Los Angeles, July 28.—Determined upon another effort to clear the mystery surrounding the death of her son, Lieut. J. N. Sutton, on the campus of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis two years ago, Mrs. Rose B. Sutton probably will be a candidate for the House of Representatives from her district.

"I firmly believe I will secure a Congressional investigation of my son's death at the next session of Congress," she said. "If going to Congress myself appear to be the only way, I certainly will be a candidate. Already many influential persons in Portland and other cities have promised their support, and several attorneys have volunteered to take the stump for me. If I go to Congress it will be with one object, to secure an investigation of my son's death. Woman's suffrage and other matters that usually interest women will have no place in my fight there. I will, however, advocate reforms in our army and navy life."

Lieut. Sutton was shot on the Annapolis campus. His death was attributed to suicide, after a lengthy investigation. A second probing resulted in a similar decision.

McCullough Succeeds Hodgetts.

Toronto, July 28.—Information was given from the Provincial Secretary's Department yesterday afternoon to the effect that Dr. John William Scott McCullough of Alliston, Ont., has been appointed secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, to succeed Dr. Chas. Hodgetts, who recently resigned to fill the position of medical adviser to the Conservation Commission at Ottawa.

Dr. McCullough has been a member of the local Board of Health for some time, and has a large practice in his surrounding neighborhood.

"His work on the Board of Health," said Hon. W. J. Hanna, "has, in the opinion of the Department, made clear his qualification for the position."

The duties of the new secretary are to commence on August 1, 1910.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

James Bourke Took Man He Wounded to Hospital.

On July 11, Bourke Had a Fight With George Matthews at North Bay and Has Since Spent Every Effort to Save His Victim's Life—On Reaching Toronto Hospital Yesterday Matthews Died and Bourke Is Held

Toronto, July 28.—To carry a man about the country, nursing him as a mother because he was the cause of his injuries, to have the man die just as he had got him within the doors of Toronto General Hospital, where he had hoped he would be cured, and then to be taken into custody by the police, charged with his murder, is the experience of James Bourke, erstwhile butcher of North Bay, which reached its climax at local police headquarters yesterday morning. Bourke two weeks ago sold out his business.

The deceased is George Matthews of Horning's Mills, Ont., who had been in North Bay for some time and was employed as general workman by Bourke. On the night of July 11 the two men were in a bar at North Bay. An altercation arose over a money matter, when Matthews, it is alleged, called Bourke vile names. Bourke struck him and Matthews' head struck the bar. He became unconscious and a doctor was called, who declared Matthews' condition due to liquor rather than the blow. Then it was suggested that they take him to the hospital at North Bay. Bourke set out for the hospital with Matthews in a rig. On he way the injured man asked that he be taken to his boarding-house, where he was refused admittance, and was taken to a doctor's house. From there he was taken back to the boarding-house, where he spent the night. He was then removed to the hospital, where he remained until Tuesday, when the authorities said they could do no more for him, and put him on a train to be taken to Sudbury and thence to his home at Horning's Mills. On the train he became very sick, and was seen by a doctor at Sudbury. It was then decided to bring him to Toronto to an hospital. They were met at the station yesterday morning and hurried to the General Hospital in the police ambulance. There Matthews died in the corridor, and Bourke gave himself up to Ambulance Driver Egan.

Before leaving North Bay a lawyer had been called in and an agreement drawn up and signed by Matthews in which he waived all claims to action against Bourke, civil or criminal, in consideration of Bourke's undertaking to pay all doctor's bills and other expenses of Matthews' treatment.

Matthews was 41 years of age and leaves a wife and three children. Bourke is 30 years of age and unmarried.

Split In Elevator Commission.

Winnipeg, July 28.—As a result of what was practically an altercation between Prof. Magill, chairman of the Saskatchewan Elevator Commission, and George Langley, M.P.P., and a member of the commission, the session of that body came to a sudden and unexpected termination.

During the examination of John Fleming of A. McPhee & Co., an ex-president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, Mr. Langley took vigorous objection, practically contending that the chairman was trying to prevent the witness from giving the evidence which he (Langley) was desirous of eliciting.

Mr. Magill warmly denied the insinuation and insisted that Mr. Langley retract what he had said, otherwise he would adjourn the session. Mr. Langley, however, proved stubborn, and, instead of retracting, reiterated his remarks, whereupon Mr. Magill, rising, gathered his papers together and left the room.

Sensation at Execution.

Auburn, N.Y., July 28.—While William Gilbert, a Cataraugus County negro, was being led from the death house to the electric chair in Auburn Prison yesterday morning the convicts in the cell house shouted oaths at the legal witnesses, declaring they were murderers of an innocent man. Gilbert himself was resigned to his fate, and exhibited no fear as he walked to the chair.

All that is left of the bodies is the bones and hair, but their clothes are well preserved and their pockets have been turned and cut open.

HAYS REJECTS OFFER

Striking Trainmen Agree to Go Back on Old Terms.

Union Officials Call on President of Grand Trunk and Say They Will Go to Work at Old Rate With Pensions the Same, But Head of Company Says Pensions Will Be Forfeited—Some Deny Story of Offer.

Montreal, July 28.—The most important development which has occurred since the strike commenced took place yesterday. A conference was held in Mr. Hays' office between G.T.R. officials and Messrs. Lee, Garretson, Maloney and Kelly, representing the strikers. With Mr. Hays was associated Mr. Fitzhugh. The representatives of the men stated that the strikers were willing to go back to their old jobs as if they had never left the service. In other words, they accepted Mr. Hays' offer of an 18 per cent. increase made to them before they went on strike, and wanted to have each man reinstated and occupy his old position. Their demand also included the restoration of their pensions. The date of increasing the wages to the standard rate was to be submitted to arbitration. This had been promised by Mr. Hays for January 1, 1913, but the men wanted to have this point arbitrated, in the hope of having the standard wage paid them at an earlier date.

To their request Mr. Hays' said "No," and added: "We have no feeling of anger against our former employes, but you must apply for your jobs as new men, and only on this condition will you be taken back. We hired a number of men in good faith, and we cannot discharge them to make way for those who went on strike. The men who went out will lose their pensions, but those who apply for positions will be taken back, as far as we have room for them. This applies to all except those who committed deeds of violence against the company's employes or property."

In keeping with the contradictory stories issued by the two sides, the strike leaders last night denied that there had been any yielding on their part. "We had a conference with Messrs. Hays and Fitzhugh yesterday afternoon," said Mr. Garretson, "but no definite results were achieved. We met Mr. Hays and laid it before him that if a friendly settlement was possible by any honorable means we were favorable thereto, and that if there was no such possibility we were in the game for all it was worth. We took into consideration the hardships placed upon the public, who were dependent upon the Grand Trunk services. We made no offer at all, but simply suggestions as to our general attitude."

Brantford Industries Shut Down.

Brantford, July 28.—The Farmers' Binder Twine Co., employing seventy hands, was forced to close down here yesterday as a result of the Grand Trunk strike. The factory was unable to secure raw material. The Schultz Sand Lime Brick Co. also laid off its employes. Absolutely no freight is being handled out of this city.

Smithers Is Coming.

London, July 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A. W. Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk Railway Board, goes to Canada on Saturday, sailing on the Mauretania.

Will Retire From Politics.

Lethbridge, Alta., July 28.—At the annual meeting of the Lethbridge Liberal Association, Hon. W. A. Buchanan said: "That he had been loath to leave the Government. He recognized at once that the A. & G. W. deal was indefensible from a business standpoint, but the issue was mixed up with so many political jealousies and ambitions on the part of the Liberal members that it was necessary to be careful. He had acted according to his best knowledge and judgment in the matter and believed he had done right."

Mr. Buchanan paid a high tribute to the worth of the new Premier, and in concluding stated his intention to retire at the end of his term as a member of the Legislature. Not only had he all the politics he wanted, but his defective hearing and the demands of his private business made it difficult for him to stay in politics.

Smallpox In Brantford.

Brantford, July 28.—The recurrence of smallpox continues in this city, and two more cases were discovered yesterday, making a total of 32, all of a mild nature. A general vaccination order has been asked for from the City Council by the health authorities, but refused on the ground that the situation is not serious enough. The provincial authorities may be called in to give advice. The cases are distributed in several parts of the city and the hospital accommodation is insufficient.

George Culham, employed as lineman on the street railway, fell from the top of a tower wagon here yesterday evening, striking head first on the pavement. His recovery is doubtful.

A Peculiar Fatality.

New York, July 28.—One man was killed and a man and boy injured yesterday in a peculiar accident in a West 54th street garage. The man killed was Leroy Palatier, a young chauffeur, whose neck was broken when he ran his car into the garage and into an open elevator shaft, the car dropping 15 feet to the basement.

Rev. W. J. McCaughan Better.

Vol. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO. FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1910. NO. 271

TO-DAY'S SPECIALS.

One-Third of Those Who Failed in Entranee Exams. May Now Pass.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, July 29.—The announcement of Deputy Minister Colquhoun that Entrance candidates who secured sixty per cent. in the subject only may be passed by examining boards, will result in the passing of one-third of those who were marked failed in the first returns.

MANY MUNICIPALITIES HURT BY G. T. R. STRIKE— INDUSTRIES MAY MOVE

(Intelligencer Special)

Toronto, July 29.—In reports received from independent correspondents, after a general canvass of all important cities and towns in Ontario, touched by the Grand Trunk, it is evident that, despite the assertions of the company's officials there has been practically no freight service since the strike began. Those places which depend entirely on the Grand Trunk for transportation find results disastrous to some industries.

In many cases factories have been closed and manufacturers are talking of moving out to places where never in future will they have to depend on one road for facilities.

STONES WERE THROWN AT OWEN SOUND

Intelligencer Special.

Owen Sound, July 29.—When the evening train for the south was going through town last night somebody threw two stones through the windows, splintering glass falling and cutting a woman passenger badly. Conductor Macey, of Stratford, was nearly hit by a stone. The Mayor has offered a reward for the miscreant's apprehension.

FATHER POINT ON TIPTOE, WAITING FOR DR. CRIPPEN

(Intelligencer Special.)

Father Point, Que., July 29.—Half a dozen police, detectives, two score newspaper writers and photographers, several curious holiday makers who would otherwise never come near this place, are here awaiting with some impatience for the arrival of the steamer Montrose, on which are the alleged murderer, Dr. H. H. Crippen, and his typist, Miss Leneve, searched for by the police of two continents.

That the pair are on board the boat is not questioned now, since the positive wireless message was received from Captain Kendall last night. This morning the Montrose was within easy communication by wireless, and it was learned that the pair are entirely in ignorance of the fact that they are under surveillance.

MAGISTRATE SAYS BREAD MUST BE STANDARD WEIGHT

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, July 29.—If a person asks for a loaf of bread he must get a 24 or 48 ounce loaf, no matter what price, was the decision of Magistrate Kingsford under the Nickle Act.

This is an important point and is applicable to all places in Ontario. Bakers will probably appeal.

Ran Away From Home.

Niagara Falls, July 29.—Wilfrid Fletcher, a 15-year-old Toronto boy, is held by the police, after telling them that he ran away from home because he had trouble with his mother. His parents have been notified and are expected here to-day.

Conference on International Rates.

Ottawa, July 29.—Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission has gone to Nova Scotia to inspect the railways under the jurisdiction of the board there. Towards the end of August he will go to Vancouver.

Smoked Out Pirates.

Hong Kong, July 29.—The authorities have captured several more of the Colowan pirates. The latest batch includes fifteen men and thirteen women. Three more kidnapped boys have been rescued. The pirates were smoked out of their caves by fires of straw and sulphur.

The Mouths of Leaves.

The botanist, the real investigator who has got down to making real explorations for himself, will talk to you about the thousands of minute stomates on the surface of a leaf. These invisible stomates are really the mouths through which the leaves take in carbonic acid. They are most abundant on the upper surface of leaves. Each is an oval opening guarded by a pair of lips which open and close according to requirements. They vary from less than 1,000 to more than 20,000 to the square inch of leaf surface.

A Boa of Snakes.

Mr. A. W. Gilbey writes to The Field: "My keeper, walking round the hedgerows lately, saw a hen pheasant sitting on her nest with two common snakes round her neck. He rattled his stick, when both the snakes scuttled off, and he killed them. The pheasant sat quite unconcerned, and never left the nest. The keeper thinks they may have got there for warmth. I have never heard of a similar case."

NEXT DOOR TO NEPTUNE.

Where There Are Workshops Under the Sea.

The Whitehaven coal-mine, in which the awful disaster recently occurred, and which runs out for three miles below the Irish Sea, is not by any means the only mine in which men work with thousands of tons of ocean directly over their heads, and within a few yards of them.

Workington, a near neighbor of Whitehaven, used to have one of these submarine mines. But one day the water burst through the roof, and filled the workings, drowning all the men who were unfortunate enough to be there—thirty-six.

The nearness of the sea, indeed, is the chief danger in these mines.

The most famous of all these submarine workshops is situated near Penzance, and is called the Bottallack Mine. The coast is rocky there, and shelves steeply down below the water. In this submerged hill ten galleries were driven at different levels, each stopping only within a few yards of the Atlantic. So thoroughly was the hill honeycombed that the sea began oozing in in all directions. One leak might have been stopped, but as there were hundreds, the mine simply had to be abandoned.

But there was another reason for its abandonment. So thin was the crust that in the storms of winter the stout-hearted miners had often to flee in terror from the thunder above them. Great boulders rolled along the sea-bed, grinding and crashing, and masses of gravel plunged to and fro. In fact, cases of deafness and hysteria were quite common among the men who earned their bread there.

The mine can still be explored by the daring visitor. The Queen Mother and the late King Edward went down some years ago. Even in the calmest weather, however, the ocean can be heard murmuring and rumbling within a few yards of one's head. The galleries run for a third of a mile under the sea.

Within a few miles of the Bottallack copper mine is the Levant Mine, one of the richest mines that have ever been opened in England. Tin and copper have been taken out of it to the value of two millions sterling. And most of this two millions has been taken from under the ocean, for of its forty miles of galleries the greater part lies directly below the sea. The lowest gallery but one runs straight out below the water for a mile.

It was to the Battallack Mine that a distinguished geologist paid a visit a few years ago. Leaving his friends, to whom an official was explaining things, he strolled away a few yards. Noticing something that looked like a plug, he began fingering it.

Suddenly the official rushed across to him, and caught his arm.

"You shouldn't do that, you know," he remarked politely.

"Oh, why not?"

"Well, you see, you were just going to let the Atlantic in!"

The face of the visitor as he withdrew his hand was a study.

At Bo'ness, a port on the south side of the Firth of Forth, coal mines run out below water till they almost meet those on the opposite coast.

Off the County of Durham, too, there are several great submarine coal-mines. There is, for instance, the famous Monk Wearmouth Colliery, whose workings are so vast and so intricate as almost to form a city under the sea. This mine has had the usual difficulty in keeping the water out. In fact, some years ago, the North Sea burst a way into it, and started pouring in at the rate of 3,000 gallons a minute.

A big 2[illegible]-horse-power pumping engine had to be fixed up to keep the mine dry. Indeed, most submarine workshops find it a costly business to keep the ocean from coming through the roof.

India's New Viceroy.

There were heartburnings in diplomatic circles when, in 1904, Sir Chas. Hardinge — who has been appointed Viceroy of India, in succession to the Earl of Minto—was appointed British Ambassador to St. Petersburg. He was but forty-six years of age at the time. Older men had been passed over, and it was said that he was too young for the post. Just the same thing is being said to-day. Since he entered the Diplomatic Service in 1880, however, Sir Charles has proved his worth. He is the grandson of a former Viceroy, the first Lord Hardinge, who was thanked by Parliament for his services and granted a pension of $15,000 a year for his own life and the lives of two of his successors. In addition, the East India Company gave him a pension of $25,000. Sir Charles is one of the most decorated men in the world, and has had close upon twenty different orders bestowed upon him by British and foreign royalty.

Forestry In Australia.

Much attention has been paid to forestry in Australia recently. The Victorian Government this winter will plant nearly a million young pines, spruces, and hardwoods, and will sow 125,000 immediately. Probably four million seedlings will be available in 1911. The New South Wales Government now inserts re-afforestation clauses in its leases. It is taking this step to prevent undue destruction of the valuable pine and iron-bark belts when the Pilliga scrub is thrown open.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD KILLED.

Little Hamilton Girl Is Accidentally Shot by Her Cousin.

Hamilton, July 29.—There was a sensational shooting accident yesterday afternoon, in which Harriett Tabb, five years old, who lives at 287 Emerald street, was killed. The revolver was in the hands of her cousin, James Leslie Sibbald, 12 years of age, of 116 Shaw street, Toronto, who was on a visit to his aunt, at whose home the fatality occurred. It was another case of not knowing that the weapon was loaded, and the little girl was killed almost instantly. Three doctors were on the scene shortly after the accident happened, but the bullet had entered the child's head, and they were unable to help her. The police investigated the affair and found that it was purely accidental.

The children had been playing, and upon their return between 2 and 3 o'clock, were told to go up to the bathroom and wash their feet. When they arrived there, there was no soap, and young Sibbald climbed up to the shelf above a medicine chest, to get some. On the top of the chest he came across an old revolver, and, taking it down, began to examine it. The little girl was sitting on the edge of the bath with her feet in the water and Sibbald pulled the hammer back. It slipped from his fingers and discharged an old cartridge. As the weapon was pointed directly at the girl, the bullet entered her head behind the right ear, and she died almost instantly.

Will Meet In Stratford.

Berlin, July 29.—The 21st annual convention of the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers concluded its sessions yesterday afternoon. The following officers were elected: President, J. J. Heeg, Guelph; vice-president, W. Norris, London; treasurer, A. M. Wickens, Toronto; conductor, J. A. Robertson, Stratford; doorkeeper, H. R. Clarke, Hamilton; secretary, W. A. Crockett, Mount Hamilton. The retiring president, Charles Kelly, Chatham, who has held the office for the past two years, was presented with a gold badge, suitably engraved.

Stratford was the unanimous choice for the next annual convention in 1911.

C.P.R. Earnings.

Montreal, July 29.—For June, 1910, the gross earnings of the C.P.R. were $8,807,817; working expenses, $6,089,902; net profit, $2,717,913. In June, 1909, the net profits were $1,888,424, and for 12 months ended June 30, 1910, the figures are as follows:—Gross earnings, $94,989,490; working expenses, $61,140,534; net profits, $33,889,956. For the 12 months ended June 30, 1909, there was a net profit of $38,955,875. The increase in net profits over the same period last year is therefore, for June, $829,491 and for 12 months ended June 30 there was an increase of $10,834,325.

A Dash For Liberty.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 29.—Yesterday morning a deer jumped the high fence around the property of the Lake Superior Corporation and entered the river above the rapids. It went over the rapids and was captured by means of a launch and lasso. The deer was placed in the old warehouse and some hours later made its escape by jumping through a window, breaking a couple of strong iron bars, and again entered the river. When last seen it was swimming towards the American ship canal.

Censured the Railway.

Beaverton, July 29.—Censure was meted out to the Canadian Northern Railway by the coroner's jury in the inquest on John McDevitt and John Hunter, killed in the collision of an engine and a passenger train on July 23, for sending out an entire train crew of inexperienced men. The jury found that the victims were riding on a tender, contrary to the regulations of the railway, and against the orders of the train crew, and consequently at their own risk.

Bourke Will Not Be Prosecuted.

Toronto, July 29.—James Bourke will not be prosecuted in connection with the death of George Matthews, who died Wednesday in the General Hospital, after having been struck by Bourke in a row at North Bay two weeks ago. The post-mortem examination will show that Matthews did not die as a result of the blow, but from a long-standing organic affection.

Rescued Four of the Crew.

Lorain, Ohio, July 29.—A telegram stating that the four members of the crew of the tug H. R. Bues had been picked up by a freighter, was received by Capt. George Pickard, of the tug James Edwards, when he reached here yesterday. The tug came from Leamington, Ont., to which point the rescued men were taken.

Charged With Serious Offence.

Woodstock, Ont., July 29.—William Walt, a young man employed at a local factory, was yesterday charged in the Police Court with a serious offence against a girl under 16. He was remanded until Saturday.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

NEWS FROM MONTROSE

Wireless Says Dr. Crippen Is Aboard Steamer.

Anxious Watchers at Father Point Get Message Which Expresses the Utmost Confidence In the Identity of the Suspicious Persons on the Boat —All Doubt of Identity of Pair on Vessel at an End.

Quebec, July 29.—On board steamer Montrose, by Marconi wireless, via Father Point, July 28.—Suspected persons answering police description of Crippen and Miss Leneve on board. No arrests made. Other passengers, who are all continentals, in ignorance of the situation. Montrose at 4 p.m. Thursday, 150 miles east of Belle Isle; weather foggy.

Llewellyn Jones, Marconi operator.

The foregoing message from Llewellyn Jones, the Marconi operator on the steamer Montrose, was received in New York late last night, in response to an enquiry sent by wireless earlier in the night.

It confirms apparently the belief of Scotland Yard that Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen and his stenographer are aboard the vessel.

London, July 29.—At a late hour last night Scotland Yard had not received official confirmation that Crippen is aboard the steamer Montrose.

Is Off Belle Isle.

Montreal, July 29.—A marconigram was received by the Canadian Pacific Co., yesterday afternoon, stating that at 12.30 the Montrose, on which Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve are supposed to be trying to escape to Canada, was reported 200 miles east of Belle Isle. This means that with fair weather and good progress the steamer cannot reach Father Point until early on Sunday morning, and Quebec the same evening. Thus, although there are thirty special correspondents at Father Point, representing most of the leading papers of Canada, the United States and Great Britain, it will probably be Sunday morning before definite news is secured as to the whereabouts of the couple, or, at least, whether they are on board the Montrose. The lack of wireless information from the ship has led C.P.R. officials to the conclusion that Capt. Kendall has been requested by Scotland Yard authorities to stop any such information being sent.

The Laurentic, on which Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard is supposed to be in pursuit of the fugitive, was reported at Belle Isle at five yesterday morning. At that rate it is calculated by the White Star Co. that she should be due at Father Point at noon on Friday, at Quebec that night, and at Montreal on Saturday morning. It was stated at the White Star offices yesterday that the company had no official knowledge that Inspector Dew was on board, and that he did not appear on the passenger list.

An Insurgent Victory.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, July 29.—According to advices made public at the insurgent headquarters yesterday, Gen. Moncado Wednesday defeated a Government force, under Gen. Lara, which was attempting to form a junction with the troops of Gen. Chamorro Castill, north of Acoyapa. Forty prisoners and guns, ammunition and camp equipment were taken by the insurgents, according to their reports.

Grand Falls Power Development.

St. John, N.B., July 29.—As a result of the conference between rival interests here Wednesday, it is stated that substantial progress was made in the negotiations for control of the Grand Falls power development by Sir William Van Horne's company. It is stated that the latter company desire soon to begin construction of a hydro-electric plant and pulp and paper mills at the falls.

Freight Train Broke Loose.

Galt, June 29.—A serious pitch-in occurred at the local C.P.R. yards yesterday afternoon. A way freight left a train of cars standing, when in some unaccountable way the brakes loosened and allowed the train to get away. Standing near the switch was a box car, into which the end car of the runaway train crashed. The platform was wrecked for twenty feet.

Oldest Resident Dead.

Brantford, July 29.—Mary Willits, a life-long resident of Brant County, born Aug. 4, 1810, died here yesterday at the residence of her son, David Willits. She was the oldest resident of the city and the last of a family of thirteen children of John Stenebaugh, Jerseyville, all of whom attained over eighty years.

Found a Severed Leg.

Niagara Falls, July 29.—Shortly before noon yesterday the left leg of a man was found in the river at the landing of the Maid of the Mist. The leg was severed from the body at the hip. Its only covering was a black sock with white feet, and a black Blucher-cut shoe, evidently size 7 or 8.

Hit by Falling Plank.

Niagara Falls, July 29.—Roy Brown and Clifford Pennington, small boys, were struck by a plank falling from the deck of the Michigan Central bridge yesterday. Both were seriously injured, but are not thought to be in danger of death. Each boy is suffering from a bad wound on the head.

Suicided After a Lovers' Quarrel.

A despatch from Lindsay says: "I plainly see that you are a bum. No. 40 can never make 3224 happy. We are going to leave your desire incurable. For traitors, drowning is a sweet death." As a result of receiving the above telegram, Philip Wolberg, discouraged and despondent, drowned himself in the Scugog yesterday morning. It appears that while living in Newfoundland, Wolberg courted a pretty New York girl, Miss Sarah Burnstein, and it was a case of infatuation with each other at first sight. The parents of Miss Burnstein objected to his attention and sought to separate the two lovers. Telegrams were intercepted as well as other correspondence, and at last Wolberg threatened to drown his sorrows. This he did after receiving the above telegram which was signed by Nos. 38 and 21. Wolberg decided to go to New York and find out who sent the telegram, but changed his mind.

A Talented Musician

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

My Dear Sir,—Among the sons of Belleville who have scored great success in the world's battle tournament, and of whom we are proud, is Professor Leo. Riggs of New York.

I remember when Mrs. Riggs placed her little boy of perhaps five years of age upon a piano stool, and we then heard him play "God Save the Queen". On Tuesday afternoon I listened to the same lad, now grown to man's estate, spell-bound by the magic of his touch, as light as the thistle down, which floats in the air, and creating the sweetest of fairy-like harmonies. A lady, who has for many years delighted Belleville audiences with the organ, said, after listening to the recital referred to, "I feel as if I should not touch the keys of an organ again," so masterly and so finished was Mr. Riggs' performance. Mr. Riggs plays at the Astor House, New York, receiving a princely salary; but his ambition is to climb to the topmost rung of the ladder of musical fame, and so he has determined to spend two years in Germany, to perfect himself in musical studies. "The Swan," by Saint Saens, "The Spring Song," by McFarlane, the celebrated New York virtuoso, In the Twilight, by Harker, were gems. Rossini's masterpiece, William Tell, was rendered in the most inimitable manner, and aroused the greatest enthusiasm. The time will come when upon this continent, I very much doubt if a greater artist upon the organ, than Mr. Riggs, will be found. Belleville wishes him every success.

Every music lover in the city remembers Miss de Guerre, now Mrs. Riggs, and everyone was delighted to see her again, and listen to her exquisite and beautiful voice. Mrs. Riggs awakened sweet memories of long ago, with two vocal solos, which were rapturously applauded, "The Fairies" and "Show Me Thy Ways." We hope our friends will visit and delight us again long before another Old Boys' Reunion.

Yours truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

Their Golden Wedding.

(Christian Guardian)

Last week the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Carman quietly celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Fifty years ago last Tuesday, the nineteenth, they were married in the then town of Belleville, by the late Bishop Richardson, with characteristic modesty they did not announce the approach of the anniversary to their many friends, so that they had to send in their felicitations and good wishes after the event. They were none the less hearty and sincere. May there be many years still of happy association and service.

A County Case.

Before Magistrate Masson, yesterday, Benjamin Sedore, a county constable, was charged with two offences, namely, with insulting Hannah Sedore and appropriating to his own use a cow valued at $45, the property of said Hannah Sedore. The parties reside in the Township of Elzevir, and are related to each other. In the latter case an amicably settlement was effected, whereby the cow was returned to Miss Sedore by the defendant, he being reimbursed for what he had paid. The charge of insult was not pressed. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, Mr. J. F. Wills appeared for the accused.

Weather in August According to Hicks.

A reactionary storm period extends from the 2nd to the 5th, with Moon at extreme north declination on the 2nd, and New Moon on the 5th. The Mercury period also covers this period, as seen in the storm diagram. Light fluctuations of barometer and temperature, attended by possible showers and blustering clouds and thunder are indicated for this period, prolonged or retarded by New Moon on the 5th. The 3rd to the 9th is the first seismic periowd for August.

A regular storm period is central with the Mercury period on the 8th covering the 6th to the 11th. This period promises to come in with cloudiness and threatening conditions lasting from the reactionary period, preceding, owing to Mercury's influence and New Moon on the 5th. But low barometer and storms of rain, wind and thunder will reach a crisis on and touching the 8th, 9th and 10th. This is about the most promising rain period for this mid-summer month. Great blustering and electrical storms will center on the 9th. A decided change to cooler and more pleasant weather will follow storms of this period for several days.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 13th, 14th and 15th. The Mercury influence together with the Moon's first quarter and apogee on the 12th, will bring a marked increase of storm conditions early in this period.. We do not think a general sufficiency of rainfall is to be expected this month, or during this summer, but good local rains will be natural in many scattering sections in central to northern states, during the three storm periods within the Mercury brace up to August 15th. Violent to dangerous storms will hit some localities, but always after ample warnings have appeared to all who are looking for them.

A regular storm period at the entrance of Earth's autumnal equinox, falls on the 17th to 23rd, central on the 19th and Full Moon on the 20th. This is another period in which may be expected some violent mid-summer bluster, black clouds, local rains, and thunder. The inestimable value and solid comfort derived from a good barometer through all these storm periods, can never be told to one who has never proven the truth by personal experience. Such a thing as being surprised by destructive storms with a reliable barometer at hand and properly consulted is absolutely impossible. The 18th to 24th is a seismic period from various extremes of the Earth. Watch papers and clip telegraphic reports. During the last half of August one or more equinoctial or West India storms will come up and menace the Gulf Coast regions.. Don't be off your guard in that section at any one of the three last storm periods in August..

A reactionary storm period, with Moon on the equator on the 23rd, and in perigee on the 24th, covers the 22nd to the 25th. The astronomic conditions at this time are very favorable for dangerous storms and tidal waves in all the gulf regions.. Great storms in the south at this time would almost certainly induce boreal winds from the north with high winds and general change to unseasonably cool weather over all parts of the inland states. The barometer and all other indications should be watched especially at his reactionary period..

A regular storm period is central on the 31st, covering the last three days of August and culminating in the opening days of September. It is proper that we should again call attention to the fact that the Earth's autumnal equinox, or time of perturbation growing out of the Sun's approach to the equator, is always and sometimes severely, felt during the last half of August. This is indicated by the brace marked "Earth's autumnal equinox" in the August storm diagram, which extends back to the 18th of the month. The shifting of our summer southward, and the encroachment of the autumn northward, bringing on an electrical and magnetic strain all over the globe, and great equinoctial storms often result weeks before the Sun passes over the equator in September. Some of the most destructive equatorial hurricanes that strike our Southern seas and coast appear in the month of August. There are no marked indications of storm thtis month, but if we lived at sea level anywhere along the gulf and south Atlantic coasts, we should keep in mind the possibilities of danger and watch indications. Several times in the history of those now living there has been great loss of human life, saying nothing of live stock and other property, by overwhelming storms and tidal waves in August along the south coasts.

Prince Edward Co Wants Better Roads

Toronto, July 29. — Prince Edward County wishes to spend an additional $50,000 this year on good roads, and with that end in view applied to the Government to ask if the usual one-third of the $50,000 would be paid by the Government. An order-in-council has been passed in which it is stated that the Government will pay onethird of the money. Prince Edward is one of the foremost counties in the Province so far as good roads are concerned, and it is this fact that makes it one of the best agricultural counties as well.

Trifling Injury Proved Serious.

On Saturday last Mr. Joseph Deshane, while working on the wharf, received a trifling injury to one of his thumbs, the same being caused by a rope. He took little notice of the wound. Yesterday he felt unwell and went home. A doctor was sent for, and by the time the medical man arrived Mr. Deshane's arms and one of his legs were swelled to an abnormal size. Blood poisoning is said to have caused the trouble, and Mr. Deshane is now in a very serious condition.

O. B. R. Notes.

Amongst the warmest letters of regret received, was that of Lieutenant Col. Edward Harrison, of Ottawa, who will ever be remembered as identified with the 49th Regiment, Hastings Rifles, for so many years. We missed him.

Special credit is due to Mr. John J. B. Flint, for his indefatigable work in getting up the striking features of the Parade in which the Hospital Float is deserving of particular mention..

The committee have sent letters of thanks to Mr. W. H. Spooner and Mr. Led. B. Riggs for their spontaneous kindness in volunteering the organ recitals, which were much enjoyed by all.

At a largely attended meeting of the Executive committee of the O. B. R held last night it was moved by Dr. Yeomans, seconded by Mr. W. J. Hudson "That the thanks of the Executive committee be extended to Mrs. S. Lazier and the ladies who assisted her at the Ladies Reception at St. Agnes School in connection with the Old Boys' Renuion

This function was so excellently managed that the committee feel under obligation to those ladies who so willingly gave up their time to the successful management of the Reception

Moved by Dr. Yeomans, seconded by Mr. W. J. Hudson, that the thanks of the Executive committee be extended to Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Lingham for their great kindness in placing at the disposal of the committee the beautiful grounds of S. Agnes' School, which contributed so much to the pleasure of our guests and of the citizens of Belleville during the Reunion..

Votes of thanks were also passed to the Trenton Electric Co., Lt.-Col. Stewart and Officers; The Police Force, and all who had actively and generously contributed by co-operation to the successful and satisfying result attained by the citizens of Belleville as represented by their committees.

Silk flags will be presented to the best decorated boats which appeared in the Harbor on Saturday night and special recognition will also be made to the Old Boy and Old Girl who came from the greatest distance to attend the Reunion.

An adjourned meeting of the Executive committee will be held at an early date.

Heavy Fines Were Paid in Brockville.

Brockville, July 28.—Daily prosecutions in the police court arising out of the G. T. R. strike riot, are now the order. This morning Magistrate Murphy disposed of the cases of Fred Botsford and A. C. Charbonneau, two striking brakesmen. They were originally charged with rioting and assaulting John Szammers, road foreman, occasioning grievous bodily harm. After a conference between solicitors for the prisoners and the railway company, the Crown consented to the withdrawal of these charges and the substitution of "wilfully obstructing and impeding an officer and agent of the company in the discharge of their duties." To this they pleaded guilty, and were fined the maximum penalty of $50, which carried $14 costs, making $64 in each case, which was paid.

Wm. H. Kerr, committed for trial, yesterday on a charge of destroying property of the company, faced another accusation today, that of assaulting Frank McLaughlin, of Montreal, an employee of the company. Upon the evidence of a boy named Lennox, he was convicted and fined $24. Charbonneau is being held for Belleville police. He will be taken to that city tonight for trial on a charge similar to the one he pleaded guilty on today. The general strike situation here shows no change today. Since the attempt to derail the Moccasin the other morning by pulling spikes of three rails east of Brockville, the line is being patrolled by section men the entire length of the system, with night and day shifts. Each man is responsible for one mile of track.

DRUNK

Frank LaPalm pleaded guilty to this offence He was fined $5 payable forthwith, or in default 15 days in jail.

VAGRANTS GALORE

Charles McMullen, a stranger, was arrested whilst asleep in a rig in rear of a building on Front street. He claimed Toronto as his home and said he was a painter by occupation. The Magistrate ordered him to either get work or get out of the city.

Harry Hamilton was arrested at 1.30 this morning. He was charged with vagrancy.

Alfred Way, an unfortunate, who is minus both feet, pleaded guilty to vagrancy. He was fined $10 or 30 days in jail. Not having the money he went up on the hill.

James Davey was sent to jail for 15 days on a charge of vagrancy.

Thomas Smith, of Montreal, accused of vagrancy, asked to be allowed to go to work, as he desired to do so. The Magistrate gave him an opportunity to secure work by giving him his liberty.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY

George Graham, of Boston, Mass., was charged with being drunk and disorderly, and also with breaking a window in the Victoria Hotel. Graham, when he broke the window cut his right hand quite severely in three places, all the wounds requiring stitches to be taken in them. As Graham had been somewhat punished for the offence he committed the magistrate took a lenient view and sent him to jail for 15 days.

Daily Intelligencer.

Treatment of Prisoners.

This is a problem that has agitated the minds of men for centuries without arriving at a solution of the question. No scheme has ever been proposed or suggested that has not been opposed either by those who desire the administering of severe punishment, or by the morbid sentimentalist. Set prisoners to work in the penitentiaries, and at once the labour element enters its protest against introducing into the market the product of prison labour in competition with that of the labour of honest men. The primary reason for this is that prison labor produces articles cheaper than they can be manufactured by honest men who have to support families, and pay their proportion of the expenses of maintaining the prisons in which the articles are produced. Everyone must admit the force of this objection, yet is it not the duty of those who govern to compel prisoners to do some kind of work rather than to let offenders against the law live and fatten through laziness in prison.

Then we have in our midst the morbidly sentimental class, who would pamper the criminals and make prisons luxurious resorts for the criminal loafer who prefers such prison treatment to earning an honest living. The Ontario Government has inaugurated a policy of utilizing prison labor which should commend itself to every thinking man who desires the inculcation of industrious habits in those who have, unfortunately, brought themselves within the provisions of the law, though not of the most serious character. No better system could be put into operation than the placing of such criminals as we have indicated at work in making roads in the colonization territory of New Ontario, yet we find objectors among men who in all probability would refuse to raise an axe in the felling of a tree, or a pick or shovel in making a road passable for the new settler.

In England the Right Hon. Winston Churchill is attempting to grapple with this question. Should he succeed in placing upon the statute book clauses in the criminal code to bring into effect his propositions, he will soon fill the jails in England with those who prefer luxurious support and comfort by the State to the earning of an honest living. "His proposal," says a contemporary, "regarding the treatment to be accorded to persons whose offences do not involve moral turpitude, which classification includes suffragettes, people who object to the payment of taxes in which they do not or profess not to believe, and cranks of various kinds, is particularly striking. Such prisoners will not be compelled to wear prison clothes, to submit to the bathing process, or to have their hair cut. They may provide their own food, be permitted facilities for ample exercise, converse freely with fellow-prisoners of the same class, receive visitors at their will, and read books 'not bearing on current events,' newspapers and contemporary literature of a controversial character being barred."

What lazy loafer or crank of a woman who has some fad would object to such martyrdom. The question is admirably put when it is asked "What is it going to profit a suffragette, for instance, if sentenced to jail she merely finds herself landed in a somewhat exclusive hotel How is she to pose as a martyr when she is living on the fat of the land, with unlimited opportunities for association with other martyrs, and the doors open wide for her friends? She may wear her best clothes every day in the week, and she need not take a bath unless she desires it. It is not fair, and if persisted in it will drive the suffragettes into offences involving moral turpitude, such as lady-like assaults upon Cabinet ministers." All such tampering with crime is only likely to encourage it.

Toronto Star: What's the use of working for a living?" asks a woman arrested for forgery. "It's so much easier to use one's brain." As a matter of fact, the same amount of brains which makes possible a transitory success in crime will guarantee a permanent success in some honest occupation.

Newark News: Read carefully the newspaper accounts of the tragedies of the vacation season, of lives lost in the pursuit of sport and summer time pleasures. Rarely, indeed, will you fail to discover the cause of the tragedy, although it may be the circumstance advanced as the explanation — "he rose in the canoe to wave to some friends in a passing boat;" "she was not strong enough to manage the boat in so strong a current and was swept into a rift;" "he was swimming outside the line of breakers;" "the party had been skylarking and failed to notice the approaching squall;" he was not accustomed to handling a shell;" "he could not swim." These are selected from descriptions of recent drowning accidents. Hanes Found Guilty Of Trespassing-Was Fined $1 and Costs

CASE OF CHARBONNEAU, THE MAN BROUGHT HERE FROM BROCKVILLE, LAID OVER FOR A WEEK — PROSECUTION NOT READY TO PROCEED.

Albert Hanes was this morning arraigned before Magistrate Masson, charged with having, on July 27th 1910, unlawfully trespassed upon Grand Trunk Railway property, contrary to section 425 of the Railway Act.

Hanes who was then employed in the yard here went out on strike with the trainmen

In this case Mr. E. J. Butler appeared on behalf of the Railway and Mr. Carnew appeared for the accused.

Mr. Coleman, assistant Superintendent of the G. T. R. at Belleville testified that Hanes ceased to be an employee of the railway after the 10th inst. Witness said that Hanes was about the G. T. R. property on the 27th inst., and he (witness) asked him to get off the property, as he was a trespasser, because he was not then in the employ of the company. Notices were posted notifying all parties, excepting employees to keep off the railway premises.. Witness knew Hanes and on the 27th inst., when he, (the witness) accosted the accused, the latter said his name was Pretty. Hanes was then walking on the track, a few hundred yards east of the station..

Hanes testified that he had been a yard brakeman on the G. T. R here for about 8 months. He was on the G. T. R. property on the 27th inst. He went down to see a friend at the east end of the yard and considered he was not trespassing when he was walking upon the track. He was not in any building and did not in any way interfere with the men, and had no intention of doing so. and had no intention of inciting the men to do any wrong or doing any wrong himself. He did not see any signs in reference to trespassers on the railway property.

At the conclusion of Hanes' testimony the case was closed.. After argument by counsel in the case the Magistrate found Hanes guilty of trespass and imposed a fine of $1 and costs

CHARBONNEAU'S CASE.

A. C. Charbonneau was last evening brought to the city by Chief Newton from Brockville. He is charged with trespassing on G. T. R. property here and obstructing an officer of the company in the discharge of his duties. As the prosecution was not prepared to proceed the case was enlarged until Friday next, the accused being liberated on bail.. Charbonneau was yesterday fined $50 and costs—$64 in all—in Brockville.

A charge of trespass was also preferred against a young man named Wilbur but he was fromally acquitted without any evidence being submitted.

In all the cases Mr. Butler appeared for the Railway company and Mr. Carnew for the accused..

A Birthday Party.

Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, of Bridge Street east, gave a birthday party for her niece, Miss Alice Orr, daughter of Col. Orr, of Madoc, who attained her sixteenth birthday on Wednesday. Twenty young ladies spent the afternoon on the Bay in Mr. O'Flynn's yacht, the "Allie Dale," and on their return in the evening repaired to Mrs. O'Flynn's home on Bridge street where refreshments were served and a merry evening spnt. The yacht does not often carry as interesting a crowd as it had on Wednesday, when twenty, happy, bright and merry girls of Belleville were out for a good time. We join in congratulating Miss Orr on her attaining this interesting time in her girlhood.

MODEL MILITARY CAMP

American Troops Will Occupy it at the Canadian National

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be occupied by American troops this year. The 65th Regiment of Buffalo, 600 strong will be there the first week, and the 3rd Regiment N. Y. National Guards, 12 companies strong, the second week. This will furnish a splendid opportunity of comparing Canadian and American military systems.

A number of our Rochester friends, who were here attending the Reunion, returned home last night..

A Stroke of Luck.

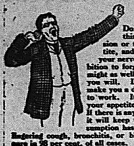
The fact that Lord Annaly, who bears the curious nickname of "Sloper," has been appointed a permanent Lord-in-Waiting to the King recalls the fact that the fortunes of the family were partly due to a stroke of luck. The father of the first peer had dealings with a city firm in state lottery tickets, and on one occasion the firm sent him by mistake a number of whole tickets instead of quarters, eighths, and sixteenths. As he could not dispose of them they were left on his hands, and he wrote to say it must not occur again, but meanwhile one of the offending tickets had drawn a prize of $100,000.

Picture Which Led to Marriage.

The recent death of Sir William Butler recalls the romantic story of his marriage. He was lying ill at Haslar Hospital after the Ashanti Campaign, and his friends almost bored him beyond endurance with their descriptions of Miss Elizabeth Thompson's picture, "The Roll Call." At the first opportunity he saw the picture, and was so impressed with it that he asked his friend, the Duchess of St. Albans, to secure for him an introduction to the artist. This she did, and in a few weeks the gallant soldier and artist were married.

"No Tips."

Lord Sefton, famous as a hunter of big game, was Master of the Horse for two years. For holding this position he was entitled to a salary of $12,500, and also to claim as a "tip" the silver plate used at the King's table on Coronation Day. His lordship, however, does not agree with tipping, and at both his country house in South Lancashire and his shooting-box in the north the visitor finds the welcome legend prominently displayed in all the bedrooms, "No gratuities are to be given to any of the servants."



Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor apetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

FLOWERS IN HISTORY.

Some Costly Bouquets and Floral Wreaths—Queen Victoria's Rose.

It is stated that over $250,000 was paid to Covent Garden alone for flowers to be made into wreaths for Queen Victoria's funeral. It is safe to say that this large sum has been more than doubled in the purchase of floral mementoes for that of our late King, for many of the wreaths—like that of the Sultan of Zanzibar, which was 14 feet by 7 feet and contained over 500 chosen orchids, and that of the Emperor of Japan, which measured 5 1-2 feet in diameter—cost considerably over $500 apiece.

Flowers have played an important part in the world's history.

In the national insignia see what a place they take—the rose standing for England, the thistle representing Scotland, and the shamrock Ireland.

For a flower the late Count de Chambord lost France. There came a moment when the throne was offered "King" Henry. But he must accept, with the sceptre and the gilded chair, the tri-colored flag. Another man would have taken the bauble and the seat, the crown and all its troubles; but Henri Cinq was not that sort of pretender. "Either I have the lilies and the white flag, or I remain an exile," he said, and with this he crushed all the hopes of the Bourbons.

It was with a white rose that Queen Victoria wooed and won Prince Albert. "I gave him a flower," she writes in her diary. "It was a white rose." As the monarch of a great country, she could receive no proposal from a prince of a small state, and till she gave him the rose he could not aspire to her hand. With what feelings he received it is told in the story of his life.

Flowers have played a great part in politics. There were the Wars of the Roses—red and white; and Lord Beaconsfield's flower, the primrose, has a million devotees to-day in England.

A fight took place not many years ago over an artificial forget-me-not. A gentleman sent it to a damsel whom he knew, and it fell into the hands of the elder brother of the lady. There was nothing in the letter that contained the flower to indicate why it was forwarded, not a word of all the epistle alluded to it, but the brother challenged the sender. Each fired at the same moment, both fell dead, and to this day no one knows why the artificial forget-me-not was sent.

The First Aviator.

Was Harold the last of the Saxon Kings, our first aviator? This is a point seriously maintained by ancient biographers of the Saxon King who perished in the Battle of Hastings. In the course of an article in The Windsor Magazine a writer recalls a tradition which cannot of course be either disputed or disproved to-day, but was of sufficient interest to be retold even by the poet Milton in his "History of the Anglo-Saxons," where the poet-historian says: "Harold was, in his youth, strangely aspiring had made and fitted wings to his hands and feet; with these on the top of a tower, spread out to gather air, he flew more than a furlong; but the wind being too high, came fluttering down, to the maiming of all his limbs; yet so conceited of his art, that he attributed the cause of his fall to the want of a tail, as birds have, which he forgot to make to his hinder parts. This story, though seeming otherwise too light in the midst of a sad narration, yet for the strangeness thereof, I thought worthy enough the placing."

An Extraordinary Shower.

Daniel O'Connell, the Irish agitator, once complained in the House of Commons of a report of a speech in a London newspaper which, he said, put into his mouth opinions he had never expressed. He vowed that if the editor did not apologize he would move that he be brought to the bar for a breach of privilege. Next day the reporter of the speech waited upon O'Connell and gave a most remarkable explanation. He stated that during his walk from the House to his office in Fleet street the rain streamed into his pockets and obliterated the notes of his speech.

"I accept the explanation," said O'Connell good humoredly, "but let me say that it must have been a very extraordinary shower of rain, for it not only washed out of your notebook the speech I delivered, but washed in another of an entirely different character."

Kangaroos.

Kangaroos use their hands very readily to hold food in and to put it to their mouths. As their fore legs are so short that they have to browse in a stooping position, they seem pleased when able to secure a large bunch of cabbage or other vegetable provender and to hold it in their hands to eat. Sometimes the young kangaroo, looking out of the pouch, catches one or two of the leaves which the old one drops, and the pair may be seen each nibbling at the salad held in their hands, one, so to speak, "one floor" above the other.

Survival of a Custom.

On gateposts you will frequently find a stone ball. Who would ever suppose that the balls on the gateposts were the heads of family enemies? It was once the custom to stick your enemy's gory head as a trophy on the gatepost. On the gates of towns were stuck the heads of traitorous persons. In old London, for instance, the bridge gate and Temple Bar were always decorated with ghastly relics of the kind, and the memory of the custom survives on the gateposts of modern suburban villas.

Church Becomes Theatre.

A number of workmen are transforming an old building in Praed street, Paddington, London, into a "luxurious cinematograph theatre"—as the notice-board has it. The transformation is of somewhat unusual interest, notwithstanding the number of derelict chapels that have shared a similar fate. The building is the chapel where Dr. Clifford first commenced his ministrations.

and that it resembled him exactly," said the artist.

"There are hundreds of men in whose faces cannot be traced the features of childhood," said Sir Alan. "I am not singular in that respect."

But he was beginning to lose confidence, the calm, serene eyes of the picture seemed to follow and reproach him; it was agony for him to stand before it, yet he dare not move.

Perhaps earth had no greater reproach than the smiling pictured face of the dead friend he had betrayed. Great drops of perspiration began to gather on his brow, and still the serene eyes met his own...

"It is useless for you to persevere in your denial," said Captain Chandos, his voice severe and cold.

"If you give me the trouble and expense of sending to Wabash, you must be quite sure that you must be found out at once, and money then will be in other hands than mine. We have sufficient evidence to cause you to be committed for trial. Why imprison yourself for a year? Why add to the wrong you have done? Why injure me still more?"

"You are quite mistaken," said Sir Alan; "I have nothing to confess."

But his courage was giving away. They knew it, who saw how the sight of the picture tortured him; how he tried not to see it; yet as though irresistibly compelled, his eyes ever wandered to it. Once he drew back with a quick frightened start, for to his feverish, excited imagination it seemed that the dead lips opened, and Alan's voice said:

"You will be true to my trust, Paul?"

He recovered himself quickly, and then again wondered if he were going mad, for the room and the faces faded from him, and he stood with Esther's Bible in his hands, trying to help Alan Wayne die.

"I have nothing to confess," he said finally.

Then Vivian Chandos, like a lion aroused, stood up.

"Do you dare to say so with that face before you?" he cried. "Do you dare to persist in a lie? Listen, the dead speaks"— the voice that convicts you, Paul Lynne, of fraud, of deceit, of theft, of cruel deception, of base betrayal, is a voice from the grave. Hear Alan Wayne's own words."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Brought To Bay.

Sir Alan [illegible] looked aghast when, from a roll of papers, Captain Chandos drew forth one that seemed familiar to him.

For one moment his heart gave a great bound — then stood still. What could it be that every one seemed to look upon as a death warrant?

Mr. Grey shaded his eyes as he listened, and unwonted emotion came upon the worldly, cynical face of Lord Damar.

In the midst of a silence that was unutterably painful, the clear voice of Captain Chandos rang out, and his words were the words of doom:

(To be continued.)

How Ostriches Are Plucked.

When the plucking-time comes round, it is necessary to collar the troop of ostriches. This is done by sending about half a dozen men into the enclosure on foot, and a couple on horse-back, to bring the stragglers in. The birds are driven into a small kraal, about forty yards square, and in this kraal the plucking-boxes stand. The birds are then caught, and, as quickly as possible, small linen bags are slipped over their heads—a process which immediately conquers the bird, for, finding himself in darkness, he will stand trembling, and ready to be pushed in any direction.

With the bags over their heads, the birds are pushed into the plucking-boxes. A man standing outside the box at each side gets hold of the wing, and clips the feather from it; then, walking round to the tail, clips the tail-feathers also, until the whole troop has passed through the plucking-boxes. Six men will pluck 150 birds in one day.—Cape Argus.

A Realm of Romance.

Africa has been full of romance; fortunes have been made and squandered in a day. The history of the Farvie Mine, situated not far from Bulawayo, Rhodesia, is most romantic.

Not long since this mine was given up as worthless, and changed hands for a ten-pound note. The purchasers commenced work in earnest, with most gratifying results; so much so that Rhodesia, Ltd., declared the output of the Farvie Mine, after thirty days' working from a six-stamp battery and one grinding-pan to be: From 819 tons of ore crushed, 2,180 ounces of gold; also 23 ounces from 125 tons of cyanide sands; and 167 ounces from 544 tons of cyanide slimes, as well as 290 ounces of silver. The total yield of gold was valued at $50,000.

A Sure Cure for Surliness.

There is a curious plant that grows in Arabia, and is known by the name of the "laughing plant." This name comes from the fact that anyone who eats its seed cannot control his laughter. The natives of the district where the plant grows dry the seeds, and reduce them to powder. A small dose of this powder makes those who eat it act very much like foolish people. The soberest person will dance, shout, and laugh like a madman, and rush about, cutting the most ridiculous capers for an hour. At the end of this time the reaction comes. The dancer is exhausted, and a deep sleep comes upon him. After a nap of several hours, he wakens, with no recollection of the antics he has performed—Madras Mail.

Smoking Before Tobacco.

It seems probable that there were smokers in England long before the introduction of tobacco, according to The London Graphic. Pipes have been discovered imbedded in the mortar of churches built before Europe's first acquaintance with tobacco, and it seems only reasonable to suppose that the people of that day smoked herbs of some sort, either medically or for pleasure. Colt-foot was inhaled for asthma, though whether a pipe was used in the process remains a matter for conjecture.

"FROG AND FLATIRON."

The Ins and Outs of Inns and Stout—The "Pig and Whistle."

These warm days Englishmen do a good deal of cycling or walking in the country on their spare afternoons; and it is not improbable that, their throats parched by the hot sun and the dust, they will drop in at the "Frog and Flatiron" for a glass of bitter, which Good Queen Bess herself described as "an excellent wash." If it is not the "Frog and Flatiron," it may be the "Pig and Whistle," or the "Green Man," or "Spotted Dog"—in fact, the English countryside is dotted with signboards bearing the most extraordinary legends.

Why, for instance, should "Frog" and "Flatiron" be coupled together? The answer is simple. Two publicans had amassed great wealth, one at an inn called the "Frog," the other at an inn called the "Flatiron." They amalgamated. Neither cared to abandone the outward and visible sign of his success, so the joint venture was thenceforward known as the "Frog and Flatiron."

Again, why the "Goat and Compass"? Simply a corruption of the Puritan motto, "God encompasses us." Why "Bag o' Nails"? Say "Bacchanals," and you have it. Why "Pig and Whistle"? Merely a perversion of the wording "Peg and Wassail," pegs being formerly used to mark tankards into measured doses.

There is no aspect of his subject Mr. Hackwood does not treat. It is interesting to Londoners to learn that "In the regime of King Edward the Third only three taverns were allowed in England: one in Chepe, one in Walbrook, and the other in Lombard Street."

Later, however, the custom spread considerably, and official ale-tasters were introduced, whose duty it was to go round to every ale-brewer, and taste the ale on the day it was brewed. For approving and passing the brew he was entitled to a fee of "one gallon of strong ale and two gallons of small wort"; so it may be taken his verdict was generally favorable.

Subsequently this gentleman gave place to the official ale-tester.

The official ale-tester wore leather breeches. He would enter an inn unexpectedly, draw a glass of ale, pour it on a wooden bench, and then sit down in the little puddle he had made. There he would sit for thirty minutes by the clock. He would converse, he would smoke, he would drink with all who asked him to; but he would be very careful not to change his position in any way. At the end of the half-hour he would make as if to rise, and this was the test of the ale; for if the ale was impure, if it had sugar in it, the tester's leather breeches would stick fast to the bench, but if there was no sugar in the liquor, no impression would be present. In other words, the tester would not stick to his seat.

Lucky "London."

One of the most remarkable facts in connection with dramatic nomenclature is the extraordinary success which has attended well-nigh every play which contains the name of "London" in its title. Most notable of all, perhaps, is Mr. George R. Sims' famous drama, "The Lights o' London," which, since its production twenty-five years ago by the late Mr. Wilson Barrett, has been played in every corner of the English-speaking world, and has brought a huge fortune to its clever author.

Then, again, there is "London Assurance," written by Dion Boucicault when a boy of twenty-one, and which has enjoyed a success second only to "The School for Scandal." There is also "London Day by Day," a piece which has been toured for years with unvaryingly good results; "Whilst London Sleeps," which ran continuously in the provinces for nearly twenty years; "the Streets of London," which to this day (though nearly fifty years old) may be relied upon to draw a bumper house; and "Her Luck in London," which, although not so well known to London audiences as to provincial, has scored a big triumph and is filling theatres all over Great Britain night after night.

SAVED BY A SNUFF BOX.

Fit of Sneezing Kept Tiger From Eating English Officer.

Perhaps no man's life was ever saved to him by a more curious circumstance than that attending the experience of a captain of the Bengal Lancers. He had been on a visit to a civilian friend in Rajputana, and went out for a walk in the country about sunset.

After going four or five miles he found himself in a narrow path on the side of a steep hill. The path was a mere ledge in the rock, with a deep chasm on one side and a wall of solid rock on the other. It was not a pleasant place in which to come face to face with a big tiger; but that was just what happened to the captain.

It was too late to withdraw; so he determined to brave it out. The animal had evidently been asleep; for it continued for a few moments to lick itself into full wakefulness. The captain stood still. Presently the tiger took a few steps forward and made a dash at him. Luckily its teeth seized him by the flap of his coat, just over the breast, so that he was not hurt by the blow.

Then the captain had a chance to appreciate the feelings of a mouse when it is shaken by a cat. The tiger shook him till his senses left him. Perhaps it was as well they did leave him; for the beast held him over the deep chasm, and a fall would have been as fatal as the animal's onslaught.

When the captain recovered consciousness, a few minutes later, he found himself lying flat on his back, with his feet dangling over the precipice. He opened his eyes, only to see the sky above him. He dared not move; for the tiger might be close at his elbow. So he shut his eyes and remained motionless.

Then he thought he heard a strange noise at a little distance, a sound as of somebody sneezing. His first thought was that some on had come to the rescue and beaten the tiger off; but this was proved to be wrong by low, disagreeable, tigerish growls mingled with the sneezing.

He turned slowly. He could hardly believe his eyes. There was the tiger slinking off with his tail between his legs and sneezing violently as he went, his face distorted by most piteous grimaces.

The truth then dawned upon the soldier. In shaking him the tiger had caused his snuffbox to fly open out of his waistcoat pocket, and had received the contents full in the face.

Women and Feathers.

James Buckland, who is fighting for a law in England to prevent the traffic in plumes for hats, calls women who wear feathers on their hats "scented barbarians." He is caustic in his arraignment of women who would have birds killed to supply them with vanity decorations. "The befeathered Herodias," says he, "cannot plead she errs in ignorance. The truth is that, for all their boasted refinement, some women remain in their impulses little else than scented barbarians. They are in such utter bondage to vanity as to be at the mercy of every whim of fashion, and when fashion decrees that feathers shall be worn they are absolutely without conscience or feeling, so far as the treatment of their victims is concerned."

The writer also attacks woman's ideas of art in clinging to feathers as an artistic adornment. He says: "Feathers as a personal embellishment appeal to her only because they are barbaric. What woman but one without cultivation of mind would imagine that she was beautifying herself by carrying about her person the corpse of a bird? To one of matured understanding, who is not usually enamored of the suggestion of death, a woman who exhibits such raw perception of the beautiful excites no other feeling than one of pity and contempt."

The Southern Seas.

Readers of old records of exploration in the South Seas will recall frequent references to the heavy swells of the ocean, which impressed the navigators with the idea of their remoteness from land. Doctor Vaughan Cornish explains the great size of the sea waves in high southern latitudes by the fact that south of the Cape of Good Hope the prevailing wind in all longitudes is westerly. Thus when a west wind springs up it finds a long westerly swell, the effect of a previous wind, still running. The new born wind increases the steepness of this swell, and so forms majestic storm waves which sometimes obtain a length of 1,200 feet from crest to crest. The average height attained by sea wave in feet is about half the velocity of the wind in miles per hour.

Esquires.

Two centuries ago, declares The London Chronicle, persons engaged in trade, even though of gentle blood, held they had no right to be addressed as "esquire." In the report of the historical manuscripts commission on the Welbeck Abbey papers appears a letter from Nathaniel Harley, merchant at Aleppo, to a correspondent in London, which concludes with the remark, "Pray, sir, inform your clerk who superscribes your letters that no merchants are wrote Esqs, but fools and coxcombs." And yet Nathaniel Harley was the brother of the Earl of Oxford, leader of the Tories, whom Swift proclaimed "the most virtuous minister and the most able that ever I remember to have read of."

Dust Laden Records.

Searching for important old manuscripts at the British public record office, whether by Shakespearean students or others, is disagreeable work. Nine-tenths of the manuscripts are covered with the dust of ages, and an hour among them makes the searcher as black as a sweep. Some of the documents are so fragile that they can scarcely be touched without their falling to pieces, such as those rescued from the House of Lords fire in 1834, which were so hopelessly saturated with water that bundles of them had to be squeezed dry in powerful presses. It has been estimated that it would take fifty housemaids fifty years to spring clean the contents of the record office.

A transformer built to test high voltage insulators in a German electric plant develops the enormous pressure of half a million volts across its terminals, the sound of the discharge being almost deafening.

SOME NOTED REPRIEVES

CASES WHERE CONDEMNED PRISONERS HAVE ESCAPED.

Nearly a Million Persons, Including Fifty-Two Members of Parliament Signed the Petition That Saved Mrs. Florence Maybrick From the Gallows—The Pardoning of Miss Kitty Biron.

The recent discussion in Ontario regarding the law which makes it possible for a murderer sentenced to death to secure a delay until Court of Appeal meets in the fall, recalls some notable cases where the death penalty has been deferred.

"Nothing rouses the British public like a sense of injustice done to a fellow-creature," said Sir William Harcourt while he was Home Secretary; and not infrequently prisoners have found themselves the subjects of extraordinary demonstrations in their behalf.

Nearly 80,000 persons signed the petition in favor of Daisy Lord, the poor girl recently released after eighteen months imprisonment. She had been condemned to the gallows for the death of her child in the most pitiable circumstances. In thousands of homes the story of her sorrow, of her despair, of her frenzy, had touched the heart and awakened people to sympathy with her and to indignation at what one of our most distinguished judges once described as an "antiquated and monstrous legal form" which had dictated the cruel sentence passed upon her.

"Mrs. Maybrick found guilty: Sentence of death." That news spread through the country one August morning in 1889 aroused thousands of readers of her trial to protest. The night had hardly closed upon the spreading of the news before petitions were being prepared and circulated through the country for signature, praying that the wretched lady might be saved from the scaffold. When completed, the Maybrick petition was the most extraordinary one for a prisoner these islands have ever seen. It bore no fewer than close upon a million signatures, including those of fifty-two members of the House of Commons. One of the most remarkable features of the Maybrick appeal was that something like 35 per cent. of the signatures were those of women.

At eleven o'clock one December night, eight years ago, a cab drove up to the entrance of Holloway Prison and a man leapt out. He was a messenger from the Home Office bearing a sealed despatch from the Home Secretary for immediate delivery into the hands of the governor of the prison. A few moments later the governor, the chaplain, and the head wardress were tramping down the dismal corridors of the prison to the cell in which was confined Miss Kitty Biron, the young girl condemned to death a few days previously for the killing of a stockbroker whom she had encountered in the street and mortally wounded with a knife before the spectators could rush to his rescue. Thousands of people hurried to append their names to the petitions in her favor. Even on the Stock Exchange itself people hustled one another to sign the appeal for mercy, and in less than a week 500,000 men and women were pleading on her behalf. The Home Secretary anticipated the presentation of the petition by commuting the sentence, but later on the monster petition was carted into his office urging him to a mitigation of the sentence of penal servitude for life.

Liverpool was the centre of another great agitation for mercy in 1898 when the people of Lancashire were aroused respecting the fate of a young lieutenant in the Royal Artillery, Lieutenant Wark, who had been condemned to death by Mr. Justice Darling at the preceding assizes. Wark was accused of the murder of a young woman. Even though guilty, there were many circumstances that appeared to make his offence one for merciful consideration. The jury had themselves strongly recommended him to mercy, and the public found their hearts in accord with their finding. A manly, but at the same time touching, speech made by the prisoner after the verdict had a vast effect. No fewer than 54,000 persons signed the petition in his behalf, and the sentence was later on commuted to one of merely three years' penal servitude.

From morning till night people flocked to the places in Edinburgh, Glasgow, and in all the large towns in Scotland and the North of England where petitions were lying in favor of the young woman who had been pronounced guilty of the murder of Jessie Macpherson, the housekeeper who had been discovered mysteriously murdered in a house in Sandyford Place, Glasgow. The jury had found her guilty, and the judge had expressed his entire concurrence in the verdict, but the public regarded the case as one of mystery. "McLachlan shall not die!" was the cry of thousands. Crowds flocked to the places where the petition in her behalf were lying, and in the end the sentence was commuted to one of life-long imprisonment.

Antiquity of Bells.

The art of bell founding is undoubtedly of great antiquity. The Saxons are known to have used bells in their churches, although probably but small ones, for the Venerable Bede, writing at the end of the seventh century, alludes to them in terms which seem to show that they were not unfamiliar things. The towers of the Saxon period have belfries of considerable dimensions in most cases, and at Crowland Abbey, in south Lincolnshire, there was a famous peal of seven bells many years before the Norman conquest.—London Graphic.

Wood For Pencils.

The French military authorities in Africa are bending every effort to increase the number of a species of camel which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of commerce.

WHY MEN CLIMB MOUNTAINS.

Sir Martin Conway Says It Is a Hereditary Instinct.

Sir Martin Conway, explorer, mountaineer and author, who was recently a guest of the British Authors' Club, discussed the problem why people should want to climb mountains.

The problem, he said, had never been solved and never would be. The most one could say was that in some persons it was an hereditary instinct. He took it that it was the desire to look over on the other side that was the great secret and compelling force which induced people to climb mountains.

Among the Buddhists mountain-climbing was the chief element in obtaining sanctity. Buddhist saints derived much of their sanctity from the report that they had climbed such and such a mountain. Mountains had always been regarded as the home of peculiar creatures, such as demons, fairies, gnomes, or dragons. In the Himalayas the belief was generally spread abroad that on one big peak there was a palace of crystal inhabited by royalties among the fairy folk.

On another, he was told, when the clouds formed the fairies were cooking their bread. According to the inhabitants, a man once went up a third peak and when he returned had lost his reason because the fairies had taken it away. "They warned us," observed the speaker, "that if we went up much farther the same thing would assuredly happen to us, if it had not already happened and was not the cause of our coming."

Sir Martin described one of his adventures in the Bolivian Andes. "I was 'chivvied' with considerable velocity from one mountain which I had essayed to climb with a theodolite, and I was glad to escape with my life. I was pursued fifteen miles by the enraged population of the neighboring village, and if they had not been good enough to throw stones, which hit my mule, I should have come away in a very different condition."

Lloyd-George's Struggles.

The Hon. David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had many a hard struggle with poverty in his early youth. When he was sixteen Mr. Lloyd-George was articled as a clerk in a solicitor's office in Aberystwith. He had passed his preliminary law examination when he was but fourteen.

Both he and his uncle performed almost prodigious feats of saving in order that the ninety or a hundred pounds necessary before he could study for his chosen profession could be scraped together.

The money was obtained, however, and for nearly six years Lloyd-George worked and studied, and when at length he found himself a full-fledged solicitor, he was without the necessary money to buy his robes!

Now this was a tragedy indeed, for in Wales a solicitor may not appear in court without his robes. The robes cost about three guineas, and the young solicitor could get the money nowhere. However, he got a case and a way was opened to him. Without loss of time he hunted up possible clients, got two or three more cases, obtained payment in advance, purchased his robes, and duly appeared in the court.

Clerical Frugality.

In the far-off days of 1766, the year in which Goldsmith wrote his immortal "Vicar of Wakefield," the Universal Magazine contained this obituary notice:

"Lately, Rev. Mr. Mattinson, curate of Patterdale, Westmorland, for sixty years. The first infant he christened was afterward his wife, by whom he had one son and three daughters, all of whom he married in his own church. His stipend was forty years $60 and for the last twenty not $190 per ann. Yet he died at the age of eighty-three worth $5,000, $4,000 of which was saved out of his stipend."

The correspondent of London Notes and Queries who quotes this astonishing record of frugality asks if Goldsmith may not have received the first impetus to the composition of his novel by reading this announcement.

Engineer's Mishap.

A painful and somewhat sensational adventure befell Mr. Boyd, an engineer, of Didsbury, Manchester, the other Sunday, while he was exploring a "pot-hole" in the limestone district near Ingleborough. He was climbing by means of a rope from the subterranean chamber, when the rope broke, and he fell thirty feet, breaking his thigh. A local doctor spent the night with him, and did what he could to relieve him, and his friends strapped him to a plank, hoisted him a hundred feet to the roof of the cave, then carried him a quarter of a mile through a tortuous passage to the outer world, the task occupying fifteen hours. It was not till four o'clock on the Monday afternoon that Mr. Boyd was safely deposited at the nearest inn.

Hears Own Death Announced.

To be informed that they were dead would shock most people, and it made a Tipperary man lose his temper. At a meeting of Thurles Urban Council a letter was read stating that one of the members, Mr. John Bolton,—who, as a matter of fact was present at the meeting—had been killed in his motor car while attending the demonstrations in connection with the reinterment of the brothers McCormick at Nevagh. The councillors treated the matter as a joke, and laughed heartily. But Mr. Bolton objected to being declared a corpse and made a laughing-stock of. Hot words followed, and he angrily snatched the letter which had been read from the official's hands, and tore it into fragments.

Owned the Isle of Man.

It is not generally known that the Earls of Derby were at one time practically sovereigns of the Isle of Man. They held the island from the crown on the condition of an annual payment of two falcons. But in 1775, on the death of the tenth earl, the lordship of Man devolved on the second Duke of Atholl, whose successor sold it to the British Government for $350,000.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

ROMANTIC WOOINGS.

Sir Henry M. Stanley Was Rebuffed When He Sought Miss Tennant.

Like an aroma, that haunts and colors the thoughts and feelings of our most tender moods, is the romantic odor that clings around the love-making of some of the world's most notable men and women, lending to it an attractiveness and fascination which neither time nor circumstances can effectually diminish.

Even a man like Sir Henry Stanley, resolute, brusque, and absorbed in his life-work, had one of the most romantic wooings imaginable, and certain it is that if any one had told Miss Dorothy Tennant, when she first met the great explorer, that he would one day lead her to the altar she would have laughed the idea to scorn. Dainty, daring Miss Tennant, whose charm and caustic wit had gained here celebrity in London society, openly expressed her indifference, almost dislike, for the famous traveler. This was discouraging to begin with, but Stanley, nevertheless, set himself to pay marked attention to perhaps, the only girl in his "set" who did not eagerly welcome a little notice from the most-talked-of man of the year. When, later, he proposed to the much-petted young lady he met with a further rebuff.

Sir Henry went on his way back to Africa to relieve Emin Pasha with unmoved mien, but a very sore heart, and to the onlookers the little drama was closed. But they reckoned without their host, and the sequel to the interesting love tale came when Stanley returned triumphant—again successful in his undertaking.

At a ball in Kensington they met again. Before the evening had advanced far Stanley and his first and only love were alone together for a moment. "I have not changed, Dorothy," he said, simply. "Really?" she asked, raising her beautiful eyes to his face and speaking more softly than was her wont. "I have though." And then Stanley knew that he had won yet another victory.

The wooing of that other great traveler, Sir Richard Burton, was quick and very unconventional. One day when Miss Arundel was walking with her sister in Boulogne, she passed a strange man whose dark eyes, as she afterwards confessed, "seemed to hypnotize her." Turning to her sister she declared, "Some day that man will marry me." The very next day the sisters again met the strange gentleman, who chalked upon the wall this question, "May I speak to you?" Miss Arundel chalked in response, "No, mamma will be angry"—and this was the beginning of one of the most remarkable wooings and wedded lives in the whole romance of love.

It was over a dinner-table that Miss Glynne caught her first glimpse of Mr. Gladstone, to whom she was to devote her life. "Do you see that young man?" a staesman who was sitting next her, said. "Some day he will be Prime Minister of England." No wonder the young girl's interest was aroused; and when, in the winter following, they met again in the lovers' land of Italy, what wonder that the wooing proceeded apace, and that the foundation of one of the most beautiful married lives in history was laid?

The love affairs of famous writers have ever provided an interesting and fascinating topic for discussion, and little wonder, when one recollects the romantic wooings of so many of our great literary men. Few more romantic wooings are chronicled in these affairs of the heart than that of the great dramatist and orator, Richard Sheridan, when he determined to make Miss Linley, the beautiful "Nightingale of Bath" his wife. She counted her suitors by the score; but Sheridan's devotion won her heart. He disguised himself as a coachman merely to have the pleasure of driving her; he escorted her to a French nunnery to rescue her from the persecutions of an odious wooer, with whom he fought two duels on her behalf. And this was but a type of the chivalrous adventures which ultimately enable him to lead her to the altar in April, 1773.

Possibly the happiest and most romantic of all literary love-stories is that of the Brownings'. Their courtship was by no means devoid of difficulties, thanks to Miss Barrett's father, who was a most exacting parent, and seems to have kept his daughter in considerable awe of him. The lovers determined, nevertheless, to get married. To face the anger of her father was, however, too much for Miss Barrett; and, therefore, the marriage was solemnized without his knowledge. Husband and wife parted at the church door; but a week later they met again at a stationer's shop, and set off for Southampton, whence they sailed for that beautiful southern shore which was to witness such happy years of married life — an ideal union, fitly described as one unbroken realized poem."

The love romance of John Ruskin was not without its pathos. Adele Domecq, the beautiful daughter of his father's partner, was the object of his heart's worship. She came on a visit to his home at Herene Hill, and the youth promptly fell "head over heels" in love with her "sweet oval face and graceful figure." But Adele could speak no English, and he knew nothing of her native tongue, Spanish; while his natural shyness made his efforts at love-making so ridiculous that she declared: "If this boy does not desist I shall die of laughing." But for young Ruskin it was the one love of a life-time, and from the day when Adele became the wife of Baron Duquesne his "heart was dead within him."

"Nine Tailors Make a Man."

The often employed phrase, "nine tailors make a man," is said to have originated in the following incident: In 1742 an orphan boy applied at a fashionable tailor's shop in London in which nine journeymen were employed. His interesting appearance opened the hearts of the benevolent tailors, who immediately contributed nine shilling for the relief of the little stranger. With this capital he purchased fruit, which he retailed at a profit. Time passed on, and wealth and honor smiled upon the young tradesman, so that when he set up his carriage instead of troubling the college of heralds for a crest he painted the following motto on his carriage door: 'Nine tailors made me a man'."

Experts declare that the interior of Bolivia is one of the richest unexplored gold fields in the world, needing but the development of the country to be the centre of the world's gold supply.

A Two-Year-Old Artist.

Mr. Briton Riviere, R.A., whose name has been before the public lately, once made the interesting confession that, although he painted a picture when he was twelve years of age, which sold for $100, his eldest boy drew a bird when he was two years of age "which," to quote Mr. Riviere's own words, "is far and away better than any of my early efforts." Mr. Riviere has painted all sorts of animals, but his favorite subjects are dogs, particularly bloodhounds. On one occasion a very fine bloodhound was brought to his studio to pose as a model. "I thought the animal showed strange symptoms," said Mr. Riviere, "and told the man in charge to take it away at once. That night the dog died raving mad."

How Do You Pronounce It?

The well-known newspaper proprietor and M. P. for Kirkcaldy, Sir Henry Dalziel, bears a name whose pronounciation offers a deal of difficulty to Englishmen. Even in Scotland the practice varies. Some owners of the name call themselves Dalyell, some Dal-zell, some Dal-zeel, and some simply DL, while the late George Dalziel often alluded to himself as "Dazzle." Prof. Dalziel, of Edinburgh, preferred the second pronunciation, and in his later years always dropped the "i" when singing his name. When challenged about it, he replied, "Why not? If an 'i' offend thee, pluck it out."

Not His Darling.

"I do considerable business with a man by the name of Darling," said a lawyer, "and the other day I tried to get him on the 'phone. The operator told me he was busy and would call me. I hung up the receiver, and about five minutes later the bell rang. Thinking it was Darling, I said:

" 'Hello, Darling. Been trying to get you for some time.'

" 'How dare you call me darling!' replied a girlish voice at the other end, and then I heard the click of the receiver. I wish I knew the woman. I'd like to explain."

Sympathy For Queen.

The Queen Mother recently received no fewer than 11,000 telegrams of condolence alone, and even more than that number of letters.

"RISE, SIR JOHN."

What It Costs to Become a Real Live Lord.

Finding one's name in the "Honors List" is not all "currant-cake and cockades."

Of course, it is a great thing to receive the recognition of one's country; but every time the state sees fit to confer titles wholesale upon gentlemen for "services rendered," it makes quite a pretty penny out of its beneficence—and this, be it added, not by the bald sale of favors, but by perfectly legitimate and recognized means.

Upon a number of gentlemen, for instance, was conferred the privilege of putting "Sir" before their names and "Bart." behind it. This is, of course, extremely pleasant. But another side of the case quickly presents itself when it is realized that every baronet has to pay nearly $1,500 for his title.

This is made up of the payment demanded for the grant of Letters Patent—that is, Stamp Duties — Crown Office swallows up just under half of the total payment, the Stamp Duties a trifle less, while the Home Office comes in with a modest little demand for the remainder.

Considering the difference in social standing of a baronet and a baron, $300 or so does not seem a great deal extra to pay for this latter most coveted title. Altogether, a baronage costs $1,800.

Proceeding up the social ladder, it costs $2,335 to be a belted earl, $3,455 to bear the distinguishing title of marquis, while the individual whose unhappy lot it is to be created a duke has to plank down no less than $4,045 in fees!

Of course, the big fees are the main items, but there are innumerable little expenses incurred in obtaining a handle to your name. Dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts—all have to purchase their robes and coronets. Then, there is $50 to be paid for the grant of armorial bearings, $5 every year for the license, $10 for the use of them upon your carriage, more if you want them on your notepaper.

The newly-dubbed knight or baronet will blossom out into a carriage, if he does not already possess one, which will cost two guineas annually if drawn by two horses, one guinea if drawn by one; while his new motorcar will be taxed anything from $10 to $200, according to its horse-power. Of course, he will employ male flunkeys in his household, which go cheap, however, at $4 a piece per annum.

Cockatoo 112 Years Old.

Cockatoos are well known to live to patriarchal age, and probably the oldest bird in the world whose age can be traced with certainty flourished in a well-known hostelry at Tom Ugly's Point, near Sydney, New South Wales.

When he had feathers enough to distinguish his species he was recognized as a lemon-crested cockatoo, but as he had been "under bare poles" for half a century, few living people can remember when he had more covering than he shows at present.

He was owned for eighty years by a well-known master mariner of Sydney, who died at the Solomon Islands in 1887, aged eighty-nine. The bird was presented to the captain when the latter was nine years of age, and he was then informed that Cocky was just the same age.

The bird was left as a legacy to a Mrs. Bennett, of Sydney, but she did not get him until 1891. Since that period the bird has lived at George's River, within sight of where Captain Cook landed, and where "the first fleet" anchored about the year of his birth.

None of his faculties is weakened, and he is as loquacious as youngsters of his tribe who may be a hundred years younger. In hilarious moments he will flap his stumps—you could not call them wings—and yell, "I'll fly—I'll fly! By gee, I'll fly!" a palpably mendacious statement.

Dislikes Happy Endings.

A remarkable fact concerning "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which Mr. Thomas Hardy, the famous novelist, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, wrote twenty years ago, is that many people sent him letters imploring him to reconstruct the story, so as to make the ending a happy one. But Mr. Hardy was never a believer in the "living-happily-ever-after" ending to a novel. He says that the unreality of such methods irritates him, and he refused to alter his story one iota. Mr. Hardy still works diligently, and spends all the morning writing in his room. No man dislikes social prominence more, and he is inaccessible to any but his most intimate friends. Mr. Hardy considers that for a writer to enter into a constantly increasing round of social pleasures and gaieties is fatal. He should be content with the life which he was leading when he first made his mark.

An Unassuming Lord.

What people like about Lord Selborne, the late High Commissioner of South Africa, who has lately returned to this country, is his total lack of "side." In his early days Lord Selborne did a great deal of work amongst the East end poor. "The first time I ever saw Lord Selborne," said a well-known personage, "I took him for an East end curate in a billycock hat." His father, the first Lord Selborne, who was one of the greatest lawyers of the Victorian age, once wrote of his son, "He has not hitherto been wanting, and I trust never will be, in pluck and resolution to do his duty according to his lights." The father's words have been more than justified.

Defining an Art Patron.

"Is your husband so very fond of art?"

"Art! He doesn't know a Raphael from a haircut."

"Why, I understood him to say that he was an art patron."

"Patron! That man wouldn't trade a club sandwich for a Bouguereau! What does he mean by calling himself an art patron?"

"Why, it says it costs him ten thousand a year to pay for the bogus masters the smooth dealers coax you to buy—and that makes him an art patron."

On electric railroads speed can be produced up to about 27 miles an hour at but little more cost than at ten miles an hour, but beyond the former rate there there is a rapid increase in cost for every additional mile per hour.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED at Intelligencer Office, by J. D Ford, also at residence, Murney street.

Lore of the Wedding-Ring.

In the Isle of Man the wedding-ring was formerly used as an instrument of torture. Cyril Davenport, in his book on "Jewellery," remarks that there once existed a custom in that island "according to which an unmarried girl who had been offended by a man could bring him to trial, and if he were found guilty she would be presented with a sword, a rope, and a ring. With the sword she might cut off his head, with the rope she might hang him, or with the ring she might marry him. It is said that the latter punishment was that invariably inflicted."

The wedding-ring was anathema to the early Puritans, who regarded personal adornment as one of the many snares of Satan. In the old English marriage service it was the custom for the bridegroon to put the ring on the thumb of his bride, saying, "In the name of the Father," then on the next finger, saying, "and the Son," and then on the third finger, saying, "and of the Holy Ghost," finally on the fourth finger, with the word, "Amen."

The ring was left there because, as the Sarum rubric says, "a vein proceeds thence to the heart." In the modern marriage service the ring is placed at once upon the third finger, the invocation to the Trinity being understood.

The "Japanese Bobs."

Prince Fushimi, who has been paying a visit to Great Britain, is a full general in the Japanese army, whose exploits have earned for him the title of the "Japanese Bobs." He it was who during the Russo-Japan War landed a division at Yanton, cut off Port Arthur, and set up the famous siege of that citadel. His son too, Prince Hiroyasu, who is a commander in the navy, gave conspicuous proofs of his bravery in the same campaign, and was wounded in one of the sea fights. This is Prince Fushimi's second visit to the old country. Three years ago he visited the Court of St. James' as a return visit to that of Prince Arthur of Connaught to Japan.

The man who knocks on the railroads belongs to the Lobsteria. As the railroads prosper we all prosper. When the shops shut down orders for iron are cancelled and the empties line the sidings, we are all up against it, and the bread-line forms.

Always in times of stress a vast number of people look to the Government for relief. But what shall we say of a Government which makes war on those who are now giving work to millions, and thereby assure us peace and prosperity! If the men in charge of our Government insist on being Business-Baiters, the hoarse roar of the mob, demanding work for bread, will again be heard and women and children will be pushed defenseless into the storm. Business in this country gives work and wage to everyone who wants to work. Let business alone.

Ex-Parte actions against the railroads should be forbidden by the statues. Burglary, hold-ups, strong-arm tricks, rape, are all ex-parte proceedings. And what think you of the dignity of a President who resorts to an ex-parte action in order to gain a cheap and transient legal victory over a very important part of the people, whom he has sworn to protect in their legal rights!

The railroads have only one thing to sell, and that is transportation, and the people of this country are willing and anxious to pay for the transportation all it is worth. We are not mendicants and we ask for nothing at less than its value.

He who tries to incite class-hatred and makes it appear that there is war on between the railroads and the people is a wicker-sham. The railroads thrive only as the people thrive, and every railroad-manager knows it.—Elbert Hubbard.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by tying around it a piece of string saturated in kerosene, lighting the string and allowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft, Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power, with fir, another soft wood, next.

Brockville Local Met With Accident

Brockville Times: Late yesterday afternoon the engine which hauls the Belleville-Brockville local, drew into the chutes near Manitoba Siding to coal up preparatory to the trip to Belleville at six o'clock. While standing there a collision was narrowly averted with a freight train which was being assisted by the pilot to a siding on the south side after making the trip to Montreal. The freight was backing east on the down main line with the shunter attached to the caboose. The strike-breaking crew confused the engineer on the signals and the train rapidly approached the passenger engine at the chutes. To avoid a collision the engineer of the latter pulled away safely but not sufficient time elapsed to permit the raising of the chute.. The shunter crashed into it with disastrous results to the cab, while the cupola of the caboose was torn away. A strike-breaking trainman was slightly injured in a mix-up.

Marshal Flint Explains Matters.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer:

My dear Sir. — Thanking you for your very kind reference to myself may I be permitted a word of explanation as to what may have appeared a lack of judgment upon my part in the organization of the Parade. I was informed and led to believe. that "Old Boys" would participate in the Parade to the number of 150 or 200.. I therefore had a banner prepared and placed in that position, which bore the inscription of "Belleville Old Boys" Behind this I expected our guests to march. I had to provide a suitable place for them. Before moving the Parade, I saw this long prepared space was not filled. I concluded the "Old Boys" would fill in, as soon as the Parade started, and with this view reserved the space. I anticipated, that the rear of the procession would move on and those who preceded them when they found the gap unfilled, would wait, but for some unknown reason, the rear permitted gap to remain. The "Old Boys" evidently preferred to view the Parade rather than form a part of it. This was simple one of the troubles of an organizer against which I was unable to provide. I had to take chances.

Permit me, in my official capacity to most heartily and cordially thank all ladies and gentlemen who so kindly assisted in so many ways in the preparation of the Parade.,

I am very sincerely.

Two Letters Which Speak Volumes.

Carlsbad, Austria, July 15, 1910

Hon. President Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Belleville, Ontario.

My Dear Mr. Bowell, — I am just in receipt of circular of Belleville Old Boys" Reunion, forwarded by my son from New York, and regret I cannot be present. Had I been in America I certainly would have been on the burning deck to enjoy the pleasure of meeting my old friends that are left and the sons and daughters of those who remain in grand old Belleville and join in the festivities you have prepared and provided for those who migrated years ago. Belleville has always had a warm spot in my heart, where I started in my business career in 1853. Hoping you will have a most enjoyable meeting, is the sincere wish and love of yours most sincerely,

BRENT GOOD.

32 Union Ave.., Montreal, July 27, 1910:—

Sir Mackenzie Bowell—

My Dear Sir— I return my sincere thanks to you, Col.. Ponton and all the rest of your "Old Boy and Girl Committee' for the kindness I received. Well Sir, I must thank you for the honor you paid me by riding in your carriage with the grand parade, it certainly was a fine turnout to see the great number of people on the streets watching the procession, in front of their houses and all the streets in the line of march., I also thank the ladies', old and young at St. Agnes' School grounds, a happy reception It certainly was a line of march through the city not to be forgotten, it was a fine day, will long remember it. I wish you long life and happiness.

Yours respectfully.

How the Big Strike Struck a Stranger.

"A Tenderfoot" writes the following amusing letter to the Ottawa Citizen:—

Editor Citizen,—I am only a gentle stranger in your midst, but I was born inquisitive and observant. Coming up to the Capital on the Grand Trunk railway I became seized of the fact that a strike was in progress. I gathered this valuable information from an egg of ancient lineage which struck me while looking at the scenery out of the window, as a rotten idea. In reading the daily papers I was naturally relieved to find that Vice-President Fitzhugh of the G. T. R. announces that he is "perfectly satisfied" with the situation, that everything is running smoothly, all trains on time, etc., and "the backbone of the strike is broken." Upon the next page I am charmed to discover that Messrs. Murdock and Berry, the American leaders of the striking men, express themselves as "more than satisfied" with the general results. Then again I observe that Mr. Mackenzie King, of the labor department, obligingly undertakes to frame up an arbitration to settle the whole disturbance which nobody seems to take any notice of.

Now, what puzzles me, as a brand new immigrant in this glorious country, is that as everybody seems satisfied, surely it is better to always have a strike. The company are pleased, the outgoing men are delighted, the trains are not only on time, but I understand under the guidance of a nervous strike breaking condutcor, the other day a local train was one hour and seven minutes ahead of time. This at least is a great improvement on the G. T. R.

The only thought that strikes me about this strike is—Where do the dear old public come in? I enclose my photograph, not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good looks.

Horses Drowned.

Trenton Courier: A valuable team of horses owned by Mr. James Stacey were drowned Monday morning in a peculiar manner. Mr. Stacey had left the team on Powers' weigh scales about 6.30, when the team of their own accord walked off, going back of the King George Hotel and coming to the dock, being filled with refuse, went over the bank and were soon drowned. One of the horses was blind and it is supposed pulled the other over the brink. Friends subscribed a small amount to help Mr. Stacey in his loss.

A Madoc Tragedy.

Madoc Review: There was great excitement in one of the city churches on Sunday recently when fire broke out in the summer headgear of the leading soprano. The conflagration had made considerable headway before it was noticed and the upper story and the attic were destroyed and the lower story had fallen into the basement before the hook and ladder company could get the hatpins pulled out. The superstructure was a total wreck, but the steel framework came through the blaze in fairly good condition and a new hat will be erected around it. The architecture was designed in O'Hara's millinery department.. The loss was $87.50, with no insurance and as the young lady is unfortunately unmarried it will come as a severe hardship.

Excellent Bill at Griffin's Family Theatre

The Griffin management made a ten strike when they succeeded in engaging the Klein Bros. for this week. This popular juvenile team of entertainers, who made such a hit at Kingston the first part of this week. These children are without doubt, the best buck and wing dancers in the world. This act in itself should be sufficient to pack the Theatre.

Miss Marshall, the dainty soubrette will contribute to the rest of the vaudeville programme.

The very newest pictures have been secured for this week and in all three reels, three thousand five hundred feet of select pictures will be shown. The management of the Belleville Theatre are going to a great expense in securing the best vaudeville and pictures obtainable and the Theatre will undoubtedly be well patronized this week as the bill deserves.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

What He Said.

"What do you think of this place?" asked the girl's brother.

"It's fine. Every prospect pleases," the young man replied.

"I heard mother telling father this morning that you had asked Dorothy to be your wife."

"Did you? What did he say?"

"What he said would make you go ahead and finish the quotation you began a moment ago about every prospect pleasing."—Chicago Record Herald.

Echo of the Rebellion.

W. J. McLean, who landed at York Factory in 1849, to enter the employment of the Hudson Bay Company at that place, and who in 1885 was stationed at Fort Pitt, and with his family was a prisoner in Big Bear's camp for 60 days during the rebellion, is now in Montreal. He declares that Inspector Dickens, son of the great novelist, being deaf and incompetent for the position, sent out scouts with Mr. McLean. Had they remained at the fort, McLean is almost sure that an arrangement could have been reached whereby the Indians would have gone back to their reserves. They in fact had about decided to abide by the Hudson Bay agent's advice, when the two policemen came along and upset everything.

KING VISITS MURDOCH

Minister of Labor Goes to Montreal to Confer.

Ontario Towns and Cities Send Messages to President Hays Urging Him to Consider Ontario's Plight and Submit the Case to Arbitration—Company Maintains That It Is Moving Half Its Freight.

Montreal, July 29.—Hon. Mackenzie King is in the city, but will say nothing as to what is up in strike circles.

About the time, however, the Minister arrived telegrams from all over Ontario began to pour in upon Mr. Hays, asking for the Grand Trunk to arbitrate, which the president of the Grand Trunk will decline to do. He wants to know why his good friends from the west did not shower these wires upon the strikers when they refused to arbitrate.

Apart from this, Mr. Hays will say absolutely nothing one way or the other.

Mr. King says he knows nothing of the Ontario telegrams, which have also been sent to Mr. Murdock.

Vice-President Murdock of the Brotherhood said last night: "Hurried by telegraph this date, numerous questions have been received from mayors of principal cities and towns and chairmen of Boards of Trade, deprecating a continuance of the existing conditions and intimating that in their opinion negotiations should be reopened, or arbitration resorted to. We have replied that the representatives of the men on strike are prepared, as they always have been, to settle the points of difference by arbitration or other equitable methods.

A. W. SMITHERS.
Chairman of G.T.R. Board, Who Is Hurrying to Canada.

"If the other principal party to the controversy should ignore the concentrated estimate of the situation as summed up in the telegrams sent to us, we trust that the public will place the onus of responsibility upon the party at fault.

"The Grand Trunk trainmen are on strike and prepared to remain on strike for the wage rates and conditions that were conceded to the trainmen on more than fifty other roads in the same territory without the necessity of an issue being tested."

It was stated by the Grand Trunk that the position was that they were handling their passenger business normally and making excellent progress with their freight business; that having been forced into the fight they were winning it, and did not need arbitration now. In proof of this it was stated that the company yesterday conducted their passenger business normally, and also moved 143 freight trains, comprising 3,149 cars. It was also stated that 56 cars of freight had been unloaded in the Montreal yards last week. On the whole system it was said that the locomotives sent out during the past week were equal to fifty per cent. of the normal service for the same week of last year. It was also positively stated for the company that there was no possibility of the locomotive engineers entering the dispute, and that although no definite propositions had as yet been made by the engineers, their demands would be fairly met by the company and when their present contract ran out at the end of this month their relations would be continued undisturbed.

Fatalities In Strike Riot.

New York, July 29.—Two men were shot and killed, four dangerously wounded and a score more or less seriously injured in a riot of strike sympathizers yesterday at the plant of the American Sugar Refining Co. in Williamsburg, where a strike has been in progress for a month.

Tecumseh, July 29.—About 3,000 devoted Catholics from different parts of Essex County, including twenty priests, visited Ste. Anne's Church on the annual pilgrimage to the shrine of the saint. The assemblage was one of the largest that ever gathered at the shrine.

Suspect Incendiarism.

Crossfield, Alta., July 29.—Three fires within twenty-four hours in this neighborhood have given rise to strong suspicion that an incendiary is at work. The elevator owned by the Imperial Elevator Co. was burned down Wednesday night, with 10,000 bushels of grain.

Boy Killed by Lightning.

Brighton, July 29.—Stephen Taylor, son of John Taylor of Hilton, Ont., was struck by lightning Thursday evening while standing in the doorway of his home and instantly killed.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Little Trading Done at American Markets—Hogs Steady.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, July 28.—The total receipts of live stock for Wednesday and Thursday at the City Market, as reported by the the railways, were 125 carloads, comprising 1809 cattle, 2348 hogs, 2112 sheep, 397 calves and one horse.

Fat Cattle Prices.

George Rowntree, who bought 780 cattle during the week for the Harris Abattoir Co., quoted prices as follows: Best butchers' steers and heifers, $5 to $5.50; cows, $2.50 to $5.25; bulls, $3 to $5 per cwt.

Stockers and Feeders.

Farmers being busy harvesting hindered many who need feeders from being on the market, which caused a poor demand for stockers and feeders, was the statement of Harry Murby. Mr. Murby bought 150 cattle, butchers and feeders. Steers, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, are worth $5 to $5.50; steers, 800 lbs., $4.50 to $5; light stockers, $3.75 to $4.25.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a fair supply of milkers and springers, which met a good market all week. Prices ranged from $35 to $70 each, but there were few sold at either price, one being reported at $35 and four at $70. The bulk of the cows sold from $45 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves was steady to strong at $3 to $7.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Over 2000 sheep and lambs were too many in two days for prices to keep at the high levels being paid all season up to the present. Lambs have taken a slump of fully $1 per cwt in less than a week's time, and are about that much still too high, in comparison with American markets. Prices for lambs are due to go still lower, at least all signs point that way. Sheep, ewes, sold at $4 to $4.25; rams, $3 to $3.25; lambs, sold at $6 to $7.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted prices unchanged for hogs, at $9.75 for selects, fed and watered, and $9.40 to drovers, for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points. Dealers are expecting a drop of at least 40c per cwt. for hogs, especially if the strike ceases on the Grand Trunk Railway.

EYE ON INTERCOLONIAL

William Mackenzie Needs It to Complete the C.N.R.

Rate of Progress of Work In West Says Railway Magnate Means That Three Years Will See a Line From Superior to Pacific—Now I.C.R. Is Wanted to Make Transcontinental Line.

Montreal, July 29.—William Mackenzie announced yesterday evening, probably the first time for publication, that the Canadian Northern Railway wanted to get possession of the Intercolonial Railway from Montreal to Halifax and Sydney.

The president of the C.N.R. stated that they had laid 261 miles of track already this year in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Besides the sixty-mile contract from the Pacific coast eastward, he stated that they had also given a contract for the construction of 140 miles of road east of Edmonton, and that they would now push the main line vigorously from both ends, till the tracklayers, say three years hence, meet somewhere in the mountains, thus completing their connection between the waters of the Pacific Ocean and Lake Superior, if not the St. Lawrence.

During four and a half years, Mr. Mackenzie said, the Canadian Northern had done nothing on the main line, but during that time they have built no less than 1,200 miles of branches, and from this policy of keeping the branch lines well along, comes the success attending the Canadian Northern as a freight carrier on the plains and from Lake Superior westward.

Being asked what his company intended doing in the east Mr. Mackenzie said: "We want the Intercolonial, which will be the natural extension of the Canadian Northern from here to the Atlantic seaboard."

"Are you not afraid some of the other fellows will get it away from you?" the president of the Canadian Northern was asked.

"There is not the slightest danger of that," said President Mackenzie as he left to catch the Toronto train.

Relations Broken Off.

Paris, July 29.—A special to The Temps from Madrid says that the Spanish Government has now received from the Vatican a categorical refusal to proceed with the negotiations for a revision of the Concordat unless the imperial decree of June 10, which authorized non-religious societies to display the insignia for public worship, is withdrawn.

The correspondent adds that Premier Canalejas is resolved not to yield this point and will advise King Alfonso to recall Senor de Ojeda, the Spanish ambassador to the Vatican, and suspend diplomatic relations with the Holy See.

Madrid, July 29.—Diplomatic relations between Spain and the Vatican were broken off yesterday.

Promotion In Civil Service.

Ottawa, July 29.—A big agitation is on in the civil service here to obtain a change in the new civil service act, having reference to the question of promotion.

The civil servants want the promotion examination to have reference to their departmental work. There are many who passed for promotion under the old act, but have never got it and never will while the present regulations obtain.

Peace Reigns Again.

New Orleans, July 29.—Cable messages from Port Cortez received last night announce that the embargo on bananas imported into the United States has been removed, and that the regular service has been resumed on the Honduran Railway running into the interior. This is taken as an indication that peace again reigns in the little republic.

College for Northern Ontario.

Montreal, July 29.—Rev. Father Paradis, whose name was on everyone's lips at the time of the Mercier regime in this province, in connection with the colonization movement, but who has transferred his field of labor to Northern Ontario, was here yesterday and told of a project to give the boys of that district a great college, where 500 will get a strong, scientific education.

Father Paradis brought one thousand families from the New England manufacturing centres.

The reverend gentleman says he has other fish to fry than to waste time to think of whether Canadians are to be English or French, so is going to get half a million out of the Porcupine mining district to build the college in question.

Blames Authorities.

St. Thomas, July 29.—The local Board of Health at its monthly session decided that serious neglect on the part of the authorities of the Belleville Institute for the Deaf and Dumb was responsible for the death of the child of one St. Thomas citizen. The child contracted scarlet fever from a sister who had been sent home from the institute and was allowed to bring home dolls, books, etc., that had not been disinfected after an outbreak of the fever in the institute.

The body was in a badly decomposed condition.

Two Hundred Sharpshooters Are Looking For Insane Murderer.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Quincey, Mass., July 30 — Two hundred sharp shooters of the 50th Massachusetts regiment, several of the Boston and local police, all armed with rifles and revolvers and with orders to kill on sight, scoured this city and district all night long looking for Louis Restelli, granite contractor, who shot and killed his mother, and another citizen and fatally wounded his brother and others who went to his protection.

Restelli is supposed to have lost his reason over business difficulties. He is still at large.

THINGS LOOK HOPEFUL SAYS MACKENZIE KING

(Intelligencer Special)

Montreal, Que., July 30.—That hopeful negotiations were in progress, but that he had nothing further to report, was all that Hon. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, would say this morning in regard to the strike situation.

The Minister of Labor is endeavoring to secure the strike leaders' consent to a basis of arbitration whereby strike breakers who have made good may be retained in the service.

This would leave many strikers out of their jobs.

President Hays is determined on the retention of capable men who have entered the service since the beginning of the strike.

SAY STRIKE WILL BE OVER IN 48 HOURS

(Intelligencer Special.)

Montreal, Que., July 30.—That the Grand Trunk strike will be declared off within the next forty-eight hours is the opinion of several who have been following things closely this morning.

The Minister of Labor and Labor Presidents have been in conference for a long time, and it is said that concessions from both sides are forthcoming.

WAITING FOR CLIMAX IN CRIPPEN DRAMA

(Intelligencer Special)

Father Point, Q., July 30.—Slowly and surely the steamer Montrose, with the much wanted Dr. Crippen and his typist, aboard, is making her way towards this police trap.

Sunday morning, it is expected, the trap will be sprung, and the population waiting for the event is increasing hourly.

Hundreds of people here don't know where they are going to sleep tonight. But, they are willing to take chances. When Inspector Dew arrived last night no accommodation could be found for him, but a newspaper man gave up his room and was rewarded with an interview.

Dew said that he was positive that Rev. Mr. Robinson and son were Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve. He had talked to Captain Kendall by wireless, and there couldn't be any mistake.

"If they are not," said the Inspector, "it will be the greatest surprise of my life."

MERRY WAR IS NOW LOOKED FOR IN SPAIN.

Intelligencer Special.

Vancouver, B. C., July 30 — Chandler Edwards, of this city, is suing the Bishop of St. Hyacinthe, and priest of the Seminary for the return of a hundred thousand dollars paid by him for extensive lands on Peace river. It seem that Edwards has had trouble getting a title from Pope Pius as head of the church.

(Intelligencer Special.)

New York, July 30 — Eric Johann Wider, height about five feet, the twenty-five dollar a week cashier of the Russo-Chinese banking agency, is languishing in the Tombs here charged with stealing six hundred thousand dollars in securities from his employers, pleading that his salary was insufficient to maintain appearances.

SEEING EYE TO EYE.

Conference on Veto Is Producing Its Results.

London, July 30.—The conference of the two dominant parties who are trying to compose the constitutional differences of the House of Lords and the House of Commons already have succeeded in bringing several gulfs that have separated them, and a statement made by Premier Asquith in the lower chamber yesterday afternoon indicates that the outlook for a compromise is more hopeful than had been anticipated.

Unless a rupture occurs during the recess little further of an official character is likely to be heard regarding the negotiations until Parliament reassembles on Nov. 15.

Mr. Asquith, after stating that the conferees in the course of twelve meetings had surveyed the field of controversy carefully, said:

"The result is that our discussions made such progress — although we have not so far reached an agreement —as to render it in the opinion of all of us not only desirable, but necessary that they should continue. We would think it wrong at this stage to break them off."

The Premier added that if further deliberations showed no prospects of an agreement that could be announced in Parliament at the present session, the conference would be closed.

The bill modifying the declaration on religion required of the King upon accession passed the House of Commons upon third reading yesterday by a vote of 225 to 52. In its final form the bill not only eliminates the phrases offensive to the Roman Catholic subjects of His Majesty, but it also makes it acceptable to the nonconformists by striking out the proposed statement of adherence to the established church. King George is now required to declare merely that he is a "faithful Protestant."

Canadians Did Not Suffer.

New York, July 30.—According to Dr. F. S. Pearson, London and Paris but not Canadian interests were active in the so-called Pearson syndicate, whose operations in American railroad stocks were so sensationally disclosed when Kuhn, Loeb & Co. took over the bulk of its holdings recently, it being later intimated that features of the syndicate's ambitious transcontinental railroad scheme might yet be carried through.

Mr. Pearson, head of the syndicate, discussed yesterday the parts which he himself, his associate, Percival Farquhar, played in the syndicate and the operations of the syndicate as a whole.

"I do not see that any harm can come from my telling you that London and Paris were the financial centres chiefly interested in the purchases of the syndicate," said he. "Some of my Paris associated with Mr. Farquhar, banker, and financiers connected with the Banque de Paris and the Societe General, were interested in the syndicate and further that they are still interested in the syndicate."

"Then the Transcontinental Railroad project is not dead?" was asked.

"There never was any such purpose as a transcontinental railroad in our minds," said Dr. Pearson, "Our purpose was solely to take an interest in such railroads as had a good future. We hoped to build them up and develop them."

Dying Boy Defends Playmate.

New York, July 30.—Lying wounded to death in St. John's Hospital, Yonkers, George Pelham, jr., only six years old, has sturdily insisted that the injury which brough him there was self-inflicted. He was in great pain, but he bore it like a stoic.

Physicians made an examination and afterward announced that the bullet had taken such a course it was impossible the boy could have shot himself. He was closely questioned and, little by little, the story was got from him. He had been accidentally shot by his playmate, Mildred Baxter, seven years old, and rather than get her into trouble, as he thought, he had determined to take the blame on himself.

Woman Hit by Automobile.

Halifax, July 30.—Granville street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, was the scene of a serious automobile accident yesterday afternoon, as a result of which an unknown woman is dying at the hospital.

Two ladies were driving their car along the street towards the north end of the city when they ran down the woman who was in the act of boarding a street car. The woman's skull was fractured and she cannot recover.

RECALLING HIS PAST

Grain Growers Ask Sir Wilfrid to Secure Free Trade.

One Speaker at Saskatoon Oversteps the Mark In His Address on the Occasion of the Saskatoon Reception—Wants Protection and Mushroom Aristocracy Killed In Canada —A Big Gathering.

Saskatoon, Sask., July 30.—The grain-growers of this district overstepped the work of their conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday, and got a sharp rebuke from the Premier.

John Evans, president of the association, a self-declared Liberal of the Gladstone type, but also an unsuccessful candidate for the Conservative nomination, allowed his tongue to run away with his discretion. From their attitude lately the grain-growers, who have adopted an organized campaign, apparently assume that the members of the Government will stand for any kind of talk.

Mr. Evans started out by defining protection as "organized robbery" and as the mother of trusts, as you, Sir Wilfrid, said sixteen years ago.

In connection with the iron and steel bounties he spoke of "that mushroom aristocracy, monsters of graft, that has been swollen since 1896, or since you came into power," and said "the Liberal Government has departed from all principles of Liberalism and to-day is the most conservative government on the face of the civilized world. You said you would skin the bear of protection; but we would like to know what you have done with the hide."

E. M. Macdonald, M.P. of Pictou, here interrupted with "You are making a political speech."

"No," was the reply, "I am speaking from the standpoint of the farmers"—(cheers)—I voted for Sir Wilfrid in 1896."

Dealing with the Hudson Bay Railroad, Thomas Lawrence, formerly of Penetanguishene, Ont., declared that Sir John A. Macdonald had made a football of the Hudson Bay project, and he added to Sir Wilfrid, "Don't promise more than once."

W. Rowlands of Aberdeen, a former American, advocated Government ownership. If the railway company had a line, he claimed they would route freight over long lines to the east in order to earn higher freight.

The Premier, after saying goodhumoredly that there was "more Tory politics than grain-growing in one of the speeches," went on to answer Evans' charges. He denied that he had preached free trade. He had promised only "freer trade." He said it would be impossible to raise revenue by direct taxation in Canada. Conservatives, not Liberals, had introduced protection, and Liberals had reduced it.

"We have reduced taxation and, as I hope, we shall reduce it again," he declared. "It is not fair to say that we have been an easy mark. Steel bounties were introduced by the Conservatives. If any one has been an easy mark, it is not the Laurier Government.

"I admit that we have not given tariff reduction as fast as the producers of the west would desire. It is not our policy to tinked with the tariff. We revised the tariff in 1897, and again in 1907. When time comes for a new revision, it will be my aim to meet the wishes of producers in this and all parts of the country."

Hon. G. P. Graham, in reply to Mr. Rowlands, said that the farmer would have control of the route by which he would ship.

Yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid laid the corner-stone of the first building of Saskatchewan University.

Notwithstanding the apparently hostile attitude of the grain growers earlier in the day, which was later repudiated by influential members of the deputation, there was no lack of cordiality in the reception given Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the members of his party at a big meeting in the hall at night.

Left $22,000 to Church.

St. Mary's, July 30.—By the will of the late Joseph Osman Hutton of Westover Park here, St. James' Church (Anglican) is endowed with the sum of $22,000.

Mr. Hutton also bequeathed $500 to foreign missions, $500 to the missions of Huron diocese, $500 to the Bible Society and $1,000 to the rector, Rev. Rural Dean Taylor.

Tomato as a Vegetable.

Ottawa, July 30.—For the benefit of the Board of Control, Taylor McVeity, city solicitor, has decided after much research, that tomatoes should be classed as vegetables and not fruit, a question that has been agitating fruit dealers and Ottawa generally for the past week or so.

British Cruiser to Interfere.

Teguicalpo, Honduras, July 30.—The Government here was informed yesterday that England has sent a cruiser from Belige to intercept an expedition which left British Honduras to aid former President Bonila in his effort to recover control of this country.

ALL ON THE QUI VIVE

Father Point Populated by Detectives and Reporters.

Anxious Bevy Await the Arrival of the Montrose With the Man and Woman Believed to Be Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve—Inspector Dew Has Arrived — Fifty Reporters on the Spot.

Father Point, July 30.—An important development in the Crippen case yesterday afternoon was the arrival of Chief Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard, who, following up the clue furnished from the steamer Montrose, sailing from Antwerp to Montreal, left Liverpool last Saturday on the White Star liner Laurentic in order to intercept the Montrose, and to ascertain if the suspected passenger and his boy companion were Dr. Crippen and the Leneve woman.

The Laurentic arrived at this place shortly after three o'clock, and Inspector Dew came ashore on the Government tender to await the arrival of the Montrose, which is due here during Sunday afternoon.

In an interview, the inspector said that he had come here to carry out instructions. He, of course, declined to make any statement respecting the case, and professed that he had not received any information as to whether the individual he came to see had been identified as Dr. Crippen or not.

He knew the man personally, and was certain he would recognize Crippen if he really was on the Montrose.

He is stopping at a private boarding house, along with the provincial police officers, who have come armed with the necessary warrant for the arrest of the suspected parties.

Besides being extremely reticent, Inspector Dew was visibly annoyed when having to face the cameras of the pressmen, and endeavored to remain as much as possible in ungetable positions.

Directly the Montrose reaches Father Point Sunday, Inspector Dew and the two local officers will board the vessel, and the inspector desires to do this very quietly in order to guard against suicide.

If the identity is established, Dr. Crippen and his companion will be immediately placed under arrest by the Canadian police. They will be landed at Quebec and held there until the arrival of the first steamer from Montreal. They will then be handed over to Inspector Dew, who will take them on the steamer, which will probably be the Royal George, sailing for England next Thursday.

Meanwhile the only authority for the presence of Dr. Crippen and his disguised girl companion is Capt. Kendall of the Montrose, and his own wireless messages to the authorities admit that no one else on board suspects the identity of the pair. Crippen is shaved, with moustache and false whiskers. Capt. Kendall says there is no doubt as to their identity. He got suspicious a few hours after he had been at sea and watched closely. He has watched his man ever since he came on the boat and is surer every day that he is Crippen. He had read of the case on his former voyage, and when he was in England he saw pictures of both of the fugitives in the London papers and when in Antwerp. He did not send his message till he had closely watched the man and was sure that he was the man wanted.

Meanwhile, Dominion Commisioner Sherwood has telegraphed his man at Father Point, "Be sure that they do not commit suicide." He is also told to make sure of their identity before arresting them.

Already there are half a hundred newspaper correspondent and artists on the job from many parts of Canada and the United States, and even from England. As there is only one telegraph wire out of Rimouski, there is bound to be some keen work to-morrow—if it is Crippen. Throughout the surrounding country word of the great mystery has spread and the prospect of Crippen's capture here has drawn a curious throng from farms and fishing villages in a radius of many miles.

Easterners Are Easy.

St. John, N.B., July 30.—When asked what he thought of the railways in the eastern provinces, Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission, said they had improved to a very considerable degree, but expressed the opinion that the people of the east must be very easily satisfied.

"Why," he remarked, "I saw things on the railways in the Maritime Provinces that would not be tolerated a minute in the west."

Auto Fatalities In Germany.

Washington, July 30.—One hundred and ninety-four persons were killed and 2,945 injured by automobiles in Germany during the year which ended Sept. 30, 1909, according to U. S. Consul W. J. Pike of Kehl, Germany, in a report to the State Department. In the city district of Berlin there were 843 injuries and 36 deaths.

Hotelman's Wife Suicides.

Leamington, July 30.—The wife of Henry Dring, a local hotelkeeper, shot and killed herself yesterday afternoon at 3.30, while in a fit of despondency.

Mrs. Dring was about middle aged, had long been associated with the hotel business in South Essex and will be greatly missed by the traveling public.

Acomia

ACOMIA—it's a magic word—what does it mean? Simply absence of hair.

A baldheaded man has ACOMIA—absence of hair.

A million more men will have ACOMIA a year from now if they do not get rid of disgusting dandruff.

Dandruff is caused by a germ. He works while you sleep and when you awake. He breakfasts, dines and sups on the vitality stored in the hair roots, and the longer you tolerate his presence the surer you are of displaying a shiney headpiece later on.

Kill the dandruff germs; that's the only way to keep from growing bald. Any capable doctor will tell you so.

How can you be sure that you are killing the dandruff germs? Simply by using daily for two weeks Parisian Sage, the most pleasant tonic for the hair the world has ever known.

Parisian Sage is the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing in the world. It is not sticky or greasy. It will make women's hair soft, silky, and luxuriant in a few days. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle. Fifty cents a large bottle at druggists everywhere and at J. S. McKeown's, who guarantees it. Training Camps Useless, Officers Are Inefficient.

COMPLETE TEXT OF FORECAST OF GEN. FRENCH'S REPORT CONFIRMS CABLED EXTRACTS.

The complete text of the article in the London Times forecasting the report of General Sir John French on the Canadian Militia which called forth such indignant language from the friends of the headquarters staff at Ottawa, shows that the cabled extracts did not magnify the extent of the criticism.

Following is the text of the article in the Times of July 18:—

Straight Talking

It was said of an English judge who was engaged in a foreign case of arbitration, when one side were dissatised with the award, that he remarked, "If you do not want a just award do not invite English judges."

The same sentence might well be adapted in the case of Sir John French. If the Dominion Government were not anxious to have a just report upon their military efficiency, they were foolish to invite Sir John French to report upon their militia. But I do not believe that Canadians in general wish for anything but the truth. They are too much alive to the military obligations that their geographical and economic circumstances place upon them to wish for less than the bald truth. I understand that if Sir John French's report is published it will disclose a state of military inefficiency in the Dominion that will probably be a revelation to most Canadians.

But Sir John French is ever a constructive critic, and although he may ruthlessly condemn much that the Canadians themselves may have thought good, yet he will have furnished them with a model upon which to build in future, and a model upon which with the intelligence, earnestness, and material of Canada, it will be possible to build quickly and surely.

I believe that it will be found that Sir John French in the first place, condemns the whole existing conception of the strategical requirements of the Canadian militia. This coupled with the nonexistence of a sound peace organization and an effective staff, suggests that from the very outset the Dominion defence forces are in a bad way. If such staff as exists does not understand the first principles in the strategic distribution of its forces, then it is impossible for it to have a sound peace organization.

I do not believe that Sir John French objects to the present militia system in force in Canada; he certainly would not consider himself called upon to advise the Dominion on the question of universal service unless he were directly invited to do so. But it must occur to him that the least to be expected from a voluntary system is that the volunteers shall carry out the obligations which they undertake. This apparently, they fail to do.

The Canadian Material

There is no doubt that Sir John French is highly impressed by the material, intelligence, and robust earnestness of the Canadian Forces. He has expressed himself as well satisfied with the Kingston Military College. In fact, I believe, he said, that it was as good as Woolwich and Sandhurst. But here, again, the Dominion Government does not receive a full return for the trouble and expense it is put to. Only a small proportion of the cadets pass into a military profession. The majority although they are officers of reserve, are so only in name. No attempt is made to oblige them to come up periodically for training. It would seem that taking the standard of the militia at 100,000 men, which is what is considered necessary to meet the requirements of the Dominion, the military establishments fall short of the required conditions. Further, the organization is entirely faulty, and it would be almost impossible to produce rapid mobilization and intelligent co-operation. The annual training camps, as they exist, are without sufficient system. Regimental officers, though keen and earnest, are insufficiently instructed, but would be efficient if the tests were insisted upon, while non-commissioned officers and men in a large number of cases do not carry out their militia obligations. The administrative services though conceived on the right lines and possessing ample material, fail through the absence of systematic peace organization and distribution of the units is unsatisfactory, and in many districts quite unworkable for purposes of mobilition. In fact the military forces of the Dominion are in need of thorough reform.

THE CADET MOVEMENT

There is, however, throughout the Dominion a great national sentiment with regard to the military obligations of citizenship. And with the sense of this obligation so strong and material so fitted for military training, there is no reason for Canadians to resent criticism that is sincere, well-meant, and altogether informing and instructive. Sir John French has had the opportunity of seeing much of the cadet movement in Canada. It is a trial movement, and has been fostered and encouraged by both the clergy and the schoolmasters with a patriotic zeal that can read the Mother Country a rude and trenchant lesson

If the Dominion Government and the people of Canada will profit by the great experience of the general officer whose untiring efforts have entirely remodelled the training and efficiency of the British army, the result of which the King has just seen at Aldershot, Sir John French will have rendered another service to the Empire as great as any that have preceded it

Summer Months fatal To Small Children

Every mother must know how fatal the summer months are to small children. Cholera Infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, and stomach troubles are all common at this time and many a precious life is snuffed out after only a few hours sickness. As a safeguard mothers should keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes on suddenly will bring the little one through safely. Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Inverary, Ont., writes: — "My baby was sickly for over a week with stomach and bowel troubles and cried night and day. Nothing helped her till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets, but they helped her right away and now she is a big healthy child with fine rosy cheeks. The Tablets are certainly a wonderful medicine and I recommend them to all my friends who have little children." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Serious Accident Befel Coe Hill Folks.

Our Coe Hill correspondent writes:

There was a very serious accident this week. C. E. Muffitt, merchant of this place was at the station. His brother Dan and the hired man, Charles Brownwell were on a load of slab wood The stakes gave way and the load began to slip on the already frightened horses. Mr. Muffitt, who walking ahead, hearing the crash, hurried back to stop the horses. One of the lines broke and the horses were turned to the fence. One horse stepped on Mr. Muffitt's foot, causing him to be thrown to the ground He was struck on the face by the horses feet. One wagon wheel struck his head, causing a wound needing to be stitched. The hind wheel passed over his shoulder. He has a bad bruise on the back of his head. He cannot lift his head from the pillow. Dan fell into a wire fence and escaped injury. Charles Brownwell was buried in the load of slabs and escaped with a few bruises. There were 2 1-2 cords of slabs on the load.

Jennie Hilts, a little girl while climbing in the barn fell and unfortunately struck her arm on a pig hook tearing the flesh from the elbow to the hand. She was sent to the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto.

The members of St. Mary's church, Ormsby, held a social in the school house, a pleasant evening was spent. There was a good program. The fish pond and a letter box furnished much amusement. Refreshments and lemonade was served at the close of the gram.

The members of St. Michael's Church held their annual Lawn social on the Church grounds. The terrible thunderstorm in the afternoon, with very little sign of clearing up kept many away.

Rev. Mr. Woodhouse's cornet playing was much appreciated. His wife accompanied him on the organ.

Mr. W. G. Green, of Springbrook played several selections on his bagpipes.

The young people enjoyed themselves with various games. The grocery was well patronized.

The Methodists of Coe Hill will hold their annual lawn social. A good time is expected.

Two Girls Drowned.

Napanee, July 29.—One of the saddest fatalities that ever happened in this district occurred on Thursday, July 21st, about 4 p.m., at Ahmic Harbor, when two young girls were drowned, Cora Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stone Maple Island, and Sara Brear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brear, of the same place. They went in bathing in Deer River, near Ward's eddy, and got beyond their depth. One of Mr. Jos. Ward's little boys saw them in the water and ran quickly and told his father, but when Mr. Ward got there they had gone down for the last time. The bodies were soon recovered but were beyond recall, life being extinct. They were taken to their homes and prepared for burial, and laid to rest on Saturday in the cemetery on Maple Island.

A PURITAN QUEEN.

Whose Court Will Claim Only Those of Unspotted Escutcheons.

Queen Mary of England is said to have many of the characteristics of a Puritan, writes Mary O'Connor Newell. Her training has not been such as to liberalize her views socially, at any rate in the way that Queen Alexandra's have been—or shall we say Queen Alexandra has allowed it to appear. Queen Mary was born to a great position. Her mother was a favorite English princess and the English people have never concealed that of all women she would be the choice for England's Queen.

Married to a man sharing her quiet tastes, her lack of particular care for fashion and the ostentation of wealth—in fact, of everything that King Edward stood for, including unparalleled popularity—it is but natural to believe those who predict a startling reversal to the manners of Queen Victoria's court in England; chiefly in the rigid exclusion from royal circles of all persons who cannot back up brilliancy, beauty or richness with blue blood and unspotted escutcheons.

Already Queen Mary takes out a piece of needlework or a bit of crocheting for the poor after dinner in the drawing-room and works at it standing up, for she believes that it is good for the health to stand up after dinner.

Of course, the only thing for the ladies of the court to do is to follow suit. So they, many of whom gathered around the pleasant bridge tables of evenings heretofore, stand also and teach their stiff, unaccustomed fingers the gentle art of wielding the ladylike needle again.

It is probably going to be a thoroughly well-bred court at St. James hereafter, with a blue-blooded attendance. There will be no surprises in the way of introductions therein of celebrities in arts not recognized as polite. For which reason by many it is feared that it will be a much duller court, too. This, of course, remains to be seen.

A New Lease of Life!

Only a few years ago a London "prophet" of the crystal-gazing variety declared that the end of the world was at hand. He was even able to furnish the hour as well as the date. But there was no panic, as an enterprising newspaper was able to announce that the "prophet" had just renewed the lease of his office for another ten years. That fact made even the "prophet's" most enthusiastic admirers suspicious.

About fifteen years ago there was a panic in the north of Africa. The prophet—a Mohammedan religious leader—so worked up the feelings of the natives that days and nights together were spent in public prayer. The panic spread from the Arabs to the local Jews, who crowded the synagogues nightly. When he had worked the emotion up to the proper pitch, the prophet thought it time to commence business. He let it be known that in the vision in which he had been warned of the forthcoming destruction of the human race, he had also been informed that he himself, on account of his many virtues, would be spared, and, in addition, his friends. People found that if they urged him sufficiently they could become his friends for a solid consideration in cash. The news quickly spread, and the prophet, instead of making his fortune, found it advisable to leave Africa promptly, and in disguise.

Bees in Warfare.

Certain Nigerian tribes find bees very useful in warfare. The villagers on retiring before an enemy excite the bees and set them free, and painful is the experience of the man who is attacked by them in the labyrinths of cactus which surround the villages.

Cradles Unfashionable.

Cradles are going out; children are not wearing them any more. People tell us that rocking is unhygienic. Babies, according to modern idea, should go to sleep naturally in a stationary germ proof bed with antiseptic pillows and a sanitized rattle. Sentiment may save the cradle for a little while, but sooner or later it will go to the dusty attic along with the haircloth sofa. Maybe the infant of tomorrow will bear up somehow under these accumulated misfortunes, will struggle along somehow to maturity, but what about the artists, the poets, the song writers? What a world of sentiment and melody has been woven around the theme of the mother and the gently rocking cradle! What kind of song will the poor poet of the future be able to make about an enameled iron crib with brass trimmings?—Success Magazine.

Telephoning With Light.

Phototelephony has reached a commercial basis in Germany. Ernst Rhumer of Berlin has contrived an apparatus by which intelligible speech can be transmitted over a distance of nine miles with the aid of a beam of light. The principle of the machine is based upon the sensitiveness of an arc light to sound, combined with the property of selenium, of varying its electrical resistance with the slightest variations in the intensity of a ray of light falling upon it. A searchlight projector at the transmitting end and a selenium cell in a telephonic circuit at the receiving end are the essential features of the apparatus. For use in misty weather, when speech would be inaudible, the inventor has contrived a method of transmitting Morse sound signals by periodic pulsations of the light.—St. Louis Republic.

Good Time to Turn Farmer.

In theory there never was a better time than right now for a sensible man to move from city to country. The movement has been away from the farm until prices of all kinds of food and fiber are high. There is nothing in sight to indicate that prices will be greatly reduced by increased production. A crop well grown and handled with good business judgment will be reasonably sure of sale at a fair price. There never was a time when it was so easy to learn new methods and the principles of scientific farming. A man starting now may receive at once the benefit of thirty years of the experience and study of good farmers and scientific experts.—H. W. Collingwood in Metropolitan Magazine.

Iceland.

Iceland is perhaps the only country in the world with a strongly developed literary history which remains in the same unchanged state of nature today as it did 1,000 years ago, when the characters of the great sagas roamed the rocky slopes of the picturesque island or when Leif Ericson and his hardy oarsmen sailed the seas, even to America, several centuries before Columbus was born. Professor W. H. Schofield of Harvard university will head an expedition to Iceland this year and hopes to find much of interest connected with the ancient myths and legends.

Sir John French on Canadian Militia.

In to-day's issue will be found the complete text of Sir John French's report upon the Canadian Militia, after a personal inspection of the organization and physique of those who compose the rank and file of the force. He praises the latter and unmercifully condemns the former. He only confirms what every one who has given any attention to the subject has suspected for years. It is well for John Frenchthat he is independent of the present Government, particularly of the Hon. Assistant warrior, Sydney Fisher, or he would have had his head cut off in a jiffy. Happy it i for Canada that there is an officer independent of and who cares little for Fisher or any such politician connected with the present militia department ofo Canada.

Editorial Notes.

King Edward's funeral cost $225,000. But that was cheap, as royal funerals go. They spent $2,500,000 burying Czar Alexander II. It cost $500,000 to bring back Napoleon from St. Helena. A million dollars went to the burying of Emperor William I., grandfather of the present Kaiser.—Buffalo News.

Cramps, Dysentery And Diarrhœa.

THE FATAL CONTINENT

AFRICA HAS BEEN THE GRAVE OF DARING EXPLORERS.

Many Intrepid Britons Have Perished Trying to Unravel the Secrets of the Dark Continent — Lieut. Boyd Alexander, Who Was Killed In the Rubber Country, Is the Latest Victim In the Quest.

We still call Africa the "Dark Continent." We might equally well term it the "Fatal Continent," for it has claimed the lives of a greater number of explorers than all the rest of the wild regions of the earth put together.

The latest victim of the African savage is an Englishman—Lieut. Boyd Alexander, murdered by natives in the rubber country of the Wadais. Wadai is the last stronghold of the slave trade, and is controlled by the dangerous Mohammedan secret society known as the Senussi. Lieut. Alexander knew the risk he ran. His death adds one more to the long list of British martyrs to the cause of civilization.

"I mean," wrote Mungo Park, more than a hundred years ago, "to sail east with the fixed determination to discover the termination of the Niger, or perish in the attempt." He did perish in the attempt. Near Broussa the natives made a fierce attack upon his expedition, and Park was obliged to fly down stream, taking the risk of shooting the dangerous rapids. His canoe struck a rock, split in pieces, and flung him and his companions into the raging waste of foam. Park made a desperate effort to swim ashore, but was swept away and drowned.

Twenty years later, in 1826, Major Alexander Laing, another hardy Scot, made a successful attempt to visit the mysterious city of Timbuktu. Before he reached it he was set upon by Tuaregs—those masked bandits of the desert—who left him for dead. But though covered with wounds, he pulled through, and reaching Timbuktu stayed there for some months until the fanatic inhabitants drove him forth into the desert. He reached El Aruan, a small oasis in the Sahara, and there was literally cut to pieces.

Capt. Clapperton was another victim, but his death was due, not to savage spears, but to the fever-laden mists of the Niger. His servant, Richard Lander, tended him to the end, and carried his papers safely to the coast. On his journey, Lander had many thrilling adventures. In one place he was caught by natives, and subjected to the ordeal by poison—that is, he had to eat a portion of the deadly Calabar bean. By a miracle he came through it unharmed, and afterwards, in company with his brother, conducted a fresh expedition, which solved the puzzling problem of the mouths of the great River Niger.

The greatest of all African explorers was David Livingstone, whose experiences of the "Dark Continent" began in Bechuanaland in 1840, and extended over thirty-three years, during which time he walked tens of thousands of miles over the bush paths of Central Africa.

His last journey was through the upper part of the Congo Basin. He describes the country as "one vast sponge, intersected by countless streams." The blazing sun beat down, and raised a constant stream of mist, and being the rainy season everything was saturated day and night. Under these awful conditions even Livingstone's iron physique broke down, and his devoted servants made a litter, and staggered on through the deep, sticky clay. On April 27th he made his last entries in his notebook; on the 29th he was hardly conscious. On that day they carried him into Chitambo's village, built a bed for him, and aired the hut with a good fire. He revived a little, and lay peacefully all the 30th. In the evening he called to his body servant—Susi—to bring his medicine chest, and from it took a dose, and then dismissed the boy. His pupil—Jacob Wainwright, a colored man—slept in the hut with him, and woke early in the morning to attend his master. He found him kneeling by his bedside. Wainwright waited a while, then, growing uneasy at his absolutely motionless attitude, touched him on the shoulder. The great missionary was cold and dead. He had passed from life in an attitude of prayer.

Wainwright and the others buried their master's heart under a great tree, then, after carefully mummifying the body, carried it to the coast. It was conveyed to England, and buried in the presence of reverend crowds in Westminster Abbey.

What is perhaps the most dreadful disaster in all the records of African exploration befell the French expedition of 1881 under Col. Flatters. After passing safely through the worst parts of the Sahara Desert, the treacherous Tuaregs swept down upon them, and killed nearly all his men, including his thirty camel-drivers, and drove off all the camels. The survivors, numbering fifty in all, started back across the sandy desert known as the "Thirst Country," pursued and harassed day and night by their Tuareg enemies. They met a tribe who professed to be friendly, and who sold them dates. The fruit was poisoned, and many died in agony.

At last they reached the wells, but these were held by the enemy, and in the fight that ensued all the Europeans but one — Lieut. Polguin by name—were killed. He struggled on with a few native porters. But now there was no food. The starving men went mad, fell on one another, and the fate of poor Polguin is too ghastly to be here described. Eventually, four sharpshooters reached the town of Wargla, the sole survivors of 88 persons who had set out full of hope a little more than five months previously.

FRIEND OF THE HORSES

LONDON POLICEMAN HAS CONVICTED 700 CRUEL DRIVERS.

Constable Valentine Perry, Who Has Just Retired After Twenty-Two Years of Work In Behalf of Ill-Treated Animals, Tells Interviewer of Some of the Clever Ruses He He Met In His Career on Force.

When Police-constable Valentine Perry, a short time ago, retired on a pension from the City of London force after twenty-two years' service, he possessed a record of which any man might be proud.

Since 1888, when he came to London from Great Malvern, aged, decrepit, and ill-treated horses have been Constable Perry's special care. His lynx eye spotted no fewer than 700 cruel drivers and owners, whom he promptly marched to the police-station or proceeded against by summons.

And between them, these 700 torturers of dumb beasts paid over $30,000 in fines and costs, whilst others languished in prison cells.

Meanwhile Constable Perry went on, looking for more offenders. His bag grew, and his fame spread far beyond the seas. From several of our colonies he received congratulatory messages on the relentless campaign he was waging, and frequently these epistles were accompanied by something more substantial than a mere compliment. In the course of time, one section of the community knew him as "The Horses' Friend," and another as "Val, the Terror!" It was this latter section, composed of habitually cruel drivers and carmen, who used to make a detour of two or three miles to avoid the spot where Perry was on duty.

So much the retired officer told a reporter whom he regaled with some excellent stories of twenty-two years' prevention and punishment to the friend of man. Here are a few, taken at random from Constable Perry's apparently inexhaustible stock.

It was on Tower Bridge one morning that Perry espied approaching a poor old crock of a horse, whose driver apparently noticed the arm of the law at the same moment. Without appearing to do so the officer kept keen observation, and when stopped tears were coursing down the driver's cheeks. He pleaded he was a poor man, that that was the first morning's work he had done for some years, and that he would rather die than be cruel to a horse. And it was not until Perry broke into loud laughter, and pointed to his pocket that the man discovered his artful ruse of producing tears with an onion had been detected. Despite his protestations of poverty, he was proved to be the joint owner, with his uncle, of a farm in the country.

Another man whom Perry charged tried a piece of bluff, calculated to strike terror into the heart of any officer.

"Don't you go near that there hoss, sir," he begged. "It takes six men to put 'im in the shafts, an' 'e's so smart an' sharp that 'e'll kick a gnat's eye out!"

But even this was hardly so far-fetched as the excuse of another driver Perry stopped. Taking the officer on one side, the man confidentially whispered: "Look 'ere, governor! This 'ere hoss 'as more than enough to eat, but trade 'as bin so brisk lately that 'e ain't 'ad time to eat it. 'E's bin workin' overtime!"

"The most fiendish case of cruelty I remember," went on "The Horses' Friend," "was when I stopped a lame horse, and removed from its hind foot an iron bolt four and a half inches long, and half an inch in circumference. This torture was inflicted so as to counteract in the other hoof the lameness due to a diseased hip-joint. I never more enjoyed seeing the maximum penalty imposed than I did in this case.

"I wonder if any of my readers have seen a horse cry? I have. I saw a man on Tower Bridge strike his horse two terrible blows with his fist on the nose. I rushed up, and found the animal in tears. When the man was heavily fined at the police court, the magistrate regretted that someone was not near enough to punch the man's nose as hard as he had punched his horse's. Perhaps someone had.

"Horses do some very human things. When I was standing at the door of the Minories police station, on the lookout for cases, two poor, overladen animals came along, and on arriving opposite me, they both went down on their knees, and refused to move until I had taken the driver into custody.

"Then, again, some amazingly ingenious excuses have been made by men I have stopped to induce me to let them go. One horse had a bad wound on the nose, but when the driver told me it was caused through the animal poking his nose into his pocket in search of sugar and so rubbing the skin off, I thought it a bit thick.

"Yes," concluded "The Horses' Friend," "cruel drivers are often clever romancers, but I must award the palm to the one whose horse was so weak that it actually staggered, and who told me when I stopped him that the animal was in the habit of having half a gallon of ale with its dinner, but that owing to the hot weather it had had a gallon on this particular day, and got tipsy!"

The Stationer.

"Stationery" has etymologically as much to do with standing as has "stationary." The original stationers, or stationarii, were so called because they sold their books upon stalls or "stations"—in London round about old St. Paul's Cathedral, in some cases against the walls of the cathedral itself. This is one of many trades the names of which have no direct allusion to the commodities sold. "Grocers," for instance, were so called either because they sold "en gros," wholesale, or because they were "engrossers," monopolizers. — London Chronicle.

BOOTS LACE THEMSELVES.

And Golliwogs Ride Teddy Bears at the Picture Show.

People who attend kinematograph performances are often greatly mystified by the clever "trick-pictures" which are now a feature of every program. So, herewith to lift the veil, and show exactly "how it's done."

The most popular sort of "trick-picture" is that where inanimate objects act with an intelligence which many a human being might envy.

In one, a lazy man while dressing falls asleep in his chair. The bewildered audience then behold his clothes detach themselves from their hooks, move across the floor, and fit themselves on to their owner, his hair gradually get smoother and smoother as if attended by an invisible brush, till, finally, it is beautifully parted, and his collar fasten round his neck, and his tie creep up and arrange itself in a neat knot, his undone boots lace themselves up, the laces creeping in and out of the eyelet-holes, and fastening in a bow at the top.

To begin with, the boots were photographed unlaced. Then came a stop to photographer to put the laces through the first eyelet-hole. He snapshotted this, stopped again to put the laces through another hole, and so on till the boots were finally laced up. Each eyelet-hole represented a stop and a fresh photograph; but when the picture was completed, the pauses were cut out and each snapshot joined up. The result was the audience saw the laces quickly wind in and out of the eyelet-holes of their own accord!

Suppose, again, it is desired to show a Golliwog having a walk. Photo No. 1 shows the doll in position. Then a stop while the photographer lifts one of the figure's feet for photo No. 2. The next photo will show the foot on the ground again, and its fellow-member raised, and thus several snapshots are necessary to record a single step. Multiply these by some hundreds, and join them all together to run in quick succession, and—hey, presto!—you have Mr. Golliwog not only walking, but jumping, dancing, riding on an equally live Teddy Bear, and generally behaving in the way one would expect such an eccentric-looking gentleman to behave.

Coming within the province of "trick effects" are the numerous pictures where, for a brief instant, a dummy has to take the place of a living man.

Take the case of the representation of a scaffold accident, for example. The movements of the living actor are photographed right down to the actual moment when he poses for the fall. Then comes a stop while a dummy, dressed in similar clothes, is arranged in his place.

The fall of this with the scaffold is snapshotted, but immediately it reaches the ground comes another stop. The actor is then placed on the exact spot occupied by the dummy, with his limbs and clothing arranged, as far as possible, in the same way. At a signal the action recommences, and the camera records the writhings of the injured man.—London Answers.

The food for all folks

For old and young, in any season, in any clime, Shredded Wheat is the one perfect food. It contains all the rich, body-building nutriment of the whole wheat, made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. In the summer is a healthful and satisfying substitute for heavy meats and soggy pastries. It costs much less, tastes good, and is far more nourishing. Its continued daily use keeps the system in perfect trim and the brain clear and active.

SHREDDED WHEAT

Because of its porous shreds and its biscuit form, Shredded Wheat makes delicious combinations with berries, grated pineapple, sliced peaches, bananas, baked apples or other fruit, fresh or preserved. For breakfast heat the biscuit in the oven to restore crispness and serve with milk or cream, adding salt or sugar to taste. It is far better than mushy porridges or ordinary breakfast foods.

The Broken Trust

Dear Captain Chandos:— My fortune has come to me all too late. I am dying, and it has made me unwilling to die. You will take my place. Will you carry out my last wishes? Give to my friend who bears my papers to England what reward you will None can be too great, for he stands alone by my deathbed helping me to die. Every act of kindness you show to him is shown to me; for my sake, help him and give him a good start in life.. My second prayer is that you will cause a handsome monument to be erected to my father's memory in Wabash. My third prayer is, if ever you come across my father's old friends — the Westernes — you will befriend them, and say my last thoughts were of them. God bless you, Captain Chandos.. I hope you will long live and enjoy the wealth that has overshadowed my deathbed. My friend, Paul Lynne, will give this letter into your hands. (Signed)

ALAN WAYNE.

There was no sound save a deep-drawn, gasping sigh from the unhappy man, who listened with death and despair in his heart He could look into the pictured face and deny it.. He could take false oaths with impunity, but he dare not deny those words.

He saw the dying face, the great drops of agony standing on the brow now; he saw the white, trembling fingers slowly moving over the paper, the faint, dying voice saying to him: "This is my trust — keep it well."

"Now," said Mr.. Grey, "the dead has spoken; these are Alan Wayne's own words. I can swear to the writing What have you to say? Look first before you speak, into the face of the friend you have betrayed. I ask you solemnly in his presence, in the presence of the Most High God, to tell the truth."

He broke down utterly. For one-half moment he had thought of a sneering denial — of declaring the letter a forgery, but he dare not libel the dead . .

He bent lower and lower; he crouched beneath the gaze of those grave, sorrowful faces turned upon him.

Mr Grey laid his hand upon the unhappy man's shoulders

"I do not ask for fear of men," he said gently, "but in the name of God."

Then he bent still lower, and with a voice they never forgot, he cried: "Have mercy on me, for I helped him to die!"

There was a moment of subdued excitement when the calm, brave face of Captain Chandos grew white, as it had never done before an enemy's fire.

Then, in a grave voice, he replied:

"Mercy shall be shown to you for Alan Wayne's sake. Are you Paul Lynne as we surmised?"

Perhaps some part of his sin was forgiven him, for sake of the agony that mastered him, as he said:

"I am he.."

"Mercy shall be shown you," said Captain Chandos, "in proportion as you confess fully and freely. Keep nothing back. We can decide better then what to do.

There were a few minutes of silence They believed he was collecting his thoughts. In truth, he was wondering at the strength of the hand of God. He believed he had destroyed that paper. He could have sworn he had torn it to pieces in the hut, and then burned the shreds. He had destroyed some paper in that manner believing it to be Alan Wayne's letter.

Take Off the Fat Where It Shows.

Most women suffer much from humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most, there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. The hot weather dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, 1181 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Arctic Magnetism.

The campaign for the extension of our knowledge of the magnetism of the earth is to be extended into the arctic regions during Captain Amundsen's north polar expedition, which is to start from Norway this summer in Nansen's former ship, the Fram. An American observer, Dr. Harry Edmonds, has been selected to accompany the expedition for this special purpose. Amundsen's plan is to enter the polar basin by way of Bering strait and then drift with the ice. While it is not his special object to attain the pole, he hopes that the course of the drift may take him across or close to it. The increase of geographical knowledge is his aim, and he expects to be absent about four years.—Youth's Companion

The New Martian Canals.

In a recent bulletin issued by his observatory Percival Lowell describes his newly discovered Martian canals. These new canals are two in number and were discovered Sept. 30, 1909, to the east of the Syrtis Major, where no canal had ever previously been seen. They were most conspicuous. Not a trace of them could be found in the records of previous years. He regards the evidence as strong that the canals are not simply new to astronomers, but new to Mars. Measurement of their dimensions show each of them to be 1,000 miles long and some twenty miles wide. The Canyon of the Colorado would be a secondary affair in comparison.

King Solomon's Treasure.

In an effort to find King Solomon's treasure and the crown of David, a syndicate of Englishmen, led by the Earl of Morley's heir presumptive and a near relative of the Duke of Fife, are excavating at the pool of Siloam, on the eastern slope of Zion. Two members of the Turkish parliament are continually present, this being one of the conditions laid down by the authorities before permission to begin the excavation was given. Large sums of money were spent in obtaining the permit, in purchasing land and in carrying on the work. More than sixty men are engaged at a weekly expense of more than $4,000.

LIVING LIES.

Women Who Play to the Life at Being Men.

There are numerous instances of women living for long years as men. Most famous of such cases in England is that which was brought to light ten years ago, when an old woman, Catharine Coombes, was found to have lived as "Charlie Wilson." Few women have had so astonishing a career as "Charlie." Smoking a briar pipe, and dressed as usual in male attire, she first made the acquaintance of the Westminster police, when she walked into Rochester Row Station. To an amazed inspector she there told the story of her life. She was married at the age of 15 to one Percival Coombes, she said. Many years afterwards she wedded, as a man, a woman, with whom she lived for fourteen years at Huddersfield. For 45 years, she went on, she had passed as a man. As "Charlie Wilson" she had worked at the docks, in a printing office, on board ship, and as a painter and decorator. She is also said to have been employed as a bricklayer's laborer, and at several other kinds of toil requiring no special training. It was in Westminster, too, that a woman went so far as to seek enlistment in the Royal Artillery, and was detected by the doctor before whom she had to appear.

Another notorious case was that of a "Mr. Gillson," whose career came to an abrupt conclusion in the winter of 1905. She used to dress in the height of fashion, wearing a light overcoat of faultless fit and a silk hat, being generally accompanied by a toy terrier. She was a heavy smoker, and the only feminine trait was a passionate weakness for tea at almost every hour of the day. Her landlady's suspicions were aroused as to her sex by the way she used a needle whilst making a coat for her dog. Investigations showed that there were two totally distinct sides to this woman's extraordinary character. It was a wonderful instance in real life of a talented woman leading, almost against her will, a Jekyll and Hyde-like existence. When disguised as a man, resourceful and cunning, she victimized business men and perpetrated fraud upon fraud, and none would ever have suspected that in her home she was a tender-hearted, refined girl, an accomplished musician, a writer of sentimental verse and stories. "Gillson," was eventually arrested, however, for obtaining 21s. on false pretences, and it was whilst she was being conveyed to trial that she leaped from a train, and received injuries which proved fatal. Her real name, it transpired, was Edith Marion James.

A Family Custom.

Besides possessing literary attainments, Lady Tullibardine, the English authoress, is a musician of more than average ability, and her signature is to be found appended to several very beautiful songs. Like the marquess, she is intensely Scotch in sentiment, and when she was married, eleven years ago, a custom was observed which has been handed down in the family for many generations. When a Duchess of Atholl or Marchioness of Tullibardine enters Blair Castle for the first time she may not walk into the house, but must be carried over the threshold. The marchioness was duly carried by her husband, the marquess, and deposited in the hall amid the cheers of the retainers.

African Servants.

The "boy" servants at Nairobi, in Central Africa, seem to have reached the limit of incompetence. "I used to impress thoroughly on my own personal servant," writes an English resident, "that he must never hand me anything except on a tray. I hardly expected him, however, to bring my boots in on one, and carefully covered with an afternoon tea cloth! But, after all, these boys were raw natives, perhaps a year before running about with a spear attending to their cattle." A good many of them had not the faintest notion of what soap was, or how to use it. One very busy European mother told a boy to wash the child's face. He simply covered the child's face with soap and left it!

Crown King on May 24.

Sir George Reid, the Australian High Commissioner, speaking in London recently said: "If the coronation of His Majesty's is to take place on any date near that of Empire Day I certainly think it would be a most happy event if the great ceremonial was fixed for a day which is being more and more associated with the broader aspects of Empire and loyalty. As the years pass the significance of Empire Day increases rapidly. The Coronation, to which every subject of the King will look forward with intense interest, will assume additional significance if it takes place on Empire Day. And no one better understands the Empire than his present Majesty."

"Croppy."

So Major-General Sir Henry Ewart, who has served as Crown Equerry for the past sixteen years, and who has been made a baronet by the King, is known to his intimates. He has had a notable career as a soldier and, as becomes a Crown Equerry, is a capital horseman and whip. He has the entire control of the King's stables at Buckingham Palace. When His Majesty goes forth in state it is Sir Henry who stage-manages the equine part of the function. In his care too are the famous Hanoverian cream ponies that draw the state coach when the King opens Parliament.

Cousins on Thrones.

The number of cousins occupying thrones to-day is remarkable. King George is first-cousin of the German Emperor. Both these monarchs are first-cousins of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, the Duke of Hesse, the Czarina of Russia, the Queen of Spain, and the Crown Princesses of Sweden and Roumania. King George V., through his mother, is first-cousin of the Czar, the King of Norway, the Crown Princes of Denmark and the Hellenes. The Queen of Norway is the King's sister and a cousin of most of the other royal people named.

"I WILLINGLY GIVE THIS TESTIMONIAL

In Favor of "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

FOR THE BENEFIT OF OTHER SUFFERERS"

Spoken like a man! Mr. Paul Jones of Sarnia is proud to acknowledge the great debt he owes to this wonderful fruit medicine. He wants every sufferer in Canada to know what "Fruit-a-tives" did for him. H's reward comes in the gratitude of those who take his advice, use "Fruit-a-tives", and cure themselves.

SARNIA, ONT., Feb. 5th. 1910.

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives", in which Hon. John Costigan stated that he had been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and found they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly, as they have done me good.

I claim "Fruit-a-tives" are invaluable in every respect, and I willingly give this testimonial for the benefit of other sufferers."

PAUL J. JONES.

Mr. Jones is favorably known all over the district of Sarnia. He was in business there for years, and is now enjoying the fruits of a long and successful mercantile career. Every reader of this paper is at liberty to write Mr. Jones and find out for themselves that the above letter is genuine and was written to "Fruit-a-tives" voluntarily and solely with the idea of helping the sick.

The financial and social standing of those who have written letters in favor of "Fruit-a-tives" is the best guarantee that this famous fruit medicine is all that is claimed for it.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only true liver stimulant in the world because it is the only medicine made of fruit juices. By its use, the amount of bile is increased while the muscles are made stronger and more capable of emptying the bowels naturally. Salts of every kind, senna and cheap purgative pills have no action on the liver. They do not increase the secretion of bile by the liver, but their action is entirely due to irritating the delicate lining of the bowels. "Fruit-a-tives"—and "Fruit-a-tives" alone—can and will positively cure Constipation, Biliousness and Torpid Liver. In the case of Mr. Jones, the long standing Constipation had affected his digestion, causing catarrh of the stomach. As his bowels became more regular, the digestion improved. When the Constipation was cured the Indigestion, which was caused by the Constipation, was cured also.

"Fruit-a-tives" has proved its value and has made its way solely on merit. "Fruit-a-tives" is probably the best known, and most highly appreciated medicine in Canada. The sales of "Fruit-a-tives" are enormous and are increasing every day. The people realize that at last they have one remedy that will positively do all that is claimed for it—and they show their appreciation of this honest, reliable fruit medicine by using it themselves and recommending it to their friends.

"Fruit-a-tives" is one of the few medicines that may be taken day after day with only benefit to the health. If necessary, "Fruit-a-tives" could be taken for twenty years, because it contains only fruit juices and tonics—nature's natural remedies for all Stomach, Liver, Bowel, Kidney and Skin Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" is especially suited to women and children because of the pleasant taste and mild, gentle action of the fruit tablets.

If you are suffering as Mr. Jones did, take his advice and try "Fruit-a-tives". 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa

ORIGINATOR OF SPOONERISMS.

Head of New College, Oxford, Is Dr. Spooner.

One of the most celebrated men in England to-day is Dr. Spooner, head of New College, Oxford, who has given to the English language the term "Spoonerism."

It is doubtful, perhaps, if the quaint little doctor has perpetrated one of the verbal mixups to which his name has been given, but generations of undergraduates have exercised their ingenuity in fabricating examples. Most people at some time or other have unwittingly made a spoonerism, but the New College don is supposed to make them all day long.

A spoonerism consists of the transposition of the initial letters of two or more words in the same sentence. Some of the best known examples attributed to the head of New College are supposed to have been made at table or in the college chapel.

Once when he wanted some stewed figs he is said to have electrified a luncheon party by asking a lady to pass him the pigs' fleas. Those who know the doctor would understand at once that he was merely asking for "the figs, please."

At the same luncheon he is said to have asked his neighbor to have "some of this stink puff," pointing to an ornamental dish of pink jelly. In chapel it is recorded that he has read out the first line of the well known hymn which starts "From Greenland's icy mountains" as "From Iceland's greasy mountains," and has spoken of the wicked men whose words were "as ears and sparrows."

Once, when he was not officiating in the service, he was surprised to find some one occupying his pew in chapel and addressed him sternly with "Are you aware, sir, that you are occupewing my pie?"

One of the quaintest mixups put down to him is perhaps a phrase he once used in a sermon. Speaking of the vague, half formed wish so often experienced in the mind, he said, "We all know what it is to have a half warmed fish in us."

Late for dinner one night, he sidled into the room with the explanation that he had been "hatching a pasty snipe." Even an old friend would take a moment or two to translate this into "snatching a hasty pipe."

His poetical description of a gypsy encampment as "a tipsy gent pitched in a pot of grease" was even more complicated. Of course he meant "a gypsy tent pitched in a grot of peace." His description of his baggage to a railway porter as "two rags and a bug" was simpler.

There is something forced perhaps in his definition of a happy evening as reading quietly by the fireside, while his dear wife was "hitting the nose" of his little one.

Dr. Spooner is an albino with the weak sight characteristic of the type. He is also somewhat absentminded.

A Four-Legged Bird.

The crested hoactzin of British Guiana is the only survivor of a certain race of birds, most of which are now known only as fossils. The hoactzin inhabits the most secluded forests of South America, and its survival beyond its congeners is doubtless owing to its retiring habits and to the fact that it feeds on wild arum leaves, which gives its flesh a most offensive flavor, rendering it unfit for food.

The chief peculiarity of the hoactzin consists in the fact that when it is hatched it possesses four well-developed legs. The young birds leave the nest and climb about like monkeys over the adjoining limbs, and look more like tree-toads than birds.

The modification of the fore limbs begins at once after hatching, when the claws of the digits fall off and the whole claw-like hand begins to flatten and becomes wing-shaped. Feathers soon appear, and before full growth is reached not a vestige remains of the original character.

The adult birds not only have no claws upon their wings, but their thumbs even are so poorly developed that one would hardly suspect that in the nestlings we have the nearest approach to a quadruped found among existing birds.

Historic Doubles.

Those almost perfect doubles George Du Maurier and Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema were nearly indistinguishable. The story goes that a lady sitting beside Du Maurier at dinner started conversation by poohpoohing all idea of a resemblance.

"You know, Mr. Alma-Tadema, I think it's absurd to say that you and Mr. Du Maurier are so awfully alike. There's really no resemblance at all. Don't you agree with me?"

"Quite," was the polite answer; "but, you see, I happen to be Mr. Du Maurier."

Royal Rat Catcher.

The dignity and emoluments of the rat-catcher at Buckingham Palace are calculated to create envy among the unemployed. It is true that as a rat-catcher his pay is only $40 per annum. But he is also turncock, for which he receives $365 a year, together with a residence, rent free, situated in the very centre of the fashionable part of London, in close proximity to the parks, the Houses of Parliament, Trafalgar Square, and the residences of the nobility and gentry.

Shakespeare's Irishman.

An Englishman and an Irishman were having an argument on the subject of Shakespeare. "I defy you," said the former, "to find a single Irish character in the whole of his works."

"Well, I can give you two, at all events," replied the Irishman—"Miss O'Phelia and Corry O'Lanus."

He forgot Hamlet's intimate friend, who stood beside him while he was contemplating his uncle in devotion, and observed, "How could I do it, Pat, while he was praying?"

His Wish.

Mrs. Wildman—I tell you, Mr. Wildman, if you continue in your present life of extravagance you'll surely pay for it some day.

Mr. Wildman—I wish, my dear, that my creditors had the same faith in my good intentions.

A transformer built to test high voltage insulators in a German electric plant develops the enormous pressure of half a million volts across its terminals, the sound of the discharge being almost deafening.

NO. 7.

Says the Miller:

"One day coming home I looked through the kitchen window and saw our grocer's wife baking biscuits. Sure enough, there was a bag of 'CREAM OF THE WEST' flour, and the biscuits were just piping hot—made my mouth water.

"You bet I knew then how it was that grocer sold so much

'Cream of the West' Flour

He knows how good it is by the tasty things his wife makes with it, and he feels sure in recommending it.

"If every grocer would try his goods before selling them it would be a good thing."

TALES OF RAZORBACKS.

How Hogs of This Breed Got Down a Steep Hill.

The group on the porch was talking about razorback hogs, and the storekeeper was telling a story.

"There was a feller travelin' through here," he said. "He was a stranger in these parts. One day he come across a bunch o' hawgs that had big slits in their ears. He figgered at them slits. They was too big fer brands. What else could they be? After a bit a native come down the trail. 'Jess lookin' at them hawgs,' said the stranger. 'You was,' says the native. 'D'ye min' tellin' me what them big slits in their ears is fer?' said the stranger. 'Not at all,' says the native. 'Have you noticed these hills?' 'What d'ye mean?' 'Noticed how steep they is?' 'Yes, I have.' 'Waal,' says the native, 'that's it. We have to put them slits in the hawgs' ears so they kin stick their hind legs through 'em an' rough lock themselves down these hills to keep from killin' themselves.'"

There was a salvo of very hearty outdoor laughter at this, and Mr. Antwine stirred behind his newspaper.

"That remin's me of one they use to tell down on the Arkansas line," he said. "There was a feller goin' through there too. He saw a drove o' razorbacks carryin' on mighty queer. There was about twenty o' 'em, an' they acted like they was crazy. They would run fust to one tree an' then to another, tryin' to climb it. Then they would spin aroun' on their noses, crack their tails an' squeal in the most plaintive way you ever heard. The traveler watched them hawgs fer fifteen minutes, an' the more he saw o' 'em the more they juzzled him. Finally he went on through the woods till he come to a house. There was a man out in front. He was baskin' in the sun. 'Is them your hawgs up there in the hills?' the stranger asked. 'Yep,' says the native. At that the traveler stepped up an' looked his man in the eye. 'Say,' he said, 'what in the Sam Hill's the matter with them hawgs?' The native kin' o' half smiled. 'They does act queer, don't they?' he says. 'I should say they does.' 'Waal, it's this a-way,' said the native. 'We had a hard winter in here this time, an' there was no feed in the hills fer them hawgs. I had to let 'em have corn. Along late in the winter I tuk such a bad col' I couldn't holler pig-ooeey any more. I had to call 'em up by bittin' the corncrib with a ax handle, an' now,' he says, lookin' back up the hill, 'them dern woodpeckers is settin' 'em crazy.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Passing It On.

The clerk filled out the marriage license and handed it over.

"Thank you," said the young man.

"Hold on! That's $2."

"Two dollars!"

"Yes. Did you suppose we gave those things away?"

"I certainly did. Charging a man $2 for a sheet of paper that didn't cost the county more than a nickel at the outside is robbery. Have I got to pay it?"

"You'll pay it or you'll hand back that document."

"All right," said the young man, taking a bill out of his pocket, tendering it to the clerk and waiting for his change, "but I can tell you right now you ain't robbin' me. You're robbin' the preacher. He'll get just $2 less than I was goin' to give him."

Pocketing the change and tilting his hat back on his head, he stalked out of the office with the air of a man who had been imposed upon, but who knew how to get even.—Chicago Tribune.

The Cat Came Back.

Bacon—Did you ever try to lose a cat?

Egbert—Oh, yes. I hit upon a plan which I thought would work. I wrote a note, inclosing $10, and tied both about the cat's neck. The note read, "Finder may keep both the cat and the money."

"And how did it work?"

"The cat came back the next day with another note tied to its neck. The note read: 'Don't need the cat, but can use the money. Please send $10 more.'" —Yonkers Statesman.

Not to Be Fooled Twice.

"Johnnie, keep still and sit down and have your picture taken. Nothing will hurt you."

Afterward.

He was not great in any way,
  He did not do a noble deed
Nor lend a helping hand to aid
  A luckless creature in his need,

Yet he was missed far more than if
  Mankind was better for his ken,
Since, though his way led through the world,
  He never bored his fellow men.

DECAY AND DIRT.

These Seem to Be the Prevailing Conditions In China.

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honanfu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches, but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

At another stage in his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired. Their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is spilled may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

Blood Poisoning Proved Fatal to Mr. Joseph Demarsh.

As the result of an acute attack of blood poisoning, Mr. Joseph Demarsh passed away last evening at his late residence, Wilkins street. As stated in yesterday's issue, Mr. Demarsh, a few days ago, sustained a slight injury to his thumb whilst assisting in unloading some machinery at the wharf. Blood poisoning developed to such an alarming extent that medical aid was of no avail.

Deceased was well and favorably known in this city, where he had resided nearly all his life. He was born in the Township of Hungerford 45 years ago, and with his parents came to this city when a child. He was by occupation a plumber and also a machinist, having of late been employed at Marsh & Henthorne's foundry. His demise is sincerely regretted by his fellow workmen. Mr. Demarsh was a member of St. Michael's church, and was identified with the Catholic Order of Foresters. A wife, but no family survives. The other members of the family are the father, Mr. Jos. Demarsh, of this city; two brothers, Harry, of Detroit, and Allan of Minneapolis; four sisters, Mrs. John Meagher and Mrs. John Cox, of this city, Mrs. A. H. Wheatley, of London, Ont., and Mrs. F. A. Bourke, who resides in Minnesota. A peculiar feature of this sad case is the fact that Mrs. Demarsh is suffering from the same disease. Last evening one of her arms had swollen to a considerable extent, necessitating its being lanced by a physician.

Bull Charged Auto.

Fort Plain, N. Y., July 29.—Because he mistook a young bull for a peaceful cow, James E. Wendell, of Albany, a deputy state comptroller, has a damage suit on his hands, while his auto is out of commission. He was driving along the road with some friends when he discovered the animal in the road. He kept on at a high rate of speed, expecting to see the "cow" take to the bushes. Instead the bull charged madly at the auto and met it "head on." The front of the car was badly smashed and the bull's neck broken. The irate owner demanded that Wendell pay for the animal, claiming it would not have interferred with the auto if it had been running slowly. Wendell refused, and is now threatened with a lawsuit.

Got Other Jobs.

Kingston, July 29.—A number of the G. T. R. carters are working on the hay fields at Wolfe Island, during the scarcity of their work on account of the railway strike. Only a few of the men are working at the freight sheds and they are handling perishable goods.

Jeff Had Enough

New York Sun: The Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures now on exhibition at several local theatres, display the interesting fact that as soon as Referee Richard decided in favor of Johnson Jeffries got up unassisted and walked alone to his corner. The boilermaker at no time seemed to be bordering upon a state of unconsciousness, and in the opinion of veteran sporting men who have seen the films he was not knocked out. Jeffries wasn't counted out, and, from the way he proceeded to his corner he could have continued the fight. The impression prevails among those who have watched the pictures of the fight carefully that Jeffries knew when he had enough.

Johnson Picks Kaufman as Best White Pug.

New York, July 28.—When asked who he thought was the best white fighter among the present day pugilists, Jack Johnson replied: "Kaufman, in a long fight."

"Do you think you will ever fight Sam Langford?"

"I will if he puts up $20,000 as a side bet and some club wil offer a large enough purse."

"What does all this talk about you being afraid of Langford amount to?"

"Why, man, afraid of him? Did not I beat him so badly in Boston that I sent him to the hospital?"

"People seem to think he gave you a pretty hard fight up there and also say he knocked you down once."

"I don't see how they say he gave me a hard fight. Why, he's a little fellow. There's nothing to it. He would not have a look in. It gets me, though, how the papers come out and say that Langford gave me such a hard fight and declare he would stand a chance of licking me. As for being knocked down the only man who ever knocked me down was Joe Choyaski."

Girl Is Bitten By Snake in "Rat."

SMALL MOCCASIN NESTS IN HER HAIR AND RESENTS BEING DISTURBED.

Richmond, Va., July 28—Bitten several times by a small moccasin snake which had nested in her "rat" when she had laid that attraction off during the evening in a hammock in her front yard, Miss Mary Wood, of the West End, is reported to be in a serious condition.

The girl is a department store clerk. The day of the strange occurrence she went to work as usual. Her head shortly began to itch and pain her.

Miss Wood and another girl went to the dressing-room, where her hair was taken down. Several small red and swollen splotches were discovered on her scalp. Enduring the pain all day the girl went home at closing up time and told her mother of her trouble.

The hair was again taken down and drops of blood with more incisions were discovered. The mother then asked for the "rat" and taking it, began squeezing it, feeling something wriggle inside the "rat." Hastily tearing it to pieces, a six-inch moccasin dropped on the floor. The girl fainted at sight of the reptile and is now under the care of a physician.

Who Threw Stone?

Yesterday afternoon Harold Knight, a son of Mr. W. Knight, who resides on George street, was in bathing near Ald. Lott's dam, when he was struck on the head by a stone thrown by a party who was on shore. The result was that Harold sustained a nasty cut, which bled profusely. The affair was reported to the police who are making an effort to ascertain who threw the stones.

The Palace.

Anyone of last night's Palace patrons who did not feel amply repaid for the time spent watching the picture program, would be hard to please. Words of praise were heard on all sides, and the beautiful pictures certainly deserved all the nice things said.

The Courtroom Scene in one of the "Biographs" was alone worth going a distance to see, ask any who was there. The two best of last night's will be run again tonight, and a fine new one will be added, giving 3 full reels. Everyone a gem.

Excellent Bill at Griffin's Family Theatre

The Griffin management made a ten strike when they succeeded in engaging the Klein Bros. for this week. This popular juvenile team of entertainers, who made such a hit at Kingston the first part of this week. These children are without doubt, the best buck and wing dancers in the world. This act in itself should be sufficient to pack the Theatre.

Miss Marshall, the dainty soubrette will contribute to the rest of the vaudeville programme.

The very newest pictures have been secured for this week and in all three reels, three thousand five hundred feet of select pictures will be shown. The management of the Belleville Theatre are going to a great expense in securing the best vaudeville and pictures obtainable and the Theatre will undoubtedly be well patronized this week as the bill deserves.

OUTLOOK IS HOPEFUL

Settlement of the Strike Seems to Be in Sight.

President Hays Replying to Mayor Geary of Toronto Shows an Evident Desire to Bring Tie-Up to a Close—Strike Leaders Leave for Montreal, Evidently to Hold a Final Conference With Officials.

Toronto, July 30.—While there was nothing to be learned that was in anyway definite, a strong peace atmosphere seemed prevalent in the G.T.R. strike headquarters both in Toronto and Montreal yesterday.

At Montreal Hon. W. L. M. King, Minister of Labor, was in conference with Vice-President Murdock of the B. R. T., at the Windsor Hotel, where he had also previously conferred with Sir Fred. Borden, Minister of Militia. Thursday night the Labor Minister was in conference with Messrs. Hay and Fitzhugh.

Locally, the chief development was the departure for Montreal to meet Mr. King of the heads of the Order of Railway Conductors, and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. At the same time, there is still unexplained the reason for the coming here of the chiefs of the two powerful allied organizations, the firemen and the engineers.

A message last night to Mayor Geary from President Hays is also in a more pacific strain than the remarks attributed to the G.T.R. president the day before. It reads:

"Message received. Concur with you in wishing early settlement of existing difficulty, and everything possible will be done to bring about such result.

"In the meantime, combined effort will be made to give you service desired."

Vice-President James Murdock of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, in his reply early in the day, said:

"We hasten to assure you that we second your motion that nothing should be left undone to bring about a settlement. We are ready now, as we have been, to renew negotiations looking to a settlement, and we trust that the other principal in the controversy may accept the same view. If, however, the Grand Trunk Co. declines to accept an equitable and unprejudiced settlement of the questions in dispute, we trust that the public and the business interests of this country will think of and deal kindly with the contention of the Grand Trunk trainmen, who are only asking for the wages and conditions that have been conceded the men on more than fifty other railroads in the past few months without the necessity of a strike."

"We are leaving to-night by the C.P.R. at 10.15 for Montreal," said President Garretson of the O.R.C., speaking for himself and President Lee. "We will be accompanied by Vice-President S. N. Berry of Toronto.

"I am not prepared to say anything about our mission to Montreal," proceeded Mr. Garretson, but he left it to be inferred that he expected a decided change one way or another in the situation.

And while they would not be drawn out as regards what he thought of the future, a despatch from Cleveland, Ohio, said:

"President W. G. Lee of the B.R.T., telegraphed officials of the brotherhood at the national headquarters here yesterday, that he expects important developments in the Grand Trunk Railway strike situation in the next forty-eight hours. He is still in Toronto.

"It is rumored at headquarters that the switchmen at Chicago may go out. This move, it is said, would tie up the Grand Trunk's terminal business in Illinois."

Meanwhile, yesterday's freight movement report on the G.T.R. last night by Supt. W. H. Farrell was the best yet. In all 17 trains were said to have moved in and out of Toronto, and according to Mr Farrell, six trains were scheduled to leave Toronto today for different points.

Vice-President Berry, major-general of the local strikers, had reports yesterday from along the line at various points, showing that strike-breakers in large numbers were being persuaded out of the company's service in sympathy with the men. In Port Huron, Mich., he reports that thirty strike-breakers left the company's service to participate in breaking a street railway strike in Columbus, Ohio, because the Grand Trunk were "too cheap and did not pay enough."

"Professional strike-breakers!" commented Mr. Berry, "and these are a sample of the men that the company are inducing to take the positions of honorable citizens."

Angus McDermid, a teamster, who drank rat poison, mistaking it for water, died yesterday after terrible suffering. He had gone home on Tuesday feeling indisposed. Victims of Niagara.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 30.—At the Canadian landing of the Maid of the Mist, two bodies were taken from the river yesterday.

The torso of a man, with the legs missing, was discovered yesterday by William Thomas, mate of the steamer, who discovered the leg of a man at the landing Thursday. It is believed that the leg was a portion of the body found yesterday. The body is that of a man with dark brown hair, brown eyes, sandy moustache, upper teeth gone, with large gold filling in one of the lower teeth.

Late in the afternoon the body of Mme. Marie Clever, a prominent local woman, who committed suicide by going over the Falls on Monday, was found. Mme. Clever made two attempts to take her life Monday, first by turning the gas on in her handsome apartment in Third street.

Assaulted by Caretaker.

Toronto, July 30.—Charles R. Pepper, caretaker of the Peterkin Building, 152 Bay street, was remanded a week in the Police Court yesterday, where he was charged with assaulting James Sherman, who is in a serious condition at St. Michael's Hospital. He was arrested earlier in the morning after Sherman had been found on the sidewalk outside the building in convulsions. Pepper says he saw the man picking up a coil of copper wire in the building, and he says he got the man down and choked him until he signified a willingness to go out and did go out. Sherman had been given an order for the wire, but should have waited till someone turned up to give it to him.

RUPTURE

J. Y. EGAN, Specialist of Toronto

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Procrastination is the most common error of ruptured people. In most cases they do not realize the risk they are running. You may have been ruptured for some time and not noticed any change for better or worse. But, remember, no rupture stands still. Even if not getting larger the bowel is growing fast to the inside, and any day your ordinary truss is liable to slip while lifting or coughing and let more of the bowel escape. In such a case strangulated hernia may result in death. Many people come to me constipated, nervous, irritable, suffering from indigestion and constant colds. They seldom charge this to their rupture, but that is where their ill-health originates. A rupture strains the whole physical organism and is a constant nerve irritant, a breeding place for the germs of typhoid, and frequently causes rheumatism, paralysis and sterility. Your rupture cured will make you feel like a new being; your nerves will recover their normal tone and your rundown condition replaced by vigorous, joyous health. Act at once and remove the daily danger of death which, like a threatening thundercloud, hangs over the head of every ruptured person. Don't delay, to suffer and die. Let me help you live and enjoy life. What I have done for thousands in the past fifty years I can do for you to-day. Awaken to the fact what a cure means to you—viz., immediate security, comfort and a perfect physical condition. This is all yours to-day for the asking. Out-of-town patients can consult me and return home same day relieved of all rupture trouble permanently. No operation, pain or loss of time. Tear off free coupon now.

Free Consultation Coupon.

This coupon, upon presentation to J. Y. Egan, rupture specialist, 331 West King Street, Toronto, who will visit the towns (on dates mentioned below) will entitle the bearer to free consultation and examination of his or her case. Ask at hotel office for number of my consulting room. Note dates.
